Reorganizing Has Not Cut Personnel of Government

Many Shifts Made But Total Is Still The Same; Increased Efficiency Claimed

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Increased governmental efficiency claimed for the President's reorganization plans has involved practically no reduction in the number of Federal employes, it was disclosed yesterday.

A Post survey of all agencies affected by reorganization has revealed that personnel figures have increased in most cases, while curtailed employment in the rest is generally traceable to factors other than reorganization.

The "streamlined" structure of Government—instituted nearly five months ago—was designed, among other things, to increase efficiency, consolidate agencies and eliminate duplication of effort. These purposes are being slowly accomplished, it is maintained, but not at the expense of Federal employes.

Few Reductions Expected

Personnel officers seemed yesterday to be in general agreement that effects of the reorganization plans would be felt rather in carrying out policies than in size of personnel.

"Government employment is pretty well geared to the governmental program," said one. "I don't expect large reductions in personnel, but there will undoubtedly be some cuts due to overlapping."

He pointed out, however, that reorganization is "still in the planning stage in many agencies and I think it will be a year before we can see the full results of the new structure."

Of the three new administrative agencies established July 1, Federal Works alone reveals any material loss of personnel. Between June 30 and October 30, Civil Service Commission figures show that 5,315 employes have been dropped from WPA and 2,376 from PWA (the figures apply only to the administrative staff).

Part of WPA's loss is due to the fact that the National Youth Administration was taken from it, and the balance is attributable to restriction of the WPA program by Congress. The PWA, for which no new appropriations were made in this year's budget, is in process of liquidation.

Increases have been registered by the three other agencies in Federal Works: Public Buildings, Public Roads and the USHA. Federal Works Administrator John Carmody's new staff numbers 38.

Increase in FSA

In the Federal Security Agency, headed by Administrator Paul V. McNutt, practically every one of the component parts shows an increase in employment over June 30. McNutt's own office has 27 employes, while the NYA and the Social Security Board have registered gains of 588 and 881, respectively.

The NYA's increase is largely due to the necessity, since its separation from WPA, of setting up its own financial and employment divisions, while the SSB took over the great majority of the 702 employes of the defunct United States Employment Service.

The Office of Education, also in the Federal Security Agency, has gained 27 employes since June 30, but it absorbed over 50 from certain functions of the liquidated National Emergency Council. However, only two persons in the Office of Education actually lost their jobs because of reorganization.

The only other agencies in Federal Security, Public Health Service and the Civilian Conservation Corps, gained four and lost three employes, respectively.

Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones has added no personnel to his own staff. Only two of the seven agencies in Federal Loan have lost employes—the HOLC, which is slowly liquidating itself,

'Horse and Buggy' Traffic

Retimed Lights Would Relieve Congestion

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

Construction of grade separations at intersections and wide, high-speed highways—elevated or otherwise—is the ultimate answer to Washington's congestion problem, say officials.

It is generally agreed their point is well taken. Far-sighted traffic engineers have long offered this as a solution to the traffic problem in every major city.

But such projects take time and money. The motoring public, according to a cross section of opinion obtained by The Post, wants to know what can be done in the meantime.

Evidence that little has been done here—in so far as traffic lights are concerned—was encountered in another "test" trip conducted by The Post.

The trip covered a route used by thousands of homeward-bound motorists at 4:30 p. m.—from the heart of the business district to the Arlington Memorial Bridge into Virginia.

Time of Journey Doubled in Rush-Hour

Under normal conditions, the journey from Twelfth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest to the Virginia bridge consumed a minimum of six minutes. But at peak-traffic time, repeated trials failed to cover the distance under 15 minutes—and twice the time ran as high as 19 minutes.

Once trapped in the maelstrom of stalled autos, motorists must relinquish any hope of ever "making" the lights. The Post observer found his speed averaging between 6 and 8 miles an hour. Traffic lights along the route are timed for speeds up to 25 miles an hour.

From Twelfth street to the bridge, The Post car was stopped 14 times for red lights and traffic jams. The route selected traversed Pennsylvania avenue to Fifteenth street, back of the White House, through a portion of Potomac Park, into Constitution avenue and to the bridge.

One of Washington's outstanding examples of what can be done to move mass traffic swiftly from the downtown congested area is Thirteenth street northwest.

From Logan circle north on this street, traffic authorities have proved conclusively that traffic lights can be timed to meet peak loads of vehicles.

Thirteenth street, one way during rush hours, is now a safe high speed boulevard over which motorists may progress with a minimum of wasted time. Lights on the street also have been geared to meet mass transportation requirements in the morning rush hours.

But even with present improvements, Thirteenth street

Woman Leaps To Death From Calvert Bridge

Smiled as She Dove Into Valley, Far Below, Onlooker Relates

Helen Hudson Jones, 36, of Baden, Md., smiled brightly on Calvert Street Bridge yesterday, then stepped off to her death on the concrete roadway 140 feet below.

She was identified at the District Morgue by a niece, Mrs. Claire S. Luckey, of 1441 Spring road northwest. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Only one person could tell police that he saw the leap. And what he saw was only the quick impression of a smiling woman and then a split-second of action as she went over the 4-foot rail.

"If it all hadn't been so quick I might have stopped her," said A. Sluman, an interior decorator, of 1014 Eighth street.

Police at first identified her tentatively through a Public Library card in her pocketbook which gave as her address 2800 Thirteenth street northwest, where police later determined a sister lived. At that address residents said the dead woman had suffered from serious heart trouble and that she had a 6-year-old daughter.

Later police learned the woman had been treated at Garfield Hospital in October for slashes on her wrists.

Trade Group Votes Faith in Traffic Chiefs

Post Series Assailed And Praised; Greater Expenditure Proposed

The current series of Washington Post articles on the District's traffic-light system was alternately praised and assailed yesterday in heated discussion at a meeting of the Board of Trade traffic committee.

Col. L. C. Crawford, former chairman of the committee, charged the stories are being written "solely from the viewpoint of the motorist, with no regard for pedestrians or mass transportation systems."

Describing statements in yesterday's series story as "opinions and not facts, Crawford urged the committee to adopt a vote of confidence in Washington traffic officials.

"Our traffic officials," said Crawford, "are doing the best job they can under existing conditions and with the amount of money available."

At this point, John Victory, another member of the committee, attacked Crawford's "vote of confidence" proposal, contending there is "ample need for improvement of Washington's traffic system."

"We aren't getting anywhere by just adopting a vote of confidence in our officials," said Victory. "Everyone knows we need improvements and I suggest we recommend more money be made available for necessary projects."

After considerable debate, the committee adopted both motions—

Union Wage Demands Refused, Hollywood Faces Strike Today

By the United Press

Hollywood, Nov. 24.—A general strike throughout the motion picture industry was threatened tonight by collapse of wage negotiations between film producers and 27 American Federation of Labor unions.

The producers refused to grant the 35,000 union members a 10 per cent wage increase and informed the unions such a raise was out of the question, "due to the necessity of complete readjustment in the industry."

The union negotiators held a quick conference and said:

"In view of the deadlock our chairman has advised the producers that unless our demands are met by tomorrow the general strike throughout the motion picture industry will be called."

The statement was signed by William Bioff, western head of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes.

"They contend the industry needs time for readjustment," the union statement said. "We feel that the underpaid workers should get that increase now"

In the conference, the unions demanded that all technical employes in the movies be granted the same increase that already had been given to the I. A. T. S. E.

Star actors and actresses were not affected, except indirectly should the 20 studios close their doors to all workers while the unions are on strike.

While the producers and unionists were locked in a conference, it was learned that Will Hayes, czar of the film industry, planned to leave Chicago tonight for Hollywood, presumably in an effort to prevent a ruinous strike.

Bioff hurried to union headquarters to confer with other labor leaders in the collapse of negotiations after he was arrested on a pandering charge and released.

D. C. Chest Called Model For Nation

'Moral Failure' of Country-wide Drive Is Forecast if Capital Falls Behind Mark

The Nation's Capital, still $223,195 behind its Community Chest goal of $2,000,000, was urged yesterday not to "let the rest of the country down" by Allen T. Burns, vice president of the national organization of community chests and councils.

Other cities, many of which already have reached or passed their goals, Burns said, naturally look to Washington for leadership in Community Chest as in other matters. Visiting local Chest headquarters at the Willard Hotel, he said other communities accept Washington as an example of what the ideal community should be and that a Chest failure here this year would amount to a "moral failure" of the entire Chest movement.

"Surely," he said, "what so many other cities have already attained is not impossible in the Nation's Capital. Approximately 5 per cent more than was raised last year is all that your Chest is asking."

Pepco Sum Raised

Among pledges for $2,693.25 received yesterday was an addition of $2,000 to the original pledge of $16,050 by the Potomac Electric Power Co., bringing its total pledges to $18,050. From the suburban unit came 314 new pledges totaling $693.25 and bringing pledges garnered by that unit to 4,117, amounting to $32,476.35.

In four more days of the six-day extension since the campaign officially closed last Wednesday, Chest canvassers are faced with the problem of collecting 12 per cent of the total set as a goal. Scattered returns since the drive was to have closed have not yet been audited but it was not expected they would greatly alter the amount yet to be raised.

3 Agencies to Broadcast

Three Chest agencies will go on the air over WJSV between now and Tuesday night, when the extension will come to its end. Barney Neighborhood House will broadcast today from 2:15 to 2:30 p. m.; St. Anna's Home for the Aged, Monday from 3:35 to 3:45 p. m., and St. Ann's Infant Asylum, Tuesday from 3:30 to 3:45 p. m.

Chest headquarters reported yesterday that an elderly retired Government worker and his wife brought their gift personally to the Willard yesterday for fear they would be missed by canvassers. They were determined, they said, not to be overlooked, and were moved as well by sympathy for volunteers who have found difficulty in reaching givers.

Some 17,000 citizens who contributed last year are missing from this year's list of givers, Chest officials said. They added it was hoped many of these would be reached before the drive ends.

Roosevelt Forecasts Defense Tax

U. S. Needs to Raise Half Billion More, He Says, Suggesting Pay-as-You-Go Basis

By the Associated Press

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 24.—A half billion dollar addition to the bill for national defense, possibly financed by a special new tax, was forecast at a Presidential press conference today.

President Roosevelt asserted such a tax, coupled with a reduction of the Government's budget for the year starting next July 1 and continuation of an upward trend in Federal revenue, might be instrumental in halving the deficit.

Nothing has been decided about a new levy for defense, the President said, adding that he thought the people should study the question whether emergency expenditures for defense should be met by borrowing or whether the program should be put on a pay-as-you-go basis.

Would Exceed Two Billion

Undoubtedly, the Chief Executive declared, more money must be spent for defenses because of the present world situation. He said this year's sum would have to be boosted by about $500,000,000, and that the new total would be less than $2,300,000,000 but in excess of $2,000,000,000.

A thing the country ought to understand and think about, he said, is this:

If the money were borrowed, additional taxes would be unnecessary; a pay-as-you-go basis would require some form of new national defense taxes.

Reporters sought unsuccessfully to get the President's views on the form such taxes might take and the implications of imposing new taxes in an election year—a step which Congressmen always have shown a reluctance to take.

Matter of Principle

Mr. Roosevelt said that he was discussing principles and not a matter of dollars and cents or politics.

With his wife beside him, the Chief Executive drove down to a cottage occupied by reporters at the Warm Springs Foundation and held his press conference by the side of a dusty road.

He touched on such unrelated subjects as gold mining in Georgia and a decision to let the American Ambassadors in London and Brussels make a quick trip home for the Christmas holiday.

And he disclosed that the War Resources Board, set up last August to help the Army and Navy Munitions Board formulate plans for industrial mobilization in event of a major war, had been disbanded after submitting a report.

In a letter to members of the resources board, the President accepted their offer to continue to assist the munitions board in an

Police Ride the Romany Trail After Gypsy 'Blesses' Visitor

Eleven gypsy women stood glumly in the police line-up at the Women's Bureau, two with babies in their arms, and wondered what would happen next. A 16-year-old dark-eyed beauty was at the Receiving Home at the same time, and nine men at the First Precinct Station protested innocence in a $60 theft.

From five dark, curtained rooms a stone's throw from the police station Detective Roy Blick had brought out all the precinct's Gypsy population.

A visitor from Puerto Rico had been to one of them during the day to have his fortune told and his money "blessed;" but when the magic passes and incantations ended, he found the "blessed" money had disappeared.

Their white teeth flashing and gold gleaming in their ears, the gypsy women protested their honesty. A few weeks ago they came to Washington, to rest until the spring carnival season, and tell fortunes for a living. But four were charged with telling fortunes without a license, and all were questioned, fingerprinted, and photographed.

The Puerto Rican victim was unable to say which of the bright-skirted women he had trusted with his fortune or where he had been when he met his misfortune. So police raided in the first block of H street northwest, the 300 block of G street, the 400 and 800 blocks of Ninth street and the 900 block of Eleventh street northwest.

CAA Proposes Ring of Six Airports Around Washington

Gravelly Point and Bolling Field Would Be Hub of Wheel

By Barry Sullivan.
Post Staff Writer

A ring of six airports to assure the Capital all-weather flying facilities for military, naval and civil planes is envisioned by the Civil Aeronautics Authority for the near future, it was learned yesterday.

The far-reaching plan, which would make the new Gravelly Point Airport and Bolling Field the hub of a proposed wheel of ports, is already worked out by the C. A. A., and President Roosevelt may request a preliminary estimate in the forthcoming budget.

Under the plan, the first outlying terminal would be located either at Camp Springs, Md., or near Fort George G. Meade, Md.

The proposal calls for use of the first supplemental terminal primarily as a military field which could also serve as a secondary civil airport, it was pointed out.

When Gravelly Point was recommended as the site for a national airport, aeronautical officials emphasized the need for a supplementary landing field on hills above the river fog-line.

Torpedo Exploit

Berlin, Nov. 24.—The German army high command tonight confirmed the New York Times report of the torpedoing of the British light cruiser Belfast. The German U-boat which fired the torpedoes was said to have reported inflicting "serious damage to a British cruiser of the Southampton class in the Firth of Forth."

The New York Times is, therefore, probably the first newspaper to be mentioned by name in any German army communique.

[London official announcements also confirm the New York Times report of the attack on the Belfast which was published exclusively in Washington Wednesday by The Post—Editor's note.]

[The Royal navy has lost in the 83 days of the war eight warships totaling 58,692 tons, and at least 1,499 officers and men, a United Press compilation shows. In addition, three crack cruisers and the training ship Iron Duke, a former capital ship, have been damaged. These ships add up to an additional 51,000 tons or a total of 109,792 tons sunk or immobilized for immediate service.

286,000 Tons of Merchantmen

[The statistics are based on official British announcements.

[In the same period 286,563 tons of British merchant ships have been sunk. France lost 48,500 tons, making the total merchant tonnage lost by the Allies 335,156.

[The German high command claims the British navy's losses have been even heavier. The tonnage of the ships listed by Germany is 200,256 of fighting ships.

[Somewhere between the admitted British loss of 109,792 tons sunk or damaged and the German claim of 200,256 tons immobilized lies the real figure.]

[The British admiralty said it had no information on reports that the 10,000-ton German pocket battleship Deutschland had been captured. An unconfirmed International News Service dispatch from London reported the Deutschland had been captured somewhere in the Atlantic.]

London, Nov. 24.—The British cruiser Belfast of 10,000 tons, not two years off the stocks, has been damaged off May Island at the outer entrance of the Firth of Forth by a mine or a torpedo, according to an admiralty announcement tonight. Twenty men were injured when the damage occurred, which was November 21, the announcement said.

Apparently the Belfast was seen steaming down the firth with other warships, and later seen returning in a damaged condition, but able to reach port under her own steam.

The admiralty made no comment on the German claim that the commander of the submarine, which damaged the vessel had returned to port.

Dutch Escaped By 4 Hours, Paris Is Told

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Paris, Nov. 24.—A story is published in the French press today purporting to give reasons for and circumstances under which Fuehrer Hitler countermanded an offensive against the Netherlands.

The decision to invade the Netherlands is stated to have been made by Hitler early in November and to have been fixed for 6 o'clock the morning of November 12.

At 2 o'clock that morning, just four hours before the zero hour, Hitler is said to have telegraphed orders calling off the offensive.

The reason for the sudden change is reported to have been a protest by the army commanders, headed by Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, who are said to have declared to the Nazi leader the morning of November 11 that they could not accept responsibility for the outcome of such a battle, in view of information making it certain Belgium would intervene.

The Paris papers also say Hitler called off a projected invasion of Switzerland, which was to have been made in the neighborhood of Basel at the same time, as part of the same plan, with the object of preventing French forces from hastening to the north.

In expectation of such an attack, the reports continue, Swiss troops

Japan Moves For Trade Pact With Russia

Cabinet Approves Plan For Negotiations to Open Soon at Moscow

By Hugh Byas
Copyright by New York Times.

Tokyo, Nov. 24.—Partly by luck, but mainly by knowing exactly what she wants, Japan now is in a position to ask Britain and France whether they will draw her back toward her old friendship with Britain or allow her to be linked even temporarily with Nazism and Bolshevism.

It was officially announced today that Japan and Russia were opening negotiations in Moscow for a trade treaty. While negotiating in Moscow the Japanese government will be eyeing London. It would prefer an understanding, with Britain's doubtful friendship, but Japan's international relations are dictated by the necessity of attaining her objectives in China before the end of the European war exposes her to the risk of combined pressure from the United States and Britain.

Pending the negotiations in Moscow, with unspoken implication that more than a trade treaty may be broached, Japan warns Britain that the price of Japan's friendship is acceptance of the "new order" in China.

Kuhn's 'Golden Angel' Tells Of Shipboard Romance

By Martin Kane
United Press Staff Writer.

New York, Nov. 24.—Fritz Kuhn's "golden angel," a winsome blonde divorcee, turned cold blue eyes upon the fun-loving fuehrer at his embezzlement trial today and confirmed his forced admission that he had lied to her and to the blue ribbon jury before which he is on trial.

The national leader of the German-American Bund, who later scored a substantial victory in having half the counts of his indictment dismissed by Judge James Wallace, glared, frowned and flushed as Mrs. Florence Camp recounted the shipboard romance which led to her divorce in the expectation that Kuhn would marry her.

She identified with one swift, contemptuous glance the first love note she had received from Kuhn when they were fellow passengers aboard the steamer Westernland, bound for Germany. Kuhn had testified he wrote the note, which contained a passionate proposal of marriage, after a "big party." She also identified a $240 ring she said he gave her, but which Kuhn said he never bought.

It was obvious to spectators that whatever love may once have existed between the witness and the defendant had expired when Mrs. Camp learned the fuehrer was a married man with two children and Kuhn learned that his "beautiful golden angel" had turned his impassioned writings over to the prosecution.

Mrs. Camp looked at Kuhn only once, to identify him, then turned her eyes coldly away. In the corridor, before she testified, Kuhn turned his back on her.

The tiny blonde, a picture of saucy ease in a black hat, skunk jacket and black crepe frock with bustle, related her meetings with Kuhn on

'Figures Don't Lie,' Hull Tells Critics of Pacts

But 'Liars Figure,' He Holds, Declaring Trade Treaties Benefit U. S.

Secretary of State Hull, fresh from a Georgia vacation, yesterday took up vigorously the challenge of opponents of his reciprocal trade agreement program.

Making use of the old saying that "while figures don't lie, liars do figure," he served notice he would expect an opportunity to reply to critics in full discussion in advance of any congressional decision affecting the system.

Thus was laid the base for a possibly far-reaching battle through the 1940 election campaign.

With numerous members of Congress, both Democratic and Republican, attacking the program as partial to industry at the expense of agriculture, a fight over extension of the trade program act after its scheduled expiration next June has appeared inevitable.

Hull declared at his press conference yesterday that he did not believe the most unscrupulous lobbyist in Washington would claim that any of the 22 reciprocal agreements now in effect had materially hurt anybody.

He charged there had been reckless discussion of the agreements and a disposition, intentionally or unintentionally, to misrepresent or misconstrue basic features of the plan.

Replying to an assertion that the program had been advanced without regard for the employment situation in America, he said the most effective answer was found in a comparison with the effects of the Smoot-Hawley tariffs over a two-year period. He charged that 10,000,000 to 12,000,000 wage earners had lost their jobs under that tariff law, which, he said, sarcastically had guaranteed unmeasured prosperity to farmers, labor and businessmen through the indefinite future.

He termed the program the chief cornerstone of world peace.

All reciprocal trade items on which there had been United States tariff reductions has been microscopically examined, he said, adding that most of the items imported were not competitive with the products of domestic producers. Mentioned specifically were coffee, rubber, tin and tea, which he said were not produced or were produced in insufficient quantities in the United States.

The entire policy, he continued, was developed to meet an extreme economic condition. Then he cited increased farm income, saying that between 1933 and 1938 the country's income from marketing crops increased by $716,000,000 and that from sale of livestock and livestock products rose by $1,574,000,000.

Britain Cancels Concessions to U. S. on Trade

By Walter Fitzmaurice

Wholesale cancellations by Great Britain on trade concessions granted the United States in the Anglo-American reciprocal trade agreement of 1937 were disclosed yesterday.

The first official analysis of the effect of Britain's wartime economy upon the 300-odd items covered by the agreement revealed import embargoes clamped on 19, commonly controls on 27 and import licenses on 42.

Lumped together, the 88 items accounted for $260,808,000 of the goods the United States sold the United Kingdom in 1936, before the reciprocal schedules went into effect.

Embargoed goods lose altogether the advantages they derived from reciprocal tariff reductions and quotas which regulated their entry into Britain in competition with empire goods.

Goods subject to license imports may be shut out of the British market at any time the war ministry decides their importation is unnecessary to prosecution of the war, officials said.

Products of the commodity control list may be admitted in greater or lesser quantities, at higher or lower tariffs, in accordance with British requirements.

Officials said the State Department had interposed "friendly but vehement" objections against each addition to the embargo list. They said the department will persist in its remonstrances in the hope the list will shorten as the war goes on.

Volume of British war orders, so far scarcely tapped, soon will afford compensation for losses to American manufacturers and farmers, swelling British purchases to record heights, officials asserted.

Principal items on the embargo list and the value in which they were exported to the United Kingdom in 1936 follow:

Automobiles, $8,596,000; fresh apples, $7,330,000; fresh pears, $3,426,000; canned asparagus, sweet corn and tomato juice, $404,000; musical instruments, $328,000; toilet preparations, $165,000; cash registers, $199,000 and vacuum cleaners, $230,000.

Items of lesser export value included soaps, athletic goods, hand bags, pecans and laundering machines. Total embargoed items accounted for $21,220,000 of Britain's American purchases in 1936.

Items subject to commodity control, and their 1936 export volume include:

Timber, $16,651,000; Wheat, $8,512,000; corn, $153,000; cornstarch, $507,000; feedstuffs, $483,000; hams and bacon, $5,466,000; frozen pork, $207,000; pig tongues, $2,248,000; sausage casings, $2,410,000; veal, $7,408,000; lard, $559,000; oleomargarine, $559,000; dried fruits, $5,649,000; canned salmon, $6,352,000, and leather, $2,064,000.

Tobacco, of which Britain purchased $86,447,000 in 1936, apparently is also on the control list. A British treasury decree has disclosed it will make available $25,000,000 for this year's purchases, in place of the $75,000,000 contracted for.

Most important item under control is cotton, the 1936 British purchase having been $86,447,000. Total 1936 exports of all controlled commodities was $221,439,000.

Items subject to license and on all of which licenses so far are being issued include orange and grapefruit juices, honey, canned beans, accounting machines, farm tractors, electric household appliances, pneumatic tools, outboard motors, gasoline pumps, textile machinery, hardwood flooring, varnishes, hides and skins.

Mrs. Roosevelt Denies Reds Dominate Youth Congress

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 25.—A debate by mail between Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and a youth movement leader over whether the American Youth Congress is Communist-controlled was climaxed today with the latter's expressed desire to appear before the Dies committee and his "hope" that the President's wife would "appear in opposition to me."

Alfred M. Lilienthal, vice chairman of the provisional committee for American youth, made public the correspondence between him and Mrs. Roosevelt, in which he contended the congress was influenced by communism—a contention denied by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Lilienthal's group was formed last summer by members who withdrew from the world youth convention here.

In a letter dated October 16, Lilienthal asked Mrs. Roosevelt five questions:

"1. Why did the Youth Congress consistently condemn fascism and refuse to take a stand against communism, even defeating on four occasions last July, a resolution to that effect?

"2. Though you were also scheduled to speak, why did Mayor LaGuardia and Edouard Benes, former President of Czecho-Slovakia, fail to appear and address the congress? Is it not apparent that the congress refusal to act against communism led them to so act?

"3. What kind of an organization, in order to bring pressure in behalf of a half a billion dollar youth act, resorts to a disorderly sit-down strike before the White House? You recall this incident in 1937 which resulted in the arrest of William Hinckley, who was chairman of the congress and one of your guests at tea?

"4. How can you explain the fact that much of the literature is printed by the press which occupies space jointly with the Daily Worker and which prints most of the communist literature?

"5. How can you reconcile the glowing references to the work and accomplishments of the youth congress made by leading communists both in this country and abroad, . . . ?"

Mrs. Roosevelt's reply, as released by Lilienthal, dated October 24 said:

"My dear Mr. Lilienthal:

"I have your letter and I regret to say I can not agree with you. I consider that the American Youth Congress did condemn all the 'isms' and declare themselves for democracy. The creed they adopted states this very definitely . . .

"My answers to the questions which you have listed are:

"1. The resolution passed by the youth congress was their own and I consider it better than yours.

"2. I do not agree with you.

"3. There was no disorder and Hinckley was arrested through a misapprehension and over-zealousness.

"4. Because they have little money and this is a cheaper way.

"5. It is quite easy to reconcile, because it helps them, but it is not true.

"I have known many of these young people and have taken the time and trouble to find out for myself what they believe in and what they stand for and have not formed my opinion from hearsay or newspapers. I am absolutely convinced that the leaders are 100 per cent for our democracy."

Cargo Checks Aid Shippers, Lothian Says

Inspection in U. S. Will Spur Passage, British Envoy Holds

By the Associated Press

The British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, declared today that Great Britain's navicert system was "designed to ease neutral commerce by facilitating the belligerent rights of the Allies."

In an interview at the embassy, the ambassador told reporters that while "the navicert does not guarantee free passage through the contraband control, it will definitely facilitate such passage."

(The term "navicert" was adopted by British officialdom as a contraction of "naval certificate" to cover a form of commercial passport" for cargoes that otherwise might be interfered with by blockade warships.)

Under the program, effective December 1, American exporters to European neutrals may obtain certificates from British consulates showing that their shipments are not objectionable to Great Britain under ordinary conditions, exports covered by navicerts would not be subject to seizure or earch by the British. Such shipments would be subject to seizure if there was reason to believe they might be transshipped to Germany.

Lothian declared that the system "was due to the perspicacity of an American, Mr. (Robert P.) Skinner, who, during the last war, was consul general in London.

"He pointed out that exporters wished to know beforehand whether there was at the time of shipment any objection on the part of the Allied contraband control to any particular consignment of goods."

The British Embassy made public the form of the navicerts, which they said would cost less than $10 for each shipment. Application blanks require information regarding the name and residence of the shipper, the nature and quantity of the shipment, the name and address of the consignee, and the nationality of the vessel on which the shipment is to be transported.

Officials said that shipping companies could not obtain navicerts covering an entire cargo. They pointed out, however, that shipping lines could, as they did in the World War, refuse to accept cargoes which were not fully navicerted.

Ruth Simms Urges G.O.P. to Name Dewey

Says He Combines Drive of Youth With Experience, Integrity

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, Nov. 24.—Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick Simms, former Representative in Congress from Illinois, today made her first speech in Thomas E. Dewey's preliminary campaign for the Republican Presidential nomination.

"Tom Dewey," she told the Massachusetts Women's Republican Club, "is that rare phenomenon that occurs once in a generation—a young man with all the courage and strength and drive that belong only to youth, and with the maturity of judgment and soundness of mind that usually are not acquired until well past the 40 mark."

Denver, Nov. 24 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft, Ohio Republican, predicted today "Congress will be forced to increase the debt limit, now set by statute, or resort to inflation."

"The National Administration and Democratic leaders are doing everything in their power to postpone a showdown on the present Government economic condition until after the 1940 election, so that the public interest will not be concentrated on the seriousness of the situation," Taft said in an interview.

Socialists to Meet Dec. 9

Milwaukee, Nov. 24 (AP).—The Socialist Party's national executive committee will convene here December 9-11 to discuss the Socialist attitude toward a national Farmer-Labor Party, it was announced today.

The committee is composed of 15 delegates including Norman Thomas, of New York, sometimes Socialist candidate for President; Dr. Harry W. Laidler, New York city councilman and Prof. Maynard C. Krueger, of the University of Chicago.

Ickes Requests Data on Power Plant Needs

Calls Industry's Chiefs To Conference: New Pump Priming Seen

By Felix Cotten

Secretary of the Interior Ickes arranged yesterday for a series of conferences with about 50 operating power companies with a view to fomulating a power expansion program adequate to meet future peacetime and national defense needs.

Industrial demands for power have outrun previous forecasts. One object of the conferences is to explore future demands in the event of a continued industrial upturn.

Ickes, acting as chairman of the National Power Policy Committee, in the letter of invitation, asked the companies to submit in advance detailed information on expansion plans, including building of transmission lines, capacity, peak loads, and related data.

The information is intended to provide the committee with a picture of the present and past condition of utility operating plants and their future capacity prospects.

Federal Aid Discussed

There has been a good deal of speculation from time to time over a possible construction program for power companies. Outlays in such a program, according to some calculations, might run into the billions of dollars, but many power officials have said that no such addition to plant is needed.

Administration sources have discussed recently a possible plant expansion program which power companies would carry out with Government aid. The idea is similar to proposals for Government aid to railroads in making equipment purchases.

Some Administration economists, in casting about for new means to keep business going after the year-end holidays, have suggested that a power expansion program might provide the answer.

Industrial production, Administration economists believe, will continue to improve to some extent until the end of the year. Thereafter, a reaction is expected by some. Some forecasters think the reaction may wipe out the fall business gains, others believe it will be slight.

To Begin December 5

Expectation is that the Federal Reserve Board industrial production index will rise to 128 or 130 before the end of the year. This would be better than the 1929 peak; in fact, an all-time high, but there is not as yet a widespread condition of prosperity such as existed in 1929, experts point out.

The first of the power conferences, all of which will be held in Washington, will start December 5.

Each meeting will concern itself with a specific area. The conferences will deal chiefly with the industrial region north and east of the Mississippi River.

Ickes expressed the hope that the conferences would facilitate a meeting of minds as to the needs of the particular sections under consideration, and the extent to which the operating systems themselves are in a position to undertake to meet such demands.

"The committee," he said, "feels that the Government and the power industry have a common interest in these problems and is anxious to work out its plans in cooperation with you."

Sen. King Believes Duce Could Bring Peace to Europe

By the Associated Press

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, expressed the opinion yesterday that if Benito Mussolini would assume the leadership of a peace movement he probably could end the European war.

"Mussolini could form a powerful bloc," King said, "by bringing in the Balkan states, the Scandinavian countries, Belgium, the Netherlands, Switzerland and other nations that want peace."

Communist Leader Surrenders to Police

New York, Nov. 24.—Robert Wiener, national treasurer of the Communist Party in the United State and president of the International Workers' Order, presented himself at the United States courthouse today and was released in $2,000 bail as a material witness in the investigation of an alleged Communist passport mill.

Through his attorney, Joseph R. Brodsky, Wiener complained that a warrant for his arrest was issued before authorities had even made inquiry at the most logical place to look for him—Communist headquarters at 35 East Twelfth street. He denied he had attempted to hide.

Communists Plan to Sabotage Allies' War Orders, Says Dies

Chairman Dies Puts Over His Point to Reporters

Wave of Strikes May Be Expected, He Asserts; Continuance of Inquiry Up to Public, Says Chairman, Ready to Reopen Hearings

By the Associated Press

Chairman Dies, of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, predicted yesterday "a series of strikes and sabotage" if Communist activities in the United States are not exposed fully and quickly.

At a press conference, Dies repeated his charge that the Communist Party was an agent of Moscow and proposed that the United States sever relations with Russia unless that nation abides by the agreement which led to its recognition in 1933. The agreement pledged the Soviets not to interfere in internal affairs of this country.

"In view of the facts we've got," Dies said, "we ought to declare that Soviet Russia has violated that pact and unless we can get assurances that it won't happen again, we ought to sever relations entirely."

Dies said that Russia had broken the compact by "conspiring to break the passport laws," sending secret police agents to the United States and "being a party to" the theft of industrial and military secrets which were taken to Russia.

The plan of the party is to stop shipments of war materials to the Allies," he went on. "Unless those people are exposed, we're going to have a series of strikes and sabotage not connected in any manner with improving labor conditions."

Just back from a 12-day mid-Western tour, Dies spoke of his committee's future, next week's hearing, and a desire to get out of the investigation if possible. He also referred to his previous complaints that the Federal Government had failed to help his work.

"I'm worn out," he said. "I'm tired. If I could get out honorably, I'd get out tomorrow because it's a headache from beginning to end, but it's a thing that's got to be done and I'm going to stick with it until they (the Administration) take the responsibility for killing it or contributing to it."

Dies expressed, too, a hope that a series of mass meetings would be held over the country to develop a "crusade of real Americanism." He said he would speak at such a meeting in Madison Square Garden, New York City, next week and outline "an Americanism program for this country."

The question of whether the committee should be continued, he said, he would leave to the people. The committee's authority expires January 3.

Asserting that the committee has not yet heard all available witnesses, Dies said that next year's inquiry, if ordered by the House, would require between $200,000 and $300,000, "providing Government agencies continue to withhold such help as attorneys and investigators." With full cooperation, he estimated that $50,000 would be enough.

Dies announced that a sub-committee headed by Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama, would open hearings here Monday on communism in colleges and universities.

Grange Upholds Farm Subsidies

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 24.—The National Grange urged today that Federal benefit payments to farmers be continued until a permanent agricultural program had been established.

Delegates at the closing session of the seventy-first annual convention adopted a committee report which held Federal aid justifiable until agriculture was accorded a bigger share of the national income.

The report asked adjustments in taxation, interest charges, wage levels and transportation rates to "equalize existing inequalities" for agriculture and proposed an emergency and a long-time farm program.

Curtis Publishing Withdraws Plans

Philadelphia, Nov. 24 (AP).—Directors of the Curtis Publishing Co. withdrew today a proposed plan for recapitalization and canceled a call for a special meeting of stockholders December 6.

The directors said that the recapitalization plan, which called for exchange of two-thirds of the present $7 preferred stock for a new $4.50 prior preferred stock on a share-for-share basis, had been offered after preliminary inquiries indicated that holders of substantial blocks of preferred stock "would welcome the opportunity to make such an exchange. While the proxies received to date from preferred stockholders are running in favor of the plan," the board announced, "nevertheless the plan is receiving adverse but constructive criticism from a substantial group."

Third-Term Talk Stirred Anew As President Dedicates Center

Warm Springs Women's Club Sings, 'Yes, the Nation Needs a Leader Just Like You;' Roosevelt Drops New Postoffice Hint

By Douglas B. Cornell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 24.—A third-term talk ran like a thread through ceremonies at which President Roosevelt dedicated the village community center here today.

What it all meant, if anything, was not quite clear. Mr. Roosevelt himself, who has joshed reporters several times lately about "biting" at chances to speculate about a third term, gave no definite hint today about his intentions.

He merely remarked, in an informal speech, that "you good people (of Warm Springs) are not at all grasping," adding that at every meeting he had attended in his home town, Hyde Park, N. Y., for four or five years, someone always wanted to know when the village was going to get a new postoffice.

"Well, what have we got?" Mr. Roosevelt went on, "we've got a little over a year left. I don't know that the next Adiminstration would give Warm Springs a new postoffice.

"Maybe if I get (Postmaster General) Jim Farley and get him firmly by the neck, I might squeeze a postoffice out of him."

There is slightly more than a year left of Mr. Roosevelt's present term, which ends January 20, 1941.

The exercises were overshadowed by the political angles injected into them. The mayor, the Rev. W. G. Harry, said members of the Women's Civic Club had asked him to say that "they loved you very much" and also that they "hoped that you would not run for a third term, and with the thought that you would come back and be one of us."

Club members followed up with a song, which repeated several times:

"We do, yes, we do, need a leader just like you; yes, the Nation needs a leader just like you, you, you."

Bar Investigators On Credit to Meet

The District Bar Association's drive against undesirable practices in credit and buying on installments will get under way today with the first meeting of a special committee appointed to study the problem.

George D. Horning, jr., chairman of the investigating group, announced the meeting will be held at 10 a. m. in the bar association's offices, 1331 G street northwest.

Numerous complaints and suggestions would be thoroughly investigated, Horning said. He encouraged citizens to furnish him with criticism pertaining to high-pressure selling, dunning, etc.

Consumers Ask Cheaper Milk at Stores

Differential of 2 or 3 Cents a Quart Urged As Hearings Close

By James D. Secrest

Cheaper milk, particularly at stores and in quantity purchases, was demanded by spokesmen for Washington consumer groups yesterday. They appeared as the Agriculture Department concluded four days of hearings on a proposed marketing agreement.

Both producers and distributors were blamed for the present high retail price and advised to take reductions in order to stem the movement of consumers to evaporated milk.

Delivery Differential Asked

Among suggestions by Mrs. Simon M. Newman, of the consumers' milk committee, were:

A differential of 2 or 3 cents in the prices of milk sold at stores and delivered at doors.

General requirement for bottle deposits and more widespread use of paper containers.

Distributors' Margin Hit

While proposing a reduction in the producers' price, Mrs. Newman asked cuts in several classes of dairy service rather than a flat reduction.

"We think the handlers' (distributors') margin had better begin to show signs of shrinking," she added, "instead of constantly growing larger."

Glenn J. Gifford, of the solicitor's office, is chairman of the hearing, pointed out that the Secretary of Agriculture has no authority to fix the retail price of milk or to govern practices of dairies. His only control over price is in deciding what constitutes a fair return to producers.

Mother Is Best Witness

Attorneys for the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, the 11 local dairies acting jointly, and other interested parties have until December 9 to file briefs, after which the Agriculture Department will draw up a marketing agreement.

The agreement will be submitted first to the farmers of this milk shed in a poll. If approved it will be presented to the distributors for signing. Should the latter refuse to sign it, the Secretary may issue a Federal order, to be signed by the President, compelling distributors to comply.

The briefest testimony of the four days of hearing, but among the most effective, was that of Mrs. Joseph E. Selby, of Washington, who said she has six children and an invalid husband and is on relief.

"I can buy only a quart of milk a day," she said, "but I would like to be able to buy more."

Farm Woman Objects

The only suggestion of dissent from the proposal of the farm cooperative to sell milk to Washington relief families at a cent below the regular producers' price, came from a well-dressed woman, Mrs. Ransom Lewis, of Frederick County, Md., who with her husband operates a large farm.

Questioning Mrs. Newman, she voiced objection to the relief plan and when Mrs. Newman reminded her that the proposal came from the producers' organization, Mrs. Lewis snapped:

"They showed very poor judgment."

Later she took the floor to call attention to conditions of farm laborers and under-privileged children in Frederick County. Children 10 years of age and their mothers often arise at 4 a. m., she said, to milk cows at meager wages.

Low Farm Pay Told

"If farm wages were equal to those paid in industrial centers," she said, "milk would be sold by the producers for 60 cents instead of 26 cents a gallon."

W. Lawson King, of Gaithersburg, Md., one of the largest producers in this milkshed, also called attention to the long hours and low pay of farm workers. A weekly wage of $12 is considered high, he said.

"People never complain about the price of beer or ginger ale," he commented.

When questioned by an attorney for one of the dairies, he declined to give a breakdown of production costs but insisted that milk is being sold at below cost.

A different angle of the consumers' point of view was given by Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, chairman of a special milk committee of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association. The association has approved the marketing agreement, she said.

High Quality Demanded

"The one thing that we consumers insist upon is that the high quality of Washington's supply be not endangered in any way and we hope in considering this agreement the Agriculture Department will not overlook this basic demand of the consumer."

Mrs. Ether Phipard, of the Bureau of Home Economics, reported the results of a recent survey of milk consumption among low-income groups in Southwest Washington.

Among 54 white families, she said, average consumption of all dairy products was but three-fourths of a pint a day, one-half of which was fluid milk. Among 133 colored families the consumption was but one-third of a pint a day or a quart a week.

New York Price Cited

The first exhibit of actual milk was made just before the hearing closed by J. P. Hoddel, of Bealton, Va., who produced five quarts of milk and asked that they be made a part of the record. Chairman Gifford told him that would be impossible, but Hoddel left the milk, nevertheless.

Two of the bottles were from local dairies, one selling for 14 cents and the other for 11 cents with a 5-cent deposit. The other three were from New York City. The New York price on Grade A milk, as shown, was 17 cents with a deposit charge of 3 cents, he said, and on Grade B the price was 14 cents with a 3-cent deposit. Milk in a paper container sold for 13 cents.

During the morning Edward J. Burroughs, jr., counsel for the dairies, concluded his testimony and said that if the price paid farmers is made too attractive the result will be an oversupply of the market. He also stated that "bootlegging" has not ceased, because of lower prices of outside milk and cream.

Tentative Toll Charges Listed For Md. Span

75 Cents Would Cover Auto and Driver At Morgantown

Special Dispatch to The Post

Morgantown, Md., Nov. 24.—Action is expected within a month on the proposed toll schedule for the nearby Potomac River Bridge, construction officials indicated today. They said the decision on tolls should be forthcoming when the contract is drawn for toll collection equipment.

A tentative schedule of tolls and the estimates of traffic and income was prepared by J. E. Greiner Co., consulting engineers, and submitted to the roads commission.

The toll schedule calls for an initial basic rate for passenger cars of 75 cents, with the passenger car classification covering taxicabs, ambulances, hearses, and light delivery vans. This 75-cent charge would cover car and driver. Each extra passenger would be charged 15 cents.

Other rates include a flat $1.50 rate for buses, including driver and passengers; $1 for trucks under 2 tons, $1.25 for trucks between 2 and 5 tons; and $1.50 for trucks weighing more than 5 tons; $2.50 for trailer trucks. The truck charges would cover driver and helper.

Pedestrians would have to pay 15 cents for the 2-mile hike across the bridge. Bicyclists would pay 20 cents, motorcycle riders, 40 cents; and animal-drawn vehicles would be billed 75 cents if there were one or two animals, and $1 if more than two.

Engineers estimated that 128,000 vehicles could be expected to cross the bridge during the first year of operation. The predicted traffic volume would rise to 143,000 in the fifth year, and the five year average would be 136,000 vehicles a year. Estimated gross revenue for the first five years would be $704,000.

A special feature of the new bridge is the elaborate plans to see that all the money comes in with maximum efficiency. The toll plaza will have two traffic lanes passing under the toll booth canopy, and two more passing outside for vehicles too high to clear the canopy.

Besides the toll booths, to be equipped with the most modern devices for speedy, efficient handling of tolls, the plaza will provide space for the bridge administration building, located so that the superintendent can continually oversee the toll-taking operations.

High School Girls Prefer Stenography to Marriage

Psychologist Checks Up on Occupational Preference; Finds Men Most Dislike Ministry, Undertaking, Insurance Selling

Stenography looks better than marriage to high school girls, a gathering of 300 psychologists heard here yesterday.

Dr. Glen U. Cleeton, of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, told colleagues that 78 per cent of a group of 246 high school girls liked the idea of being typists while only 70 per cent checked "wife" as an appealing occupation. His findings were presented in a paper called "Positive and Negative Attitudes Toward Common Occupations."

Eighteen other reports, ranging from "Methods of Evaluating Educational Effectiveness of Liberal Arts Colleges" to "Tin Plate Inspection in a Sheet and Tin Mill," were read yesterday at opening sessions of the third annual convention of the American Association for Applied Psychology. The meetings continue through Sunday at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Subjects of Dr. Cleeton's survey, besides the school girls, were 746 unemployed women, two-thirds of whom had formerly held jobs, 855 men employed in a wide variety of positions, 195 high school boys and 315 engineering college freshmen. All were asked to indicate "like" or "dislike" on a list of 100 occupations.

The survey disclosed a three-way tie between the ministry, undertaking and selling life insurance as the least attractive occupation to the college freshmen. Each was placed in the "dislike" column by 93 per cent of those filling out the questionnaires.

Eighty-four per cent of the college students would like to be aviators, while 79 per cent fancied themselves as inventors. "The men were somewhat more discriminating," Dr. Cleeton remarked, pointing out that only 74 and 69 per cent of the adults reacted favorably to aviation and invention.

Least popular occupation among the men was teaching music. Ninety-one per cent said "dislike." More than three-fourths of the women disowned any ambition to be a laundress, cleaner or factory worker. Seventy-three per cent put "politician" in the dislike column.

Mechanical vocations led the professions by nearly 3 to 1 in the affections of high school boys. Only 25 per cent of this group indicated any desire to be either a doctor or lawyer, but 71 per cent liked carpentry and 72 per cent thought they would enjoy being machinists.

One amiable fellow admitted liking 88 out of the 100 listed occupations, Dr. Cleeton reported, while another questionnaire came back with 96 jobs marked dislike.

At last night's meeting quack practitioners of psychology were lambasted and called charlatans by Dr. R. A. Brotemarkle, association vice president. "The specific challenge of quackery to consulting psychological service," he said, "is probably greater than to any other specific service today save the diversified field of religious cult practice in which may be found the origins of the quack and to which he even now seems prepared to take final flight."

Estimated to number about 15,000, they spend $12,000,000 a year in advancing their ends, said Brotemarkle. Psychological practice is today their greatest opportunity; no field ever has offered them richer opportunities, he said.

The psychologists heard several technical speeches, but declined to diagnose the personality of Hitler, as reporters informally requested. One of them explained that a reputable physician would not undertake a curbstone diagnosis of the ailments of someone he never had seen.

Dr. Horace B. English, of Ohio State University, retiring executive secretary, was elected president of the association. Dr. C. M. Louttit, director of the Psychological Clinic at Indiana University, was elected executive secretary. Receiving his early education in Nebraska, Dr. English in 1911 went as a Rhodes scholar to Oxford, the youngest ever appointed. Dr. Louttit received his Ph. D. at Yale.

Other speakers last night were Vice President Edgar A. Doll, Frank N. Freeman and W. V. Bingham. The sessions extend through Sunday. The annual dinner will be held at 7:30 o'clock this evening at the Wardman Park Hotel, where the meetings are held.

Service Journal Upbraids Navy For Secrecy

Department Placed Itself on Defensive, Editorial Asserts

By the Associated Press

The Army and Navy Journal says in an editorial today that the Navy's "policy of secrecy" was to blame for Congressional proposals for an inquiry into admitted defects in 12 new destroyers.

The service periodical asserted that "suppression of information" about the destroyers had cost the Navy both public confidence and Congressional support.

"The Navy Department is discovering that it does not pay to observe the tactics of the ostrich," the Journal comments. "To correct the impression regarding the defects of the new destroyers, it was forced to ask the President to ridicule their importance, and it is now facing a Congressional investigation."

Destroyers Unstable

Charles Edison, Acting Secretary of the Navy, told Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, recently in response to an inquiry that several vessels were found to lack stability, but that the faults would be corrected. They were 12 destroyers of the Anderson class. Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, said subsequently that he would demand a Congressional inquiry.

The Journal said that there were other instances of information being withheld. It mentioned damage to the battleship Arizona, which Justice Department agents decided might have resulted from sabotage, and the loss of a number of planes in Pacific Fleet maneuvers two years ago. Details of the plane losses were published subsequently in the Congressional Record, it was noted.

Navy On Defensive

"The fleet cannot be maintained without public confidence, and the only way in which that confidence can be assured is through the belief of the people that the facts regarding it, whether good or bad, are supplied to them," the Journal said.

Had the truth been told instantly about the occurrence on the Arizona, the loss of the fliers, the defects in the destroyers, it would have been accepted as proof that the Navy was on the job, and that there was nothing to worry about. Instead, each incident gave rise to rumors and rumors to reports and now the department is on the defensive."

The Journal is a privately published periodical devoted to news and articles about the armed services.

Eight Injured, 22 Jailed in Chrysler Riot

Bricks Are Hurled as 57 Workers Pass Dodge Picket Line

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 24.—A barrage of bricks and stones injured eight persons and resulted in 22 arrests today, but failed to prevent 50 workers from passing a C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers picket line and entering the closed Dodge main plant of Chrysler Corporation.

The first mass violence of the 30-day-old dispute between the U. A. W.-C. I. O. and the corporation came a few hours before negotiations for settlements were adjourned for the week-end with "no progress" reported.

Negotiations are deadlocked on the issues of union wage demands and a demand by the corporation for assurance that the request of a C. I. O. foremen's union for a bargaining conference will not be renewed.

Two policemen were among injured in the picket-line clash. They suffered head injuries.

Police said bricks and stones were hurled by U. A. W.-C. I. O. "flying squadron" members as the workers appeared at the plant this morning.

The fighting was broken up by police and the workers entered the plant. They left without molestation this afternoon.

One of the workers was taken to receiving hospital in serious condition with a fractured skull.

R. J. Thomas, U. A. W.-C. I. O. president, charged that the disorder "was deliberately provoked by the management in an effort to mar the eight-week record of completely peaceful conduct on the part of the pickets."

D. C. Artist and Wife Aboard Yacht in Distress Off Coast

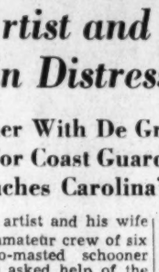
Schooner With De Groots in Crew of Six Sends for Coast Guard Help as Storm Approaches Carolina's Frying Pan Shoals

A Washington artist and his wife were among an amateur crew of six aboard the two-masted schooner Pinta which has asked help of the Coast Guard in extricating their boat from Frying Pan Shoals off the North Carolina coast.

De Groot

They are John De Groot and Mrs. Edythe De Groot, of 1400 Oglethorpe street northwest. De Groot, who has a studio in Richmond, has spent most of his time there in the last three years, painting portraits and designing covers for the Richmond Times-Dispatch Sunday magazine. Mrs. De Groot is employed in the Treasury Department. They have a 6-year-old daughter.

Others in the crew are Austin Gilmour, 33, owner of the 58-foot schooner and, until a few months ago, a copy reader on the Times-Dispatch; Mr. and Mrs. Vance Goddard, of California, and Robert L. Young, Richmond lawyer.



Mrs. De Groot

Coast Guard headquarters at Norfolk, Va., told the Associated Press a request for aid from the Pinta was relayed by the S. S. Brazos Thursday night, reporting the schooner in trouble 9 miles northeast of the light vessel at the shoals. The Pinta's difficulty was not stated, the Coast Guard said, and the Brazos did not reply to requests for further information.

The yacht does not have radio facilities.

The cutter Sebago was ordered to proceed to help the Pinta, about 45 miles out of Moorehead City, N. C., and reported it expected to reach the schooner this morning. The cutter was reported busy yesterday in handling a tow of the Army transport American Legion.

(Friends of the party in Richmond last night expressed alarm for safety of the adventurers, especially because of the Weather Bureau's warning of the approach of "gales off the coast between Hatteras and Cape Cod."

The Frying Pan Shoals are to the southeast of Cape Fear.

The Pinta left the Norfolk area November 16 and friends of the yachtsmen said they understood the schooner was to be taken by the inland waterway as far as Beaufort, N. C., to avoid Cape Hatteras.

Goddard and Gilmour planned the cruise several years ago when they met at Palma, Majorca, and, with De Groot, brought the Pinta down from City Island, N. Y., last summer. On that trip they fought a gale in Chesapeake Bay for 36 hours.

De Groot expected to sketch people and places in the West Indies and to write a series of articles about the trip, leaving the yacht at Panama. Young expected to leave at Jacksonville.

From the nature of the Brazos' message, the Coast Guard apparently assumed the Pinta was in no immediate danger and could await the Sebagos arrival.

Westinghouse Aide Killed

Pittsburgh, Nov. 24 (AP).—John Andrews, jr., 61, assistant to the vice president of Wastinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., was killed today by a shotgun blast at his home. Members of his family reported Andrews stepped into a closet where the gun stood in a corner. In some manner, they said, the gun was discharged.

Carpenter Slain For Hurling Beer In Robber's Face

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—A bride of two months today wept for John Edward Glass, 38, who threw beer in a holdup man's face—and got back two bullets in his own head.

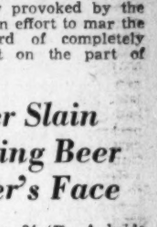
Glass, a West Englewood (N. J.) carpenter, and his bride, Olga, had come to Brooklyn to spend Thanksgiving with her sister.

Police said he left the sister's home early yesterday to park his car, apparently was kidnaped by two men and forced to drive them to a bar which they robbed of $50.

When one of the men refused to give back his car, the carpenter hurled beer in his face. The holdup man fired. The holdup men escaped.

Station PDS Presents Piano Soloist

Eddie Finckel, of 33 Concord avenue northwest, is a professional night club entertainer. He has played the piano at the King Cole Room, made recordings and accompanied other soloists. Eddie will be heard in a piano solo this morning on the PDS program over Station WMAL



FINCKEL

"Station PDS Presents," broadcast by Lee Everett from the Peoples Drug Store Studio, Eleventh and G streets northwest, is presented each weekday morning from 7:30 to 8:30 over Station WMAL by Peoples Drug Stores in cooperation with The Washington Post. Anyone over 18 years old may participate in the auditions at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays at the N. B. C. Studios. Performers are paid $5 for their appearance on this program.

Anglers Spent $877,309,000 in '38, U. S. Reports

Charles E. Jackson, acting Commissioner of Fisheries, reported yesterday the sport of angling is on the verge of becoming a billion-dollar-a-year business.

He reported to Interior Secretary Ickes a bureau survey showing sportsmen spent $877,309,009 last year for fishing licenses, tackle, photography, transportation, guides, food, lodging, bait, boats and incidentals.

California led the country as a fishermen's paradise, from the dollars and cents angle. The sport was a $50,000,000 proposition there in 1938. To Oregon it was worth $20,000,000; Maine, $41,171,000; Maryland, $1,500,000.

Navy Contracts For Steel Work of Medical Center

The foundation of the new Naval Medical Center, near Bethesda, is complete and a contract let for the steelwork in the 250-foot tower of the building, the Navy reported yesterday.

The American Bridge Co., of Baltimore, received the award for the steel tower frame, on a bid of $169,233. The tower, which required President Roosevelt's personal intervention to overcome Montgomery County zoning regulations, will be 89 by 106 feet at the base and 20 stories high.

Premier's Talk Not Addressed to U. S.

The British Embassy announced yesterday that the broadcast speech by Prime Minister Chamberlain which will be heard in this country at 4:15 p. m. tomorrow is "one of a regular series of broadcasts to the people of Great Britain and the empire," and in no sense an "address to America," as it had been announced by the National Broadcasting Co.

An embassy spokesman declared that there would be nothing in the speech specifically addressed to America, but that it was being transmitted by N. B. C. "as a matter of general interest."

Capital Transit Sued by Horseman

Walter Watson, 59-year-old horse trainer, yesterday sued in District Court for $12,500 damages against the Capital Transit Co.

Two horses from Our Riding School, 2514 G street northwest, took part in a Santa Claus Lane pre-Christmas parade last November 30 and Watson started riding one of them back to school. This horse was named Bumbum. There was no trouble, the complaint said, until Watson was riding south on Georgia avenue northwest. Then the insistent clanging of a street-car gong was too much for the gentle Bumbum's composure and he reared.

The street car, the suit charged, negligently kept on coming and knocked the horse down. Watson suffered severe cuts and bruises and several broken bones.

Gang Victim Found To Be Lepke Aide

Hollywood, Nov. 24 (INS).—George Schachter, murdered Wednesday night in a hail of gangster bullets, was unmasked today as a leader of the strong-arm squad of Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, New York racketeer, who goes on trial Monday on a narcotics charge.

Schachter, also known as Harry Greenberg and Harry Gottesman, was revealed as having a 28-year police and prison record. He was slain because he "knew too much" about Lepke, police believe

Scope of Pay-Hour Law Broadened

The Wage-Hour Administration broadened the coverage of the wage-hour law yesterday to include workers producing goods used entirely within a State to produce other goods for interstate shipment.

The announcement said the ruling would apply particularly to workers who have tools and dies sold to another manufacturer in the same State who uses them to produce goods for interstate commerce.

Arlington Chest Drive Has Raised $14,550

Col. Christopher B. Garnett, chairman of the Arlington County Community Chest, told volunteer workers meeting at the Washington Golf and Country Club lats night that $14,550 had been raised in the county's drive for funds. He expressed confidence workers would go "over the top" in their efforts to raise $20,000.

Gov. James H. Price of Virginia and Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health officer, will address the next meeting, Col. Garnett said. The date will be announced later.

Woman Drowns in Barrel

Lancaster, Mo., Nov. 24 (AP).—Mrs. Harmon West, 65, drowned today in a rain barrel which contained only a few inches of water. She apparently fell in while attempting to scoop out water for the chickens.

G-Men Jail Man Wanted by Navy

The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced yesterday arrest of Heber Toler, 40, who, the bureau said, had become a "source of considerable embarrassment to naval officials."

The bureau said Toler, a former chief botswain's mate in the Navy, was seized at Los Angeles on a charge of violating the Federal impersonation statute "in using his former title after discharge to cash bad checks."

School Plans $80,000 Dormitory

Plans for $80,000 dormitory to accommodate 100 girls and a scholarship fund to aid 50 students were outlined yesterday at a meeting of the trustees of the National Trade and Professional School for Women and Girls. The Lincoln Heights institution now has an enrollment of 200.

Mrs. George A. Roos and Mrs. O. E. Howe, both of Washington, have been elected to the board of trustees.

U. S. Firm to Buy All Mexico's Oil Exports

Mexico City, Nov. 24 (AP).—Officials of Petroleos Mexicanos, government-controlled oil administration, said tonight that negotiations virtually had been completed with a United States concern to dispose of Mexico's entire exportable oil production of about 88,000 barrels a day.

The name of the American agency and other details of the projected agreement were withheld.

The contract, it was understood, would supersede Mexico's contracts with Germany, Italy and South American countries.

My Potato Leaves Suit, Hans, I Dine With Hitler

Men's suits and newsprint are being made out of potato leaves and stems in Germany.

The American consulate in Leipzig reported the development to the Commerce Department and said it resulted from a shortage of wool and wood.

British Trying To Ease Blow On Neutrals

Loophole May Let Lowlands Process, Ship Nazi Materials

By Raymond Daniell
Copyright by New York Times

London, Nov. 24.—An order in council authorizing British and French warships to seize cargoes of goods of German ownership or origin on neutral ships will be issued Tuesday, it was said today, despite objections from nations which feel that their rights and political economic welfares will be jeopardized.

The British, however, are planning to ease the blow as much as possible.

It was pointed out that before a two-way system of contraband control may be inaugurated, under international law, several steps must be taken.

The first is the issuance of an order in council setting forth in detail the reasons for the adoption of the measure and announcing the exact circumstances whereunder cargoes will be seized.

Since exports may be seized under international law only as a reprisal measure, it is safe to assume that the first part of the order will be a bill of particulars against Germany in connection with her mine-laying activities, sinkings without warnings, and the shelling of passenger ships.

The second part of the order is expected to leave a loophole for such countries as Holland and Belgium which import great quantities of raw materials and partly finished products from Germany and sell them as finished products.

The ministry of economic warfare, it was learned, has been consulted on the possibility of stipulating that even though materials are of German origin, the finished products may be certified as the property of neutral manufacturers, if more than 50 per cent of the market value is represented by labor costs in the country of final manufacture.

Japan Seeks Trade Pact With Russia

was approved by the cabinet today.

Shikao Matsushima, former head of the commercial bureau of the foreign office, who resigned during the recent "strike," has been appointed Minister to Sweden but will stay in Moscow en route to Stockholm to assist Shigenori Togo, the Japanese Ambassador, in conducting the negotiations.

The question of starting negotiations arose during discussion of the truce on the border of Manchukuo and outer Mongolia, and the decision to make a trade agreement was reached by Togo and M. Molotoff, Soviet premier and foreign commissar, a few days ago. It was not stated who took the initiative, but the agreement to negotiate was first announced by Moscow.

Nonaggression Pact Hinted

It was officially described as part of the understanding reached during the truce discussions to seek a solution of the various disputes that had accumulated between the two countries.

The Outer Mongolian frontier question, after causing five months of sporadic fighting, ending in a serious Japanese reverse, has been sent to a mixed commission which will meet in December. The annual wrangle over fishery leases is about to begin, and the Soviet has smoothed the way by liberating a number of captured Japanese fishing vessels.

The German-Soviet nonaggression agreement was preceded by trade negotiations. Whether a nonaggression treaty with Russia may be the ultimate goal, officials say nonaggression is an entirely different question and is not being discussed at present. That is not a denial.

When Russia last proposed an nonaggression agreement, eight or nine years ago, Japan refused on the ground that such a pact might follow but could not precede the removal of all causes of dispute. The disputes that now are being discussed or are approaching negotiation are relatively minor.

In normal times a trade treaty would be too slender a basis for expecting a nonaggression agreement.

Though a solid, permanent nonaggression pact between the rival imperialisms of Russia and Japan seems remote, it is not more improbable than the German-Soviet agreement and something in the nature of a truce for a year or two might suit both at present.

A reduction in the Red army in eastern Siberia would release part of the large force Japan now maintains in Manchukuo. Abandonment of the Chinese Communists by Russia would contribute powerfully to success of Japan's impending efforts to reach a settlement with China.

What the Soviet Union would obtain in return is less apparent, but Germany would give much to shake Japan's neutrality policy. With the third largest navy in the world only half employed, Japan's neutrality has obvious value to Britain and France and the present announcement automatically obliges Britain to review her policy in the Far East.

Sir Robert Craigie, the British Ambassador, saw the foreign minister today and remained for 90 minutes. The meeting was arranged before the decision to negotiate with Moscow became known.

New U. S. Pact Demanded

Tokyo (Saturday), Nov. 25 (U.P.).—The influential commercial newspaper Chugai Shogyo, usually considered an organ of the powerful Mitsui interests, today demanded that the government "take immediate steps" to obtain a new commercial treaty with the United States.

The newspaper, which reflects the viewpoint of all the large Japanese commercial interests, said the government's present tactics of "delay" deserve "only condemnation."

The Japanese government should have proposed opening of formal negotiations weeks ago, the Chugai asserted, recalling that "nothing of importance has been done by the Japanese side since President Roosevelt first announced abrogation of the treaty."

aircraft carrier Courageous and the battleship Royal Oak to U-boats, and to enemy bombings the cruiser Southampton, a demilitarized battleship, and casualties aboard the destroyer Mohawk. However, British say, none of these last were damaged to an extent that they could not go to sea immediately after the attacks.

Apparently the damage to the Belfast was more serious. Repairs to the ship have been started. This is the first time, so far as known, that official announcement of damage to any British ship has been held up longer than the time necessary for confirming and checking the details of the incident.

Since the Belfast and her sister ship the Edinburgh are two of the newest British cruisers, details of their construction are not known. But it is believed that their internal arrangement of watertight bulkheads is exceptionally complete, and it may be that the survival of the ship after damage, is due to this feature of her construction.

Port of London Closed

German parachute mines, dropped in the estuary of the river Thames by low flying Nazi seaplanes, succeeded in closing the port of London for a few hours. The channel has since been swept clear, and a large convoy slipped into the Thames behind minesweepers early this morning.

This information was confirmed by officials of the port of London authority, by informed diplomatic quarters, and by foreign shipping lines, who were advised to keep all ships coming into or going out of the Thames at anchor, until the channel was swept clear.

Correspondents who learned yesterday, from sources other than the admiralty, that the port had been closed, were unable to get their dispatches past the censor, but this ban was lifted today, after the reopening of the Channel.

Trawlers Seek Mines

Other international waterways in the English Channel also are believed to have been closed, while British trawlers attempted to discover the exact spot where the German planes parachuted their dynamite during moonlight raids early in the week.

Meanwhile, two more ships, one British and the other a neutral, are reported victims of German naval activity. The British steamer Mangalore, 8,886 tons, was sunk at anchor off an east coast town, in full view of hundreds of people. It is said that she was a victim of a German mine which was apparently drifting.

An explosion occurred in the ship's engine room, and the ship was in such shallow water that the superstructure of the bridge could be seen from shore after she sank.

The entire crew of 77, including 58 Lascars, was rescued, but 12 were treated in a hospital and 9 were detained.

Dutch Sailors Land

Five exhausted seamen, half-frozen after 7½ days in an open boat in the Atlantic, were landed by a British trawler in England today, bringing the first news of the sinking of the Dutch steamer Sliedricht, 5,133 tons, by a German submarine. Twenty-six other men in another boat were unaccounted for.

According to Peter Brons, one of the men landed today, five men were in the boat which approached the submarine after she had been hailed by the U-boat. Despite pleas that it was a neutral vessel bound for a neutral port, the submarine commander gave them half an hour before the ship would be sunk, Brons said. The rest of the crew manned the other lifeboat, according to account, and got away before the submarine opened fire.

In the sea and darkness, the survivors said they had lost the other boat and rowed for days with little clothing or food and under the necessity of baling night and day before a trawler rescued them.

The admiralty announced today that the casualties on the Destroyer Gipsy, which struck a mine Wednesday, were fewer than originally feared. Instead of 40 men lost only 29 are missing and believed dead. One man died of wounds, three officers were injured, one man was seriously injured, and nine others were injured, the admiralty announced.

At the same time information reaching here showed that the Norwegian freighter, Solviken, was saved from the minefields which surround Singapore by the timely action of the shore batteries. Seeing the steamer heading for the field batteries, as recommended by the courts after the loss of other steamers, a shot was fired across the Solviken's bows. She stopped and a patrol vessel led her to port.

Seven additional survivors from the Steamer Arlington Court, torpedoed in the Atlantic, were landed today at a Kent port by a Norwegian steamer which picked them up from an open boat. Four of the crew are still missing, the others having been picked up previously.

The Italian steamer, Fianona, damaged by a mine off the southeast coast Tuesday, was beached today.

Planes Driven Off

German planes paid two visits to the British Isles today, both again directed at the Shetland Islands. These were the fifth and sixth attacks on this area since November 7.

Five planes took part in the first raid, and it was 90 minutes after the warning was sounded when the sharp, interrupted notes signaled "all clear." The second time there were only two planes, and it was only 42 minutes between the warning and the signal that the enemy had been driven off.

Royal Air Force fighters were in the air, and antiaircraft guns went into action, but there were apparently no casualties.

"Ten Shots for One"

Berlin, Nov. 24 (AP).—Authoritative Nazis today threatened sharp retaliation against Britain's campaign to destroy Germany's commerce.

The British decision to seize German exports drew the warning from one official that "our principle of conducting the war, namely, firing ten shots back for every shot against us, will be used in the economic sphere also."

With the sinking of numerous neutral ships near the English coast by mines in the last week, Nazis told neutrals through the press that no free shipping lanes to England existed.

They advised them to adopt the United States plan of cash and carry "as the only solution of their difficulties."

This plan was frowned upon before the United States adopted it but there has been an inclination in officialdom to regard it less pessimistically since it began functioning.

Dutch Cabinet Meets

The Hague, Nov. 24 (AP).—The growing war problems of the neutral Netherlands were considered today by the cabinet at a special meeting.

The Het Volk, Amsterdam newspaper, said Lieut. Kolp, Netherlands army intelligence officer, was killed at Venloo, November 9 and a Dutch chauffeur, J. Lemmens, abducted when the Germans seized two British intelligence officers as spies.

The Amsterdam Telegraaf answered sharply a German statement regarding seizure of the Netherlands officer, declaring it was no concern of the Gestapo. German secret police, that the officer had two passports, since he was on Netherlands territory when he was seized.

Shortly after the cabinet meeting news was received that the 5,133-ton tanker Sliedrecht had been sunk in the Atlantic—the first Netherlands victim of a submarine.

Trawlers Mobilized

By Joseph Barnes.
Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Nov. 24.—Great Britain, it was disclosed today, is mobilizing her forces on a big scale to meet the new challenge thrown down by Hitler in the form of the "magnetic mine," whether it is sown by U-boat, surface vessel or the new naval aerial weapon, the "flying minelayer."

Through the indirect means of a statement by the British Embassy in Tokyo, the British admiralty admitted today that the airplane was in fact playing a conspicuous role in planting the explosives which are playing havoc with shipping off the east and southeast coast of England.

The admiralty appealed to all men between the ages of 18 and 45 who have had fishing or trawling experience to volunteer for work in clearing the sea.

Italy Gives Britain Views On Blockade

Calls Attention To Effect on Her Foreign Commerce

By International News Service

Rome, Nov. 24.—For the first time since the European war broke out, Italy tonight reacted officially to the Anglo-French conduct of the conflict.

Foreign Minister Count Ciano conveyed the Italian attitude toward the Allied blockade against German imports when he summoned and interviewed the French ambassador, Andre Francois Poncet, and the British charge d'affaires, Sir Noel Charles.

A communique stated that Ciano had "called attention to the consequences on Italian traffic" resulting from the contraband control exercised by the British and French.

Details on the conversation between the foreign minister and the Allied envoys were not exposed.

Italy carries on a considerable exchange of goods with Germany and is anxious that this trade be not disturbed by the Anglo-French blockade.

It was not known whether Ciano had taken the occasion to discuss with his visitors the latest action contemplated by Britain, namely the seizure of German goods exported by or originating in the Reich.

This threatens to hamper Italian sea-borne commerce, some of which entails merchandise originating in Germany.

By Herbert L. Matthews.
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Nov. 24.—The Italians formally announced today that they have reached a new commercial agreement with the Hungarians.

Since the negotiations have been going on for some days, it is considered significant that the Italians should have picked the day after the formation of a pro-French government in Rumania, to announce an ever-tightening link to Hungary which which is now Rumania's enemy No. 1. This is a very minor move in what has become a singularly delicate Balkan game.

This accord, according to good sources, will result in Italy getting more trade from Hungary at Germany's expense. As Germany is angry against Rumania for not yielding to her economic demands, perhaps she will also be angry with Hungary.

In connection with Hungary and recent rumors that the Hungarians may elect Victor Emmanuel their king, it is interesting that today, for the first time, the report appears in the Italian press. It does so in the usual roundabout way in dispatches from Paris.

There have been strong reports today that Signor Mussolini and Nicholas Horthy the regent of Hungary, are going to meet shortly but these reports are considered most improbable.

Experts Scoff At Stories of Magnet Mines

Engineering experts here said yesterday that the so-called "magnetic mines" which have been destroying shipping in the English Channel probably are simply mines which rely on an electrical device to operate their firing mechanisms.

A popular conception that a magnetized mine is drawn up from the bottom of the sea by the steel in a ship and explodes against its hull was described as "pure poppy-cock" and "contrary to all that is known of the principles of physics and electricity."

Experts said it is likely that the ships are hitting the long wires of antenna mines or are coming in very close contact with the mines themselves. It is possible, they declared, that a mine may have been devised which sets up an electrical current when the steel hull of a ship gets near, the hull and the mine forming the negative and positive poles.

In such a case, however, the current would set off the mine, not draw it to the ship, it was said. Underwater pressure caused by the mine exploding where it was, either with such a contrivance or with antenna, would cave in the ship.

A report made in 1918 by the Naval Consulting Board, headed by the late Thomas A. Edison, was pomted to in scoffing at the possibility of magnetized mines being drawn to hulls of ships.

The report said tests conducted by the Navy on an actual submarine showed "that the magnetic effect due to the mass of iron (in the ship) are quite limited in range."

At a distance of 150 feet, the magnetic effect of iron in the vessel, it was said, is only about one one-hundredth that of the normal pull of the earth. A magnet which is strong enough to lift 20 tons when placed in direct contact with that weight will not lift two pounds of iron or steel when placed two feet away, the board added.

French Sink 3d Nazi Sub In Four Days

Depth Charges Raise Air Bubble, Oil Slick; Plane Activity Drops

By Michael Wilson
International News Service Staff Writer

Paris, Nov. 24.—Destruction of the third German submarine in four days by small French naval craft was reported today as aerial activity subsided on the Western Front.

This latest submarine was sunk in the early morning by the 719-ton hydrographic survey vessel Admiral Mouchez, presumably in the English Channel.

A Nazi submarine tried a shot at either the Admiral Mouchez or one of the vessels it was convoying the French commander, Capt. Saulnier, swerved his boat to avoid the torpedo, and then at full speed set his course back down the torpedo wake.

When he arrived at the spot from which the submarine had fired he ordered depth charges dropped.

At the second depth barrage, as a gush of air bubbles was seen, oiled the water. A few moments later a widespread oil slick covered the surface.

Two other German submarines were destroyed in the past four days by the 1,319-ton Sirocco, smallest of French destroyers.

Tonight's war communique, No. 164, revealed that air activity—remarkably heavy for the last four days—had subsided. The official announcement stated:

"An enemy raid east of the Moselle River failed. We took a few prisoners. There were local artillery actions, and there was reduced aerial activity during the day."

Following the past few days of intensified air combat in which each side claimed to have shot down more than a dozen of the other's planes, it was declared in French circles that since beginning of the war German air losses have approximated 100 planes of which 85, having fallen in allied territory, have been officially confirmed. The others, it was stated, either fell behind the German lines or in neutral territory.

Army Chiefs To Meet Here On Training

By John G. Norris.
Post Staff Writer

Army commanders throughout the United States have been summoned here for an unprecedented conference with general staff heads on the arms expansion program.

An announcement from the War Department said the enlargement of the Army and National Guard, the reorganization of combat forces into streamlined divisions and the special training program make a general conference of the high command advisable at this time.

Nine Generals Together

Three lieutenant generals heading field armies and six major generals in command of corps areas will come here November 30. Purpose of the conference, officials said, is to co-ordinate plans for the greatest mass training program in peacetime history.

With minor exceptions, it was stated, four of the five new streamlined divisions have now been concentrated at points in the South. After several months of drilling, the units will be grouped for corps maneuvers in the spring.

At the same time, the department announced the award of contracts for 5,979 trucks and other automotive equipment, costing $8,477,584. This is about half of the vehicles necessary completely to motorize the five divisions. Bids have been asked on the remaining half.

Three companies divided the order. The Fargo Motor Co. received contracts for 3,936 1½-ton trucks for towing field guns, hauling troops, etc. An award for 1,466 larger vehicles went to the Yellow Truck & Coach Co., while Chevrolet received an order for 577 light trucks, cars and ambulances.

Antisub Nets Sought

Congressional sources, meanwhile, reported that the Navy might ask funds for equipping some of the principal American harbors with latest type antisubmarine nets, the Associated Press reported. Use of nets to protect harbors from submarine raids is not new, but it is said the British have developed a protective barrier far superior to anything we have.

According to the report, the British net uses 3-inch steel bars in a mesh so small as to stop torpedoes as well as submarines. Under consideration, it was said, was a proposal to ask $40,000,000 for procuring similar nets here.

At next week's conference of Army officials, it was said, plans for sending selected National Guard and Reserve officers to the divisional concentration areas will be discussed. Guard brigade and division commanders and key staff officers would spend short training periods with the regular units under the plan.

Officers Summoned

The officers summoned to the conference were:

Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commanding the First Army and Second Corps Area; Lieut. Gen. Stanley H. Ford, commanding the Second Army and Sixth Corps Area; Lieut. Gen. Stanley D. Embick, Third Army and Fourth Corps Area commander; Maj. Gen. John L. DeWitt, who will become Fourth Army and Ninth Corps Area commander about December 1, with rank of lieutenant general.

Maj. Gen. James A. Woodruff, First Corps Area commander; Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, Third Corps Area; Daniel Van Voorhis, Fifth Corps commander who will take command of the Panama Canal Department January 1; Maj. Gen. Percy P. Bishop, Seventh Corps, and Maj. Gen. Herbert J. Brees, Eighth Corps.

Kuhn's 'Golden Angel' Tells Of Shipboard Romance

Divorcee Says She Repaid Bund; Judge Voids Five Counts

shipboard, in New York, Los Angeles and Reno.

Her testimony, as the State's first rebuttal witness, was largely corroborative of what Kuhn already had admitted in cross-examination after first denying that he ever had proposed to her or influenced her divorce.

Five Counts Dismissed

After other rebuttal witnesses testified both sides rested, the jurors were excused until Monday and Judge Wallace heard legal arguments of the defense for dismissal of the indictment. He dismissed five of the ten counts on which Kuhn was tried and indicated that on Monday he might dismiss two other couts, leaving only three for the jury to decide.

Those three alleged only larceny of $500 and third degree forgery on two counts. The two on which the court was undecided allege larceny of $717.02, the amount Kuhn supposedly took from bund funds to pay for transportation of Mrs. Camp's furniture from Los Angeles to New York and from New York to Cleveland.

In discussing the Camp furniture transaction, during argument for dismissal of the indictments, Judge Wallace announced:

"The court will take it for granted, though the jury may find otherwise, that it is proved beyond peradventure of a doubt that the defendant lied about his relations with Mrs. Camp and lied to Mrs. Camp—I don't know whether because of her bund sympathies or because of any other bund-ling activities. But he is not the first man to lie to a woman."

Repaid Bund, She Says

Kuhn has testified that Mrs. Camp repaid him in full and she herself said she repaid him $600, a point the judge remarked in advising the lawyers that he would "sleep" on those two counts and announce his final decision Monday.

The $500 larceny charge concerns a disputed payment of that amount to James D. C. Murray, former bund lawyer, who says he never was paid for his bund services. Kuhn says he wrote out a $500 check to himself, cashed it and gave the money to Willy Luedtke, national economics director of the bund, who testified he turned the money over to Daniel Kirchman, Murray's assistant, and received a receipt. The receipt never has been produced and Kirchman denied ever receiving the money.

The forgery counts, both in the third degree, are based on the Murray contention. They allege that Kuhn, by entering the Murray payment on his check stub an bund account books, committed forgery, even though the records were for his personal use.

If convicted on the five counts still against him Kuhn is liable to a maximum of 22 years imprisonment. Previously he was charged with larcenies totaling $5,641 and would have been liable to 35 years imprisonment.

The case will go to the jury Tuesday unless the lawyers complete their summation at a "reasonable time" Monday, Judge Wallace said.

The "Golden Angel"

Met Aboard Ship

Mrs. Camp, the day's star witness, testified she was separated from her husband, Charles Camp, when she met Kuhn aboard the Westernland and after meetings with him in New York and Los Angeles, went to Reno in 1938 to start divorce proceedings.

"He told me," she said, "to go back to Los Angeles and start divorce proceedings and have my furniture shipped here and he would take care of it."

Her last communication with Kuhn, she said, was on July 5, 1939, when she received a letter from him at Miami Beach, Fla.

Mrs. Camp denied, though bund officers had testified otherwise, that she ever had been a bund sympathizer, or had contributed money to it. She insisted that before she met Kuhn she did not even know the bund existed.

In cross-examination, Peter L. F. Sabbatino, defense lawyer, emphasized the expense to which the State had gone in obtaining her testimony. For eight weeks, she said, she had been in the company of Arthur Robertson, prosecution assistant, at Miami Beach and had been questioned there by Assistant District Attorney Herman J. McCarthy, who is prosecuting Kuhn. Her traveling and hotel expenses are being paid by the prosecution, she testified.

Cleveland Park Congregational Ordains New Pastor Dec. 7

Rev. P. W. Yinger Envisions Promising Future for Parish

Cleveland Park Congregational Church will mark another milestone in its young and eventful life on December 7, when the recently appointed youthful pastor will be ordained with impressive rites.

He is the Rev. Paul W. Yinger, fresh from Union Theological Seminary, New York City, who assumed charge of the congregation on October 15.

The ordination will include three phases. At 4 p. m., the ecclesiastical council will meet to hear Mr. Yinger read his statement of faith and give his reasons for entering the Christian ministry. Examination by the council, comprising ministers and laymen from local Congregational churches, will follow.

After the fellowship dinner, the ordination will take place, with a sermon scheduled by Dr. David E. Roberts, dean of students at Union Seminary.

THE REV. P. W. YINGER

Promising Future Visioned

Mr. Yinger, who comes of a ministerial family, is hoping that at least two of his three minister-brothers will be able to attend the ceremony. His late father was a Methodist clergyman.

Interviewed yesterday in his Glover Park apartment, Mr. Yinger visioned a promising future for his congregation, which worships at Thirty-fourth and Lowell streets northwest, and he expressed the hope that a series of monthly family fellowship gatherings would be inaugurated after Christmas holidays. He also is eager to start a Bible study group, possibly during Lent.

At present, the clergyman is delivering a series of "book sermons," and tomorrow at 11 a. m. will base his message on Sidney Carton, character from Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities." Last month he discussed Jean Valjean from Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables."

Mrs. Clifton R. Moore, organist, will play Chopin's "Prelude in D Minor," Masseret's "Melody" as offertory, and a chorus from Handel as postlude. Mrs. Pearl Anderson will sing "O Lord Most Holy," by Caeser Frank.

Formed in 1918

Mr. Yinger said he plans to spend much of his time at Cleveland Park Congregational Church in making personal contacts with the congregation, which a former pastor yesterday characterized as "one of the finest group of people in my entire ministry."

He is the Rev. John A. Knott, who recalls that when the congregation was formed in 1918, with one of its leaders as Dr. Clarence Vincent, then pastor of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church. Both First and Mount Pleasant churches helped launch the project.

Mr. Knott, authority on local congregational history, served in the interim from 1937 until the coming of Mr. Yinger.

About a year ago, a merger was being considered between the Cleveland Park and the Mount Pleasant Congregational churches, but the plan was deemed inadvisable, the former group feeling that it would like to develop its independent congregation. Dr. Russell J. Clinchy was then pastor at Mount Pleasant.

At that time, it was hoped to use the Cleveland Park Church as a youth extension recreational and social center for the united congregations.

"Y" Branch Maintained

Because church leaders realize the church of tomorrow depends on the Christian youth of today, young people's programs have always had an important place at Cleveland Park Church, where a branch of the Central "Y" is maintained. This meets Thursday nights under the leadership of Bruce Etchison, American University student and son of Page McK. Etchison, religious work secretary of the Central Y. M. C. A.

Fred Carl, jr., who assists Bruce Etchison, presented a Scout medal to King George at the time of his Washington visit. Yule Fisher is scoutmaster. Several other youth groups' work will be given impetus by the coming of Mr. Yinger, who can depend on strong support in that direction from Robert Featherstone, Mrs. E. A. Bach and others.

Also active in the congregation are William Carl Ruediger, president of the church council; George Kennedy and Mrs. Charles Woodbury, who handle the Sunday school activities. The men's club will hold an oyster roast on December 15.

Native of Michigan, where he received his early education, Mr. Yinger was graduated from De Pauw University, Greencastle, Ind., and Union Theological Seminary, New York City. He served several assistant pastorates during his term at the seminary, which he finished last June.

1st Congregational Plans to Show Film

The film version of Eric Remarque's book, "All Quiet on the Western Front," will be shown tomorrow at 8 p. m. at First Congregational Church. Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, pastor, will speak at 11 a. m. on "Life's Three Major Decisions."

Mount Pleasant. Thompson Fulton's intermediate class will lead the church school worship services at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow. Work of Washington welfare agencies for children will be described, in preparation for the department's decision as to its Community Chest gifts. Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer will preach at 11 a. m. on "They Without Us."

300 to Make Church Survey In Southeast

9 Congregations to Observe Tomorrow as 'Consecration Day'

Nine churches of six denominations in Southeast Washington are expected to observe tomorrow as "Consecration Sunday" for the workers of the Southeast Inter-Church Survey.

Three-hundred men and women from First, Wilson Memorial, North Carolina Avenue and Trinity Methodist Churches; Washington City Church of the Brethern, Reformation Lutheran, Fifteenth Street Christian, Metropolitan Presbyterian and Christ Episcopal Churches will go out on the survey in the afternoon. Their aim is to determine how available social and religious facilities are being used by the community.

At Trinity Methodist Church the Rev. E. B. Wilcox is scheduled to preach at 11 a. m. on "Who Is My Neighbor?" and at 8 p. m. on "The Communion of the Saints."

For the Washington City Church of the Brethern, the day also will mean the dedication of the congregation's new organ, a memorial to Mrs. Daisy B. Edwards, late wife of Lewis I. H. Edwards. Dr. Warren D. Bowman will preach on "The Power of Music in Worship."

At 8 p. m. Dr. Bowman will speak on "An Evening With Great Hymns," discussing the spritual setting and story of some famous hymns.

Meanwhile, the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, pastor of Fifteenth Street Christian Church, will be preaching on "Our Greatest Needs." His youth groups will discuss "Why Must We Have Poverty?" at 6:45 p. m. "Where People Go" will be his evening theme.

Christian Science Topic Anounced

"Ancient and Modern Necromacy, Alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism Denounced" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow, at 11 a. m. All are cordially invited to attend the church services including the Wednesday evening meetings at 8 o'clock.

The golden text is from Isaiah 8: 19. "When they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep, and that mutter: should not a people seek unto their God?"

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Unto thee, O my strength, will I sing: for God is my defense, and the God of my mercy" (Psalms 59:17.)

"Softly and tenderly Jesus is calling,
Calling for you and for me;
See, on the portals He's waiting and watching,
Watching for you and for me."

Chorus:
"Come home, come home,
Ye who are weary, come home;
Earnestly, tenderly, Jesus is calling,
Calling, O sinner come home!"

Premier Tells Finns to Keep Rifles at Hand

Says Each Must Be A Sentry on Guard Against Red Invasion

By A. Marcus Tollett
Copyright by New York Times

Helsinki, Nov. 24.—"The Finnish people must learn to plow their fields with shouldered rifles," Premier Cajander declared today, in an appeal to the public.

Addressing a defense meeting, the premier summarized events in the Finnish-Soviet dispute, and then admitted that differences between the two countries might be protracted.

"After the first enthusiasm, life resumes its every day outlook," he said, but stressed the urgent necessity that "every citizen must feel himself a sentry who guards and without menacing anybody, keeps ready to defend his country to the bitter end."

The premier said the nation must get used to living and working under altered conditions and that every branch of production must again attain the highest point of efficiency, without undue interference on the part of the government. Patriotic fervor must remain unweakened, and all causes of dissatisfaction and dissention should be eliminated, he urged.

Cajander declared Soviet proposals would have broken the Finn defense line in a way the country was unable to accept.

The premier expressed deepest sympathy for Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania—three states which from being independent nations have become more or less dependent upon Russia.

Moscow, Nov. 24.—The anti-Finnish campaign today takes the form of attempting to show that the Finnish masses are suffering under the government's defense measures depicted as inspired by "foreign imperialists" for the purpose of attacking the Soviet Union.

The Finnish people, it is declared, are filled with affection for the Soviet Union and will not allow the Finnish ruling classes' dreams of "conquest" to be realized.

A long Tass telegram from Helsinki quotes a number of letters said to have been published in Finnish newspapers full of complaints of the consequences of mobilization.

The writers complain of the difficulties on peasant farmsteads owing to the shortage of labor, delays in the military postal service, the alleged humiliating conditions attaching to the drawing of allowances by wives of mobilized men and rising prices for home and imported foodstuffs.

Chamberlain Booted for Gout

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Suffering from gout, Britain's Prime Minister Chamberlain wears a special boot on his left foot as he emerges from No. 10 Downing street after a meeting of the supreme allied war council. Note that the famed umbrella has given way to a cane, temporarily, at least. Webster defines the gout: "A metabolic disease occurring in paroxysms and marked by a painful inflammation of the fibrous and ligamentous parts of the joints, deposits of urate of sodium in and around the joints, and, at times, an excessive amount of uric acid in the blood. It usually attacks first the great toe, after which other joints may become involved"

The German general who is said to have opposed Hitler's offensive most vigorously was Gen. Walter von Reichenau, who hitherto always has encouraged Hitler in his attempted coups.

At a reported meeting of Hitler with five generals who form what is now called der Fuehrer's "private general staff," on the morning of November 9—the day after the Munich bomb explosion—Reichenau is said to have called attention to reports received after the meeting of King Leopold III and Queen Wilhelmina indicating that in case of a Nazi invasion of the Netherlands, Belgium would upset German calculations by not remaining neutral.

CAA Plans to Ring D.C. With Airports

Point, said an outlying terminal is "even more important today than it was a year ago."

"Tripling of Air Corps flying activities here; operation of the pilot training program, and the interest of the general public make this secondary airport essential," he added.

Location of the first supplemental airport at Fort Meade, between Washington and Baltimore, is strongly urged in the general plan.

Railroads Accessible

Advantages of the site, it is said, include frequent railroad service between Washington, Baltimore and New York, and accessibility to private fliers of both the National Capital and Baltimore.

The proposed terminal also could be used as an alternate landing field for transatlantic planes, since "it is to be assumed that land planes will be used for transatlantic service in addition to seaplanes," the program states.

Furthermore, the outlying terminal would be the center for "research, experimental and test flying by the authority."

These activities, the report emphasizes, "would naturally not be in evidence at the time the alternate airport would have to be used by the air lines in adverse weather, and hence would not conflict with the dual use of such an airport."

Chairman Hinckley, Col. Sumpter Smith, chairman of the Washington National Airport Commission, and Clinton J. Hester, administrator of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, who drew up the plan, also suggested in the report that "military airports, if used for the protection of the Capital, should be removed far enough from the Capital not to constitute a hazard . . . when bombing of military reservations might be carried on even though bombing of civil areas was not carried out."

They stated that "the Marine flying station at Quantico obviously would be the logical location for Navy aircraft used for defense purposes."

They urged establishment of a new base for the Army Air Corps "some distance to the southeast of Washington, preferably" within a triangle with Brandywine, Waldorf and Baden, Md., at its angles.

"Bolling Field," they reported, "could best be used not for defense purposes but for use as a national defense liaison headquarters in the Capital."

Outside Congested Areas

Military air traffic between Mitchell Field, Long Island, and Langley Field, would travel a course near Chesapeake Bay, while civil air traffic would continue to fly over Washington.

"To follow . . . the logical progress of civil aeronautic activities," they also said, "it is reasonable to assume that the residential population to the northwest and to the west of Washington would eventually justify establishment of all-weather airports" near Rockville, Md., and Fairfax, Va. These two terminals and the landing field near Fort Meade would all be on existing radio flight beams.

Construction of the terminals would depend upon expansion of needs for private flying, military and experimental bases. All the fields, however, would be outside the congested areas of the National Capital, probably within a 15-mile radius.

"We expect to go well into the country, beyond built-up areas, where we can get land at reasonable prices," Col. Smith said.

He declared that emphasis would be placed on long runways and approaches which would permit flight training and instrument flying.

Expansion Needs Considered

All areas under consideration, Col. Smith said, could be used to build terminals with runways 5,000 feet long with clear approaches. Expansion of the landing fields to provide runways 10,000 feet in length—nearly 2 miles—would be possible.

Funds, he concluded, would be used to obtain adequate landing area and as little as possible would be spent on airport buildings at the supplemental terminals.

advisory capacity whenever their assistance might be requested.

Speaking of the report, the Chief Executive wrote that "I feel certain it will prove of material assistance in perfecting our plans for the national defense."

While Mr. Roosevelt saw a chance of making what he called a very substantial reduction in the deficit, he replied in the negative to a question whether he was implying the budget could be balanced, if defense expenditures were not taken into consideration.

Of course, the Administration intends to pare all possible expenditures, he said. This year's deficit can be lowered, he said, if appropriations are shaved down and Congress does not go beyond the budget, and if tax receipts continue to increase.

He said an important point to remember was that Congress ran $350,000,000 over budget recommendations last year.

After the conference, the Chief Executive went to the swiming pool at the infantile paralysis foundation. In the afternoon he took the wheel of his automobile again to drive down to Warm Springs village and dedicate a new community center.

India Nationalists Weigh Boycott Agains British

Allahabad, India, Nov. 24 (INS).—Possibility of a boycott against British goods to further the struggle for Indian independence was understood tonight to be receivin consideration by native self-rule leaders.

Such a step, informed circles said, may be taken if the British viceroy, Lord Limlithgow, rejects the resolution adopted at yesterday's meeting of the committee of Allahabad which reiterated adherence to the self-rule demands for dominion status, but left the door open for "an honorable settlement."

Tatarescu Forms Cabinet In Rumania

Gafencu Retained Indicating No Change In Foreign Policies

By Eugene Kovacs
Copyright by New York Times

Bucharest, Rumania, Nov. 24.—After conferences with political leaders, Premier George Tatarescu succeeded in forming his cabinet, it was announced this evening.

Grigore Gafencu, foreign minister in the Constantin Argetoianu government, will remain, which, according to political circles, shows that the government intends to maintain its present foreign policy.

Mitita Constantinescu, also will stay as minister of finance, which is interpreted as meaning that the financial policy will also remain unchanged, and will be directed against all tendencies toward inflation.

The ministry of national economy is headed by Constantin Angelescu, practical economist.

The interior ministry is held by the prime minister, while Gafencu, in addition to the foreign ministry, will have the ministry of propaganda.

The new cabinet is composed of personalities who are known more for their professional and scientific activities than for their political influence.

The new government will go before Parliament tomorrow when Tatarescu is expected to make a statement of policy. At the same time Crown Prince Michael will be presented to Parliament as a member of the Senate.

Hungary Awaits Policy

Budapest, Hungary, Nov. 24.—The policy that the new Rumanian government of Premier Tatarescu will follow is awaited with great interest here. The press explains the resignation of the Argetoianu government by the difficulties arising in home and foreign policy.

It is believed here that the unsettled question with Bulgaria and the rupture in the economic negotiations with Germany, helped bring on the crisis. According to the newspaper, Pester Lloyd, the crisis has not come as a surprise, for it was known that King Carol and Argetoianu disagreed on many questions.

The government supporting paper, the Magyar Orszag, energetically denies allegations Hungarian Foreign Minister Count Czaky had been under German pressure to use a less friendly tone against Rumania and that it was Germany's pressure which prevented the formation of a Balkan bloc.

Cracow U. Faculty Taken to Reich; 7 Citizens Shot

Paris, Nov. 24.—The majority of the professors at Cracow University have been arrested and taken to Germany, it was learned here tonight.

Last week all the 160 professors in this oldest Polish University were invited to a "conference" by the governor—the building was surrounded by the gestapo (secret police) and elite guards and nearly 100 professors, including Prof. Casimir Kostanecki, 75 years old, famous anthropologist, and Prof. Zoll, 75 years old, international law expert, were detained.

At Trzebinia seven leading citizens were reported to have been shot and their bodies exposed in the market place after a German soldier had been killed.

On eve of the Polish national holiday, November 11, the Cracow archbishop was ordered to close all churches to avoid patriotic demonstrations provoking German reprisals.

U. S. Imports From Canada Up Since War

By John MacCormac
Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ontario, Nov. 24.—In the first two months of the war Canada's exports to the United States, which were supposed to decrease, increased, and her exports to Great Britain, which were supposed to increase, decreased.

Canadian exports to the United States rose from $27,000,000 in October of last year to $48,000,000 in October of this year, while those to Great Britain dropped from $36,000,000 to $25,000,000.

These facts, which run contrary to the experience of the late war, and expectations of this gave rise to some suspicion that Canadian exports might be reaching Germany through the United States.

Bank of Canada officials, whose function under Canada's new exchange control is to watch the trend of her foreign trade, said today, however, that whether or not port of the large increase in United States exports to European neutrals might be reaching Germany, no Canadian products are doing so.

The virtual doubling of Canadian exports to the United States in the early months of the war could be accounted for, they claimed, by special war conditions.

Exports to the United States, for instance, had been swollen by the trebling of wheat shipments.

Another important increase in Canadian shipments to the United States had been in nickel, which nearly trebled as compared with last year. Expanded industrial activity in the United States particularly in the filling of war contracts would help to explain this.

From another government source the theory was advanced that Great Britain, before the new American neutrality regulations prevented it, had been making use of American ports and ships to carry Canadian wheat and metals to her shores. There was a grave shortage of available British vessels in the early days of the war.

Japanese Take Nanning, on China 'Lifeline'

By the Associated Press

Hongkong, Nov. 24.—The capture of the Kwangsi province capital of Nanning today at the end of a 10-day, 100-mile thrust by Japanese troops aiming at China's southwestern "lifeline" supply routes was announced by Japanese army headquarters.

Japanese said their troops were completing occupation of the Nanning area tonight. The city has been a nerve center for China's incoming war supplies and outgoing trade.

Although not minimizing the importance of its fall, which they said was possible, Chinese contended that the invading Japanese force, about 40,000 strong, had not achieved its objectives of cutting China's "lifelines" and smashing the Kwangsi province army, rated among the best of China's soldiers.

Nanning is on a highway from French Indo-China over which war supplies have been moving into China.

Chinese pointed out that more than 200 miles of mountains, rivers and deep valleys separate the Japanese from Kweilin, south China's new military and political headquarters.

Japanese entry into Nanning was preceded by air and artillery bombardment which reduced its defenses and badly damaged the outskirts of the city, the Japanese said. Japanese cavalry units were said to have crossed the shallow Pearl River on which Nanning lies.

The Chinese said they expected the invaders to build an air base at Nanning, and attempt from there to harass Kumming, capital of Yunnan, 280 miles to the northwest.

A motor road runs from Chungking to Kunming, where the "lifeline" forks by rail to Hanoi, Indo-China, and by new motor highway to Burma.

The Japanese launched their south China drive with a landing on Tongking Bay at a point about 35 miles east of the Indo-China border on November 15.

Why Not Experiment?

There are few traffic experts among the estimated 250,000 drivers habitually using the streets of Washington. But every one of them knows that the movement of traffic in the congested areas during the rush hours of both morning and evening is tantalizingly slow. This simple fact gives rise to a widespread assumption that the present system of moving traffic into and out of the congested area is seriously defective.

In a series of articles by Howard F. Wentworth The Post is calling attention to these shortcomings. By actual tests representatives of The Post have demonstrated that there is ample justification for complaint. The so-called "flexible-progressive" system of timing traffic signals has been shown to be satisfactory when traffic is relatively light. But in the period of heaviest traffic it choked the streets with cars in the process of starting and stopping.

Many citizens believe with Mr. Wentworth that the flow of traffic during the rush hours could be facilitated by the "block" system of timing under which all lights on important streets for a distance of several blocks would remain green for one minute. If a speed of 30 miles per hour were permitted on these arteries, it is argued, the downtown area could be cleared of Government workers' cars in a relatively brief period.

The extent to which that plan could be successfully applied remains to be seen. It might prove to be less efficacious than its sponsors hope. On the other hand, it certainly appears to be worth testing on thoroughfares that now permit only a sluggish and erratic flow of traffic when the need for orderly movement is greatest.

The attitude taken by District officials is weak because they are doing little or nothing to improve a bad situation. If experiments with different timing devices should come to nothing, they could be readily abolished without loss to any one. With traffic congestion as bad as it is, the only inexcusable policy seems to be complacent acceptance of present regulatory methods on the unproved assumption that no improvement can be made.

Undoctrinaire Doctor

Propaganda is fast becoming another great intellectual hobgoblin of an age that seemingly has had more than its share of them already. It lurks everywhere and a heart full of good will is, in itself, no protection against its dangers. Not indeed until the seven (mystic number!) standard tests of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis have been applied to all we may see or hear can we feel reasonably sure that our opinions or emotions have not been unconsciously influenced.

But now, to complicate matters still further, comes a distinction between "good propaganda" and "bad." The distinction is drawn in an article in the American Teacher by Dr. William Heard Kilpatrick.

Dr. Kilpatrick cites the recent campaign of information about cancer, and about the possibilities of cure in the earlier stages. Since "good propaganda" is based on a disinterested ethic it is really a form of education. Good propaganda, like education, enables "people to decide wisely for themselves," while bad propaganda "is an intentionally inadequate kind of education . . . selfishly effective for the benefit of the bad propagandists."

However, Dr. Kilpatrick makes a further distinction between propaganda and "indoctrination." Unlike propaganda, all indoctrination is bad. It means fastening "our present ideas—from whatever source derived—so that they can never be open-mindedly reconsidered and, if need be, revised." Thus even to indoctrinate a child in the principles of democracy is, according to Dr. Kilpatrick, "essentially undemocratic." Instead he construes the duty of the teacher in a democratic society as "not to make converts to my cause, but to foster independent thinking and decision on the part of all whom I touch, independent it may be even to the rejecting of my cause."

This is certainly an altruistic viewpoint. But it is easy to see that if Dr. Kilpatrick's system were applied with complete logic and consistency it would lead to some rather strange and interesting complications.

The multiplication table, for instance, is certainly indoctrination in the decimal system of numeration. Dr. Kilpatrick, therefore, would no doubt feel obliged to remind the child that there is no necessity whatever of going through the drudgery of memorizing the tables, if one elects instead to follow, say, the binary system invented by Leibnitz a couple of centuries ago.

A Peace Policy

In his Thanksgiving Day speech before the annual New England Conference, sponsored by the governors and other leaders in those States, Assistant Secretary of State Messersmith outlined the role which the Administration thinks the United States should play in the creation of a new peace system. As the first comprehensive public indication of official policy on this vital subject, Mr. Messersmith's words deserve the closest attention.

Naturally the Assistant Secretary of State spoke for the most part in generalities. In the midst of a war of uncertain outcome it is difficult for a belligerent, and impossible for a neutral government, to speak with precision on the peace system which should follow that war. Nonetheless Mr. Messersmith went a long way in indicating a definite policy on the part of this Government.

"A sound and healthy reconstruction of international economic relationships," he said, must be the first endeavor of the United States in "creating and maintaining a more stable basis for peace." The problem, however, "will have to be attacked in a comprehensive manner, not only from the angle of economic stabilization . . . but from the angles of political adjustment as well. These problems are interdependent and closely integrated."

Once "the basic factors of political and economic discord between nations have been remedied," progress may be expected in the collective limitation of armaments, correctly described by Mr. Messersmith as "another essential problem with which the United States is vitally concerned." His observation that no nation "can afford indefinitely to devote large proportions of its substance to the pilling up of sterile armaments" was underlined yesterday by the President's hints regarding the imposition of special defense taxes.

In other words, the reciprocal trade agreements program, so ardently sponsored by Secretary Hull, is only the first of three lines along which the Administration proposes to approach the problems of postwar settlement.

Trade agreements must be supplemented, in the first place, by a helpful attitude towards new political settlements. In this connection the Assistant Secretary of State says that the Administration is willing to reconsider the Far Eastern picture, provided that "any revision which may take place" is carried out collectively "rather than by unilateral action on the part of any one power."

And a liberal trade policy must be supplemented, in the second place, by a collective policy towards limitation of armaments. That also implies active and perhaps continuous international consultation.

What international machinery such a program would require, and what part the United States should play in the development and operation of such machinery, Mr. Messersmith left to the imagination of his listeners. He did, however, provide a fairly broad hint in summarizing, at the outset of his remarks, the trend of development in Pan-American relations.

In the course of six years, he pointed out, our foreign policy in this hemisphere has proceeded from the wholly negative position of collectively condemning intervention to the very positive action of consulting collectively in behalf of common Pan-American interests. Definite international machinery is now being established to make this "continental solidarity" effective.

A somewhat similar course of evolution in its policy towards world collaboration is presumably foreseen by the Administration when it says, through the spokesmanship of Mr. Messersmith, that "with strict regard to American interests we shall seek to assist, by every practicable means, in the establishment of conditions which will assure stable peace."

Rolling Merrily Along

For three winters now the Civic Theater has demonstrated its ability to fill an important place in the intellectual life of Washington. A community theater, professionally directed and staffed, with a large and experienced acting group from which to draw, it has repeatedly presented plays here which otherwise could not have been seen in the Capital. Among these have been such important productions as "One-Third of a Nation . . .," "It Can't Happen Here," "Yellow Jack," and "Johnny Johnson."

With this impressive backdrop, the Civic Theater inaugurates its fourth year tomorrow night at Wardman Park, presenting the entertaining drama, "Merrily We Roll Along." Much attended and much praised in New York several years ago, nine sets and a cast of almost 100 people prevented "Merrily We Roll Along" from doing that on the road.

Three more plays have been definitely chosen to follow it, and balloting by audiences will determine the final three of the season. This, coupled with the fact that a local playwright may again have his work produced, should give Washington playgoers an additional interest in this Washington enterprise.

Although attendance has varied according to production, many plays have been seen by three and four thousand Washingtonians and have played for as many as twelve performances. Despite this evident enthusiasm, the group's hope for a theater of its own in an accessible downtown section remains unfulfilled

For some time there has existed a recognized need for a small auditorium, seating between 500 and 1,500, in which a number of local cultural institutions could find a permanent home. In view of the importance of the place the Civic Theater has created for itself, it would seem that the city has a certain responsibility to assist its search for quarters at least approaching the ideal.

Domestic Trade Walls

Secretary Hopkins' proposal to establish an interdepartmental committee for the study of interstate trade barriers apparently would not involve any interference in the conduct of State business. The committee is to serve as a clearing house of information, and a sort of liaison agency between the Federal Government and the Council of State Governments. With its activities thus limited in scope the proposed committee ought to be able to function most effectively in support of State efforts to remove unreasonable hindrances to interstate trade.

State governments, local business and civic associations throughout the country are at last fully aware of the need for remedial action. The Council of State Governments has done excellent work in calling conferences for the discussion of problems raised by restrictive State laws. State legislatures have been increasingly disposed to avoid obstructive legislation. That being the case, progress in elimination of those innumerable restrictions which now hamper the free flow of commerce can best be assured by giving the State authorities free rein in solving their own problems.

In many cases solutions are most likely to be found in limited interstate compacts dealing with a single problem. The line between reasonable regulations designed to preserve the health of the community and unreasonable requirements plainly intended to cut off trade is not always easy to draw.

The responsible State officials can often find a solution of their mutual problems working in cooperation. But if the Federal authorities were to intervene to force action, there would be serious danger that the States might find their discretionary powers of control over the conduct of intrastate business seriously impaired. It is also true that full State cooperation is needed to remove many obstructive laws which can nevertheless be justified as protective regulatory measures.

Hence if progress is to be made toward reduction of State barriers the States ought to be permitted to take and keep the initative.

At Gravelly Point

Visitors to the Netherlands have often marveled at the constructive enterprise and ingenuity of the Dutch in wresting a domain out of the sea.

But in a small way, the Washington area has its own Zuider Zee in the Potomac. Over a period of many months, giant pumps and dredges have been sucking tons of muck from the bottom of the river at Gravelly Point, depositing it on the land, pumping out the surplus water and creating a new shoreline. The entire configuration of the Virginia landscape at that spot is in the process of being changed.

It was in 1927 that the need of a new airport for Washington first became evident. There followed years of interminable discussion as to where it should be located. The claims of Gravelly Point as the most desirable site were first advanced almost a decade ago. But it was not until September of last year that the final decision favoring this spot for the new airport was reached and the order given the Army Engineering Corps to go ahead.

Since then the Gravelly Point airport has literally been rising before one's eyes. And it is good to hear from Col. Sumpter Smith, who is in charge of construction, that by next July the preliminary work of filling and dredging will be practically completed. By the following October, he predicts, the airport will probably be in full operation.

These are days when man's destructive capacity is, alas, only too much to the fore. Cities representing the accumulated thought and labor of centuries are in danger of being blown to bits. Man's ingenuity is being applied with a vengeance to humanity's undoing. It is good to know, therefore, that mankind today is not wholly engaged in the work of destruction; that here and there throughout the earth man in his most attractive role of builder is still functioning.

For Americans it is particularly suitable that one striking evidence of the constructive capacity of the human race is to be found within sight of the Capitol and that this construction is designed to advance an art—the art of flight—which in less favored parts of the world is today largely identified with the most destructive of man's activities—war.

We've been using the same desk 15 years and every day we find a new place on it to lose something.

Bribe Money

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: Last spring, the average American citizen was shocked when Judge Manton, senior Court of Appeals Federal judge, was found guilty of accepting bribes from interested litigants.

Most of us small town citizens had become thoroughly inured to the delinquencies of municipal courts. We were constantly aware of the political connections in the great cities like New York and Chicago. But down in our hearts we all had a really great reverence for the Federal courts.

We knew, of course, that some of the judges occasionally suffered from indigestion, but corruption in the Federal courts was unheard of. Particularly here in Michigan were we proud of the record of our judges. And then this Manton thing took us completely by surprise.

The fact remains that the housecleaning of the Federal courts resulted in prison sentences. That great political reporter, Mr. Lincoln Steffens, always took the position that political bribery could only be possible when two parties participated, the politician who received the bribe and the big businessman who paid it. Manton was sent to jail. I am writing to know whatever happened to the businessmen who paid the bribes. Certainly, if Manton was guilty, the people who paid him the money must have some responsibility.

And then there was the Prendergast case in Kansas City. The boss is now in the penitentiary along with his insurance commissioner, both of whom participated in political bribery. Yet the executives who paid this bribe money have not as yet been brought to book. HOMER GUCK.

The Truck Controversy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The recent charges of Secretary Ickes against truck drivers were teeming with ignorance. Truck drivers have frequently been made the scapegoat for all the material difficulties and perils involved in traveling on a congested highway.

For the past six years I have frequently hitchhiked over United States route 1. Traveling salesmen, who are on the road every day, have invariably told me that truck drivers were the most skilled, cautious, cooperative, and courteous drivers on the road. HOWARD CARWILE.

Army And Navy Union

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has come to my attention that solicitors are canvassing Washington using the name Army and Navy Union as their sponsors in the sale of candy.

I would like you to inform the public through your paper that the Army and Navy Union is not soliciting funds and that anyone using our name for such soliciting is using it without our knowledge and permission. MILTON J. ECKERT.

"A Dangerous Precedent"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial in The Post of November 19, entitled "A Dangerous Precedent," draws conclusions about the collective bargaining agreement between the C. I. O. Cafeteria and Office Workers Unions and the Welfare and Recreation Association, which are based on only a partial statement of facts.

To be most charitable with your editorial writer, his assertion that the "Federal Treasury is used as a mechanism to influence employes of this association to join the C. I. O." is completely without basis in fact.

The Federal Treasury happens to be the institution which the cafeteria management uses for its pay roll transactions. The management could very well use a private banking institution. The Treasury Department had nothing to do with the terms of the agreement signed by the cafeteria management. In no way is it being used to influence workers to join any union.

By an equally mysterious twist of reasoning you conjure up "an agency so closely related to the Government" out of an association whose trustees happen to be Government officials. The implication you try to convey is that this cafeteria chain has in reality some kind of governmental status.

If a group of men who happen to work for the Government get a concession from the Government to conduct a lunchroom business in Yellowstone Park, that enterprise would be no more an "agency closely related to the Government" than these cafeterias. The Welfare and Recreation Association is a private corporation. The contract it has entered into with the Federal Government does not change its private status any more than that of Bethlehem Steel, which contracts to supply battleships to the U. S. Navy.

Your editorial expresses concern about employes being "coerced" into joining the C. I. O. union as a result of the check-off. Post readers should in all fairness have the following facts at their disposal:

As result of an election in which the C. I. O. received 541 votes with about 100 cast against it, the union was certified as collective bargaining agent for all employes in that establishment.

All the cafeteria workers whose dues are checked off, in secret ballot signed a card authorizing such deduction. Instead of requiring union membership of all employes, the contract this year as well as last year gives an out to those who wish it by permitting them to elect the deduction to the Community Chest.

In the course of the negotiations, the union offered several alternatives which did not contain the check-off. To cite one example, the union proposed that the wage increases and other provisions favorable to the workers, accrue only to union members. This, along with other proposals, was rejected, despite the fact that before the first union contract there did exist the greatest wage differences for men doing the same work at the same place.

To take the dollar-a-month deduction only from union members would be grossly unfair. The contract established new and splendid conditions of employment—higher wages, vacation and arbitration procedures—none of which existed heretofore. Unfortunately, there are human beings graceless enough, who in the face of the most obvious advantages a union can win for them, will accept everything and yet refuse to share in the responsibility of maintaining that union.

It is a good thing to believe, as I do, that the human race has a relatively small number of such persons, and their number will dwindle as anti-union propaganda decreases. SIDNEY R. KATZ,

Secretary-Treasurer, Md. and D. C. Industrial Union Council.

American Isolation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post constantly emphasizes the need for tolerance among the American people who are the most tolerant in the world, yet The Post manifests obvious intolerance toward those who disagree with it. I refer in particular to its attitude toward the millions of Americans whom it dubs "isolationists" as though this word implied an odious stigma. As an example, on October 31, The Post printed a cartoon captioned "Fellow Travelers," picturing what was intended to be a contemptuous-looking bigot labeled "Isolationism" marching with Joseph Stalin, marked "Communism."

In Raymond Moley's new book, "After Seven Years," is a letter to President Roosevelt, dated November 30, 1935, in which he wrote "There are, of course, two extreme views with respect to our foreign policy, the one advocating utter isolation, the other complete entanglement. If I were to describe your following realistically, I should say that on the whole, your most loyal followers lean toward the first point of view." Though Mr. Roosevelt has changed over to the other side, a clean-cut vote of the American people would show that 90 per cent of them now wish their Government to follow its long and historic course of non-entanglement in the controversies and wars between foreign governments.

The fact that The Post and other interventionists stigmatize all these Americans as "isolationists" would in no way affect the result, for the wisdom of the Nation's founders, experience and realistic common sense is their basis for this conviction. The term isolation and especially its stigmatic implications is quite new in this country. It certainly had no such significance in England where it was proudly used for a hundred years. After the collapse of Napoleon in 1814, Great Britain boasted of her "grand isolation" from the wars on the continent. She expressed the determination to let Europe stew in its own juice, while she accumulated riches from the development of her empire and foreign trade.

President Roosevelt said three years ago before the rise of events which lead to the present war, "We shun political commitments which might entangle us in foreign wars—we are not isolationist except in so far as we seek to isolate ourselves completely from war." That is all that Washington or any other American ever contended for, or will continue to contend for so long as they have a voice in the affairs of their Government.

Men's Reaction

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the letter entitled "To The Ladies," the views expressed seem to be definitely those of a misogynist

P. D. is quite right when he finds fault with the peculiarities of the opposite sex, but he should keep it quiet, for—if they did not do those awful things, how would we men be able to feel superior?

I believe that men's reactions to women may be summed up in the paradoxical sentence: Phooey to women, God bless 'em!

Excalibur

The lonesomest thing in the world, I think, is a cornstalk standing in a stripped hill-field, a lone cornstalk in a field of stubble.

Long since, the sickle missed him: now he grows old. He withers in his skeleton blades and shuckles his querulous plaints in the dry winds, and the gaunt November days slink past him like starved hounds driven from doorways. They skulk for their few hours in the outskirts of time, and then they move on, and he ages.

Once, long ago, I knew such a cornstalk. I called him Excalibur—a result of fifth-grade erudition. I didn't know what Excalibur meant, but to me it had a lugubrious sound and it came from the Knights of the Round Table tales, so I associated it with a rusty saber rattling in its scabbard. It seemed, at that time, the most appropriate name I could give the old patriarch of the fields.

As I remember those days, Excalibur had me hoaxed. He was a wicked old devil, and there was something almost unholy about him—the kind of awesome anomaly that clings to the very, very aged. You know, the feeling you have that they're from another world, or another life. It's frightening, sometimes, to find them among the living.

If I could have avoided Excalibur I would have been a much happier fifth-grader; but in my small world he was almost omnipresent, standing alone in a stark field, in plain view of the house, near a fence that followed the country road out of sight. Every time I went out-of-doors he fixed me with a baleful eye—an Ancient Mariner of the fields.

But it was only when I had to pass him, when I delivered milk in the early dark of the evenings, or came home from school later than usual, that I really possessed the timorous heart of the recreant. Old Excalibur would leer at me, then, through the gloomy dusk, and I could almost see him pulling at a gray beard with a desiccated hand.

He chortled at such times, I know, conjuring out of some demonical sense of humor the kind of heinous laughter some old people have, as though the joke were on everybody else. The laugh kind of cackled and licked its lips, and it wasn't a very reassuring sound to me. I had to go almost half a mile beyond him, and I knew it would be dead night when I returned.

It was always when I drew alongside Excalibur that I ran, and I can still hear the milk bottles clinking together in the wire trays I carried. That, and Excalibur's laughter following me down the road.

I guess the neighbors wondered, sometimes, why I always loitered around the kitchen when I brought their milk. There were ten families in that little settlement, and we delivered milk to all of them. The men worked at the coal mines a couple of miles away, and they were a rather improvident people. At least they didn't keep cows or chickens, or even pigs, and my mother said it was a "pity" they didn't try to "save," though my father said he was damn glad they didn't, for where in the hell would he market the milk if they did. You can see my father was an expressive cuss.

We didn't have anything but "business relations" with them, and I had been admonished many times by my mother to keep the milk delivery on that plane; but when I thought of old Excalibur, waiting out there in the fearful night, I welcomed the social delays of those evenings, though they usually meant a quirting with the birch when I got home.

On the way back I'd find Excalibur had set the stage for me. A white moon, so cold looking it was like the face of death, would be floating through the sky like a disembodied head, and the wispy clouds that trailed diaphanously in its wake could have been selected from the wardrobe of a ghost.

If you've ever been a fifth-grader on a lonely country road you know it's on nights like these, beneath such moons, that the late November specters revel. The banshees come out and howl in the weird winds and inhabit the shadows; and the owl's hoot is eery, like a graveyard spirit wailing that it lost its way.

You can almost see the winds from the mournful sound of them—as though they're moaning through death's-heads and rattling their bones in sudden gusts of ghoulish exertion.

The trees, waving stark branches under the moon, are phantoms performing some macabre fetish; and the wind, when it isn't otherwise engaged, wails somber dirges for them—but the dry leaves keep the winds pretty busy. They're the demons of the night, scudding before the wind like hoodlums screaming a skirlish laughter, and scurrying across a stubbled field, as fast as retribution, to chase a small fifth-grader home.

But, fast as the dry leaves traveled on these windy nights in November, they were never half as fast as the fifth-grader scampering up that road, the terrors of the night in close pursuit. Long after I had gained the door and gone to bed I could hear old Excalibur shuckling his laughter from his skeleton blades.

The Rise Of Bioff

WILLIE BIOFF, convicted of pandering in 1922, who became the labor dictator of the entire amusement industry, arrived at his position of power in the guise of bodyguard for George E. Browne, also of Chicago, who is president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Motion Picture Operators of the United States and Canada.

This enormous union of the manual and mechanical crafts of the stage, the screen and the night clubs is an important unit of the American Federation of Labor. Like many strictly local Chicago unions, it is ruled by strong-arm methods enforced by racketeers who never have been identified with toil or with the labor movement in the honest sense of the term.

Browne was appointed receiver of the Motion Picture Operators Union of Chicago, a union legitimate in form but conducted as a racket, when Tommy Maloy, the business agent, was killed or "pushed" several years ago. Maloy was shot dead by persons unknown who overhauled his car with another as he was driving on a Chicago boulevard. The job had paid Maloy enormous but incalculable sums.

Browne Felt Need Of A Bodyguard

THE UNION was notorious as a racket and in view of the fate that befell Maloy it was not strange that Browne felt the need of a bodyguard.

Browne's nominal rule in the presidency of the I. A. T. S. E. and the M. P. O., commonly known as the stagehands' union, was attended by a great increase in membership and power. Browne named Bioff personal representative in the rich field of the Hollywood movie industry, where the Chicago panderer, with all but eight days to serve of a six months sentence, soon became boss. Bioff also cast covetous eyes on the brisk but somewhat amateurish union of the motion picture actors and after several threatening gestures, he and Browne last summer made an audacious attempt to kidnap into their organization all the unions of the performers of the stage, screen, night clubs and radio. The details are too intricate for review at this time, but the crisis in the affairs of all the performers occurred in the reopening in New York after a lay-off of the musical show "Leave It to Me."

Incidentally, this show is now playing in Chicago. The controversy reached a point in which Browne and Bioff threatened to tie up the American amusement industry and all its branches if the performers refused to come in. The actors realized that under Bioff they would be reduced to the status of contributors to the union funds and subject to his hoodlum whims and financial wants. Therefore, they determined to strike for their jurisdiction and in this situation Browne, at the last moment, backed down.

Selfish Ends Gained, Actors Laud Bioff

THE MOTION picture actors, who had been denouncing Bioff as a hoodlum without actually knowing the facts of his criminal background in Chicago, then betrayed principle by lauding Bioff for his efforts in bringing about the settlement.

When their own selfish ends were gained the actors ceased to agitate the moral question which lately they had been urging for public consideration. They had been afraid that Bioff would lay a gross-income tax on their huge salaries and his character and his acts toward those who belonged to the various branches of the stagehands' union ceased to interest them the minute they were safe.

In California, Carey McWilliams, author of "Factories in the Fields," the more or less objective and more or less factual story of the farm-labor problem, was interested in an attempt to form a C. I. O. union of the mechanical and technical trades in the movie industry. McWilliams, a member of the cabinet of Gov. Olson, is a radical laborite. He, too, had heard that Bioff had a criminal record but, like the actors and the bulldozed studio workers and others subjugated by Bioff, lacked exact information.

Union Head Loaned $100,000 By Magnate

BIOFF RECEIVED $100,000 from a moving picture magnate in 1937 and when this transaction was disclosed in an inquiry at Sacramento, it was explained the money was a loan, not a gift. The impropriety of the acceptance of such a loan from an employer by a representative of the workers was not emphasized for long. However, Bioff's income tax has been under investigation and the administration of the union which he dominates also has attracted the official attention of the Department of Justice.

Bioff never was a worker in any of the theatrical or moving picture trades or professions and never was elected to high office in the regular manner. He got there as Browne's bodyguard and personal representative and it is only now disclosed nationally to the members of the union which he rules that he still owes time on a sentence imposed in 1922 on proof that, in a specific instance, he accepted from a woman $79 which she had earned that day by entertaining thirteen men as a prostitute in a West Side dive.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Recovery Of A Lost Wisdom

OUR GREAT-GRANDFATHERS understood far better than do we the principles which draw men together into political unions of free men. They lived in an age when those very things were being achieved which men now think are infinitely desirable but in practice unattainable. For the period from about 1780 to about 1870 was one of increasing freedom for the individual and of an expanding unity among divided and separated communities. But since 1870, the world has been moving away from liberty and into ever more anarchical disunion.

If now we are to arrest the reactionary movement into disorder and to resume the truly progressive movement towards liberty and union, we shall have to learn again what our great-grandfathers knew, and we shall have to unlearn the errors of the well-meaning but radically misguided progressives of the past two generations.

The lost wisdom of our forefathers was in their discovery, during the experience of the eighteenth century, that the way to make men free is to replace the decrees and commands of a ruling class by a system of equal laws. They were not anarchists when they said that the best government is the one which governs least; they were not advocating a general lawlessness and license. On the contrary, they were advocating more law and less lawless overhead directing and managing by public officials. They understood that the individual is free in so far as his life is regulated not by the arbitrary commands of other men but by general rules which bind all men alike.

Men Become United By Trade Freedom

THEY DISCOVERED also that the way to unite free men in larger and larger political unions is not to construct new, gigantic and overpowering centralized governments but the very opposite of this: to remove the barriers, to repeal the privileges, to disestablish the monopolies, which interfere with the free exchange of goods and services, and thus separate men into small, warring, jealous groups each with its vested interest.

These were the two cardinal principles by which our forefathers were guided: that the individual becomes free by the development of law, and that men become united by freedom of trade. Under the aegis of these principles they carried out an unprecedented emancipation of the individual and they accomplished a series of unifications which put us to shame.

In the period between 1780 and 1870 there took place the unification of the liberated American States, of the Canadian provinces, of the revolted Portuguese and Spanish colonies, of the German kingdoms and principalities, and of the Italian. Is it not a striking fact, a curious and most significant fact, that since 1870 this movement has not only been arrested but has been reversed, that instead of a tendency toward more and more comprehensive unions there has been an ever more violent tendency toward disintegration and separatism? Up to 1870 it was natural for men to believe that it was desirable and practical to unite, let us say, Prussia and Bavaria, or Piedmont and Tuscany and Naples. But after 1870 it no longer seemed desirable or practicable to federate Belgium and Holland, or the Scandinavian countries, or the Balkan nations, when they were liberated from Turkish rule, or the Danubian nations when the Hapsburg empire collapsed.

Government Made More Bureaucratic

THERE MUST BE some reason for this reactionary tendency away from the larger unity which people must have if they are to be safe and are to prosper. That reason, I believe, is that after 1870 the intellectual leaders of the progressive nations lost their understanding of the principle of free trade and turned from liberalism towards socialism and protectionism.

They were under the impression, of course, that they could reform the abuses of capitalism not by continuing to reduce special privileges but by giving public officials more and more power to manage men's affairs. As a result they made government more and more bureaucratic, more and more arbitrary. The effect, as was shown in the case of Austria-Hungary, was to drive men into rebellion against centralized authority, only to have the liberated peoples set up in their turn equally centralized authority in smaller areas. The tragedy of Czecho-Slovakia, for example, was that the Czechs repeated in their little country precisely the same mistakes which had caused them to revolt against the Hapsburg empire. They were centralizing collectivists, and collectivism disunites. They were children of their epoch. The epoch since 1870 has been the epoch of collectivism and, in consequence, the epoch of declining liberty and increasing disunion.

I realize, of course, that stated in this summary fashion the argument is likely to persuade only those who are already disposed to accept the conclusion. A newspaper article is only a newspaper article, but this subject is one of great complexity, and to see the conclusion demonstrated, and not merely to have it asserted as I have done here, requires the reading of the many books which have been written in the past two decades to prepare the revival and reconstruction of liberalism.

European Union Planned By Liberals

THE MOVEMENT today towards European union is inspired and is led not by socialists and planners and so-called internationalists but by men who in the exact and classic meaning of the word are liberals. What is going on in Europe today cannot be understood unless it is understood that the actuating and directing forces behind the movement towards European union are recruited from men who are in conscious revolt against protectionism, collectivism, planned economy, restrictionism, and bureaucratic centralization. These unionists have no idea of erecting some monstrous superstate which is to plan and manage the life and labor of the peoples of Europe from a central seat of authority. They know perfectly well that the diverse peoples of Europe cannot be organized and coerced into unity; that crude fallacy is being exploded by the horrible spectacle of the Communist and Nazi attempt to impose unity by force instead of unity by freedom.

It has been a spectacle of this totalitarian failure abroad, and it has been the experience of the collectivist failure of the Labor Party in England and the Popular Front in France, which have raised to power men like M. Paul Reynaud, to cite one great name, who are educated and convinced liberals. It is much too early to say that these liberals have persuaded all their countrymen. But it is not too early to say that their influence is growing, and at critical points is already decisive, because the protectionist collectivist doctrine is so obviously bankrupt.

Reaction Sets In Against Collectivism

FOR MY OWN part I have great faith in the practical possibilities of the present movement towards European union because there is such strong evidence, I think, that the reaction against collectivism has set in among Europeans. The deeper tides of opinion are, I believe, now running everywhere in favor of a return to those principles which between 1780 and 1870 made for freedom through unity and for unity through freedom.

Otherwise, if this present movement for union were just another scheme for organizing a mechanical salvation, it would amount to little more than one of those mirages which men dying of thirst in the desert see on the distant horizon. But, in fact, this present movement for union arises out of an experience like that which our forefathers had been through, and it is actuated by the same principles which worked so well for the liberators and the unifiers in the days of our great-grandparents.

So we may allow ourselves to have faith. These principles were not cleverly improvised the day before yesterday. And a cause which is grounded in the wisdom of the past is likely to hold genuine promise for the future.

Johnson's Majority Record for Kentucky

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 24 (AP).—A record majority of 106,130 votes for Gov. Keen Johnson, Democrat, over Republican nominee King Swope was shown in official returns from the November 7 election filed in the secretary of state's office today.

The compilation showed Johnson had 460,834 votes to 354,704 for Swope, greatest lead in any Kentucky gubernatorial race.

Sino-Koreans Hit Japanese Propaganda

Charge Institute of Pacific Relations With Spreading It in U. S.

The American Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations, now in session at Virginia Beach, Va., was charged yesterday with aiding and encouraging Japanese propaganda in the United States, and so weakening the security of the United States in the Pacific area."

The charge was made by Kilsoo K. Haan, Washington representative of the Sino-Korean People's League, in an open letter to Philip C. Jessup, council president.

Haan, who claimed that his organization voiced the sentiment of Koreans living in Hawaii and the United States, petitioned for Korean representation in the institute, and urged the American council to investigate its policies which, he said, furthered "Japanization activities."

Through its assistance to the cultural promotion bureau of the Japanese foreign office in building up pro-Japanese sentiment in American schools and colleges, Haan charged, the Institute of Pacific Relations has become morally a party to Japanese aggression in China.

"The Japanese militarists and their cultural propaganda are gradually weakening Americanism in the Pacific," said Haan. He added that Viscount K. Ishii, vice chairman of the institute's international committee and chairman of its Japan council, also heads two Japanese propaganda agencies: The Institute for the Education of Oversea Japanese and the Society for International Cultural Relations.

5,402 Auto Trucks, Cost $7,000,000, Ordered for Army

By the Associated Press

The War Department published today orders for 5,402 motor trucks costing approximately $7,000,000 which will be used largely to speed the transporation of five new "streamlined" infantry divisions.

The orders were included in War Department contracts totaling $16,856,165 awarded during the first half of November for arms, supplies and construction.

The largest award totaled $3,832,255 and went to the Fargo Motor Corporation, Detroit, for 3,122 one and one-half ton cargo trucks.

The same firm was given an order for 491 one and one-half ton trucks costing $740,182 and for 323 trucks of the same size costing $411,986.

The Yellow Truck and Coach Manufacturing Co., Pontiac, Mich., received a $2,970,976 order for 1,45 two and one-half ton trucks and a contract for 21 vehicles of the same size costing $49,683.

The Chevrolet division, General Motors Corporation, Detroit, was awarded a $312,475 contract for 303 ambulances, a $151,522 contract for 260 light sedans and a $8,501 contract for 14 one-half ton trucks.

Conferees Study How to Make Apples' Faces Red

Horticulturists attending the sixteenth annual Cumberland-Shenandoah Fruit Conference at the University of Maryland yesterday set themselves to the task of figuring out how to grow more red apples.

Dr. A. Lee Schraeder, head of the university's department of horticulture, explained redder apples bring a higher market price "because of their superior coloring and appearance."

Eighty delegates, including entomologists and pathologists, are attending the conference, which will continue through today. The conference embraces the District of Columbia, Virginia, West Virginia, Delaware, Pennsylvania, New York, Maryland and North Carolina.

German Sociologist To Address Seminary

Leonardtown, Md., Nov. 24.—Dr. Alice Saloman, writer and lecturer, formerly of Berlin Germany, will lecture on "The Nazi Attack on Civilization" at St. Mary's Female Seminary at St. Marys City on December 6.

Dr. Saloman was born in Berlin in 1872 and has long been identified with movements for the betterment of social conditions. She has received numerous medals for her work both abroad and in this country.

In 1937 her work in the service of Germany was interrupted by an order of expulsion from Germany from the Nazi secret police.

Evangelical Leaders Urge Peace Parley

Norse Primates Ask Belligerents to Meet With Oslo Neutrals

By International News Service

Oslo, Nov. 24.—Another neutral effort to end the war was launched today by the conference of Scandinavian Evangelical primates meeting in Oslo.

The conference adopted a resolution inviting representatives of the belligerents to meet separately with representatives of the northern neutral countries in an effort to find grounds on which negotiations to end the war can be based.

The primates also voted to send a letter to Evangelical communicants, leaders and churches within the belligerent countries dealing with problems which it is believed the churches of the neutral powers could help solve.

In addition, an appeal was sent to members of the church in the northern neutral nations emphasizing the need for maintaining Christian unity despite the war.

Even before the outbreak of hostilities the Oslo group, composed of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Belgium, Holland, Finland and Luxemburg, made pleas to France, England and Germany to refrain from again plunging Europe into war.

After the declaration of war, King Leopold of Belgium and Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands offered to mediate between the belligerents.

National Bank Assets at New High

Preston Delano, comptroller of the currency, said last night that total assets of national banks increased $1,504,098,000 between June 30 and October 2, reaching the highest total in the hitsory of the banking system.

Returns on the October 2 call for condition statements from the 5,202 banks showed total assets of $34,684,676,000. Reporting to the previous call on June 30 were 5,209 banks. The October 2 total was an increase of $3,973,730,000 over the amount reported on September 28, 1938, by 5,245 banks.

On October 2 deposits aggregated $30,980,693,000, an increase of $1,511,224,000 over the June 30 and an increase of $3,876,812,000 over September last year.

Linke Urges More Vocational Schools Here

Establishment of additional vocational schools in the District was urged last night by John A. Linke, chief of the agricultural vocation education service of the U. S. Office of Education at a meeting of the Washington Civitan Club.

Speaking at the clubhouse, 100 Anacostia road northeast, Linke described training in the specialized schools, provided for under the George Deen act, as vital for present-day youth.

Vocational training should not supplant but be carried on simultaneously with academic work, Linke said.

Md. School Board May Appeal Dual Pay Injunction

Annapolis, Nov. 24 (AP).—Decision whether to appeal the Federal Court decision ordering the Anne Arundel County School Board to cease salary discrimination against colored teachers in the public schools will be decided at a meeting of the board on December 6.

The injunction was issued by Federal Judge W. Calvin Chestnut. However, the school board has not received an official copy of the court order, and can not reach a decision until the specific terms of the order are known. The decision was rendered verbally, but must be confirmed in the formal order.

Under State law, the board can not reduce the salaries of white teachers. If the decision stands, the county must raise the pay of the colored instructors to parity. The order, if not appealed, would cost the county between $30,000 and $40,000 annually, equivalent to a 7-cent increase in the county tax structure.

Wilford L. White was made head of the combined editorial, correspondence and commercial intelligence divisions of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce yesterday in the latest of a series of reorganizations in this major bureau of the Commerce Department. Nelson Miller assumes White's former post as chief of the marketing research division.

Now an Author, Rural Lawyer Aspires to Be a Rural Editor

Bellamy Partridge, Rolling in Profits From Book, Tells Cosmos Club How Progress Has Fattened Titles on Shingles

Bellamy Partridge, the up-State New Yorker who made the Nation country lawyer conscious with a best-selling book, now wants to own a country weekly.

This he said here yesterday after finishing a swordfish and sweet potato luncheon at the Cosmos Club.

He didn't say it as if springing anything, because Partridge long was a newspaperman and all of them, it is supposed, want to own and run country weeklies.

Also he was surrounded by important figures of the Washington bar, who were talking some country law with him; by some newspaper people who suggested the weekly paper idea would be a way of losing the money he made from the book, "The Country Lawyer," and by his publishers' representatives who insisted he would next do a great family book.

So Partridge, instead, for the moment at least, began admiring the tall, lovely rooms in the club. And, to keep a strictly conventional publishers' luncheon in order, he spoke of how three publishers turned down the best seller. And then someone else told how the three publishers were attacked by the business fidgets after a fourth publisher published the book and it hit.

Partridge thinks the country lawyer is among America's lasting personalities, despite the sophistication automobiles, good roads and radio have brought to the hinterlands. But he has changed.

"I went the other day into my father's old law office in Phelps, N. Y., and the gentleman who succeeded to the business remarked that my book suggested the country lawyer had changed.

"I looked at the sign on his door. 'Attorney-at-Law, Real Estate and Insurance, it read" said Partridge. "My father had only 'Lawyer' on his shingle. So something was happening."

Resurgence Of Loyalty

'Isms' Advocates Disillusioned

FOR A Thanksgiving message that all may share, an appropriate time is this week-end—midway between the Thanksgiving that was celebrated in 25 States last Thursday and the one that will be celebrated in 23 States next Thursday.

America—if we speak of America alone and not the world—America really has grounds for giving thanks. We have escaped, for the time at least, that internal conflict that was our most somber danger.

A year ago, six months ago, even three months ago, America seemed headed for the struggle between Communism and Nazi-Fascism that has tragically bedeviled four-fifths of the countries of Europe.

There were among us many who took inspiration from Communist Russia—and some who took direct instruction from it. The movement amounted, in effect, to a conspiracy. At the top, on the front, it was highly organized. It had footholds in some labor unions, some churches, many schools, a part of the press, and even in government.

In reaction against the Communist movement, there were many who—in some cases consciously, others unconsciously—turned to the Nazi-Fascist ideal. This was a tendency rather than an organization. There was never in America any Fascist movement connected with the Fascist regime in Italy. There was an organized Nazi movement, but it amounted to much less than the noise it made and very much less than the Communist movement. No one ever charged that the Nazi movement had got any identifiable foothold in schools or churches or press or government.

Nazi-Soviet Pact Opened Many Eyes

BUT SO LONG as the Communist movement was growing it was certain that the reaction against it would go to the extreme of Nazi-Fascism. That is what happened in practically all the European areas, noticeably and recently in Spain. With us, as elsewhere, it was a struggle between two extremes of ideology—both having contempt for democracy. With us, as elsewhere, it would have gone on to a struggle between Communism and Nazi-Fascism to see which should get possession of the seat of a slain democracy. Democracy did not even have the status of a contender—it was a victim for whose place the others fought.

Then, last September, came the alliance between Russian Communism and German Naziism. That was as portentous an event to America as to Europe. It opened the eyes of all to what the thoughtful already realized—that fundamentally Communism and Nazi-Fascism are so closely related as to be one; that the two are merely different forms of a conception of dictatorship in government and denial of individual right in society.

The effect of this realization was double. Upon the sinister, the direct agents of the foreign isms, the effect was exposure. They and their isms were discredited. The American head of Naziism, Kuhn, and the American head of Communism, Browder, are being hauled through criminal trials in which their plotting and their sordidness are exposed. A Congressional investigation will reveal still more about them and about their subordinates and dupes.

Resurgence Of Love For American Way

TO THE INNOCENT and gullible—those who adhered to the foreign isms through mere infatuation for the novel, or through temporary proneness to embrace every vague promise wearing a humanitarian cloak—to these the effect of the Communist-Nazi alliance was a disillusionment.

The net result is resurgence of loyalty and love for America's own tradition. America today is more American, our institutions are more safe, than at any time during the ten years since economic disaster shook our faith. The foreign isms and their agents are not yet fully extirpated, but everyone knows they will be. America is going to continue the American way, with improvements of the American system, the framework of our traditional forms—and with an affection increased by the consciousness of imminent peril escaped.

But if America has good reason for thanks, can we say the same about the world as a whole? The answer, unhappily, is no. Every thoughtful and well-informed source of judgment to whom this writer has access believes that the state of the world as a whole will become worse before it becomes better. We can only wait. And the anxiety of waiting is increased by the fact that no one has confident judgment about the outcome, or even about the next phase. We must suffer through a period of looking upon a world disintegrating economically and spiritually.

Menace Has Grown For Past 22 Years

WITH THE WORLD as a whole going downward, can America rise? Or even hold its level?

It is a question we must face. The threat is serious. For 22 years the menace has grown continuously. That alien conception of government which practices dictatorship, which denies individual rights or religion and opinion and property and representative government—that conception spreads now from the Pacific Ocean across half the world almost to the Atlantic. It embraces all northern Asia, all eastern Europe, all central Europe. With an armed front on the River Rhine, it threatens destruction by war not only to its avowed enemies but to the neutral nations that remain along the fringe of western Europe. And the democracies which defend themselves are obliged, as an incident of defense, to adopt the suppressions of dictatorship.

Looking upon that, America can only determine to hold fast to its own. If democracy is to perish in Europe—and with it freedom and justice and enlightenment—then let us preserve here the seed and the framework for resurrection.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Done By Mirrors

COLONEL Philip Fleming, National Wages and Hours Administrator, has made a ruling on the proper hours for football writers and sports writers in general. Time going to and from football games need not be counted, and they may work 8, 10 or 12 hours on a game, provided they keep the total week's work down to 42 hours. "During the rest of the week," says the Colonel, "sports writers probably spend only a few hours at their desks, and it all balances out."

Which reminds us of the days when nobody would seriously refer to the coverage of football classics, World Series games, hockey matches, yacht races, etc., as work.

Not That Careless

BEN THOMSON, Yale's golf instructor, has written a book, "How to Play Golf," and Aaron Abbott says that on a recent trip to the country with him, Ben talked in his sleep. In the morning Mr. Abbott said, "You were talking all through the night."

"What about?" asked Ben.

"You kept saying, 'Now take the club back slowly,' 'Remember to break your wrist' and all that sort of thing," said Abbott.

"Good heavens!" exclaimed the old Scotsman, "Don't tell me I was giving away lessons!"

A YALE student organization has invited Earl Browder, Communist leader, to speak at the college. It is just possible that, due to the poor showing of the Eli football team this season, the boys are trying to develop a forward passport play.

Shocking!

Those women's wear dummies,
They show their bare tummies;
They're immodest, brazen and bold;
Those hussies so wooden
Look just as they "shouldden"
Because they can never catch cold.

So put on some slips so
They won't show their hips so
As quickly as ever you can;
And if you can't do so
While getting the trousseau,
Just slip to each dummy a fan.

Gold has been discovered in Georgia and by this time lots of Atlanta boys must be climbing into their old prospector's clothes, chucking a pick into their flivvers and starting for the hills.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Three Years Wed, Man Just Learns That Wife's Sisters Are Mental Patients; Does He Dare Have Children?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been happily married for nearly three years, and am very much in love with my wife. We are both well educated and have a mutual interest in music and sports. We own our home and have made many friends since coming to Washington. Recently, I learned that two of my wife's sisters are confined in an institution for mental treatment, and have been for several years. I had been led to believe that they were living on the West Coast, and accepted that reason for never having seen them.

Now, I am very much upset about the future of our marriage. The thought of having children makes me fear for their health, and yet the thought of a childless marriage makes the future outlook gloomy. I still love my wife, as always, and since she was taught that she should have no fear for her own children, I find it easy to excuse her failure to tell me about her sisters beforehand.

I had planned well for the future, with a nice home, friends, children and careers for the latter. But now all that is changed. Would you please give me your views on the subject? READER.

Why Not Have Children By Adoption?

DEAR READER: My view of the situation is this: You should be profoundly grateful that you have begotten no children who might have inherited the potentially disastrous strain of mental weakness which so obviously exists in your wife's family. Be thankful, also, that your wife was spared the pitiable affliction. And don't be so foolish as to think you must be forever denied children—when it is within your power to adopt children who can become as dear to you, intrinsically just as much your own, as any who might have been born to you.

Having formed the foregoing opinion with regard to the sensible attitude toward, and happy solution of, your supposed dilemma, I checked with a distinguished local physician, to obtain his point of view. He repeated, in essence, what I have said above, and further suggested that you read Amram Schienfeld's book, "You and Heredity," recently issued by Frederick A. Stokes Co. This, he tells me, is a brilliant discussion of the laws of heredity, written by a layman for laymen, and most helpfully illustrated. Already it is a best seller, I understand—and judging from the doctor's endorsement, it ought to be a "must" on every responsibly minded person's reading list.

Since you can give economic security and social and educational opportunities of a superior kind to children, it seems to me you would be acting both selfishly and shortsightedly in failing to put these gifts at the disposal of youngsters of healthy heredity who have already come into the world with no such provisions awaiting them. Perhaps you have never known families composed of foster children; but to know a few of them—as I do—is to learn that it is the reciprocal devotion of parents and children which causes them really to "belong." And as has been so often pointed out, the foster parent has the privilege of deliberately choosing his sons and daughters, whereas the natural parent is obliged to accept what the Potter provides. M. H.

Are Cutaways Obligatory At Afternoon Wedding?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: For a church wedding at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the bride wears white with a short veil, is it permissible for the men in the wedding party to wear business suits? Or is it obligatory for them to wear cutaways and striped trousers? I want to be married in white; I don't want the wedding to be too informal, and yet I don't want to put an unnecessary expense upon the men. Have you any suggestions? M. J.

Dark Business Suits Are Alternate Choice

DEAR M. J.; I am assurred by what I consider to be a "thoroughly informed source," that it is perfectly proper for men to wear dark business suits for an afternoon wedding. Cutaways and striped trousers are symbolic, usually, of the so-called "fashionable" wedding, but a beautiful ceremony for a bride in white may be quietly solemnized in equally good taste, with the men wearing navy or oxford gray sack suits. M. H.

How to Invite Guests to Tea?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am to have a house guest soon, and I want to give a tea for her. Is it permissible to invite my guests by telephone, or as I see them? And how long beforehand should they be invited? Thank you for an early reply. N. A. B.

Three Methods Frequently Used

DEAR N. A. B.: Invitations to tea may be telephoned, verbally extended or issued on calling cards. When calling cards are used, there is a brief inscription at the top of the card, "To meet Mrs. John Blank," and, below, "tea (or cocktails) from 4 to 6 (or 5 to 7)" and the date. Invitations by card are issued about two weeks ahead, as a rule.

However, smart hostesses have been known to assemble a small group for tea on 24 hours' notice or even less, in which case guests are summoned by telephone. The principal objection to very short notice is that too many of your most valued friends might prove to be previously and irrevocably "dated up." M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Art of Perfuming

The proper use of perfume is not a "lost art" to Rosemary Lane, who has very set idea about it. She believes fragrance should emanate from within the clothes, so she saturates little squares of kid with the floral scent currently intriguing her and stitches them into her hat linings, the hems of gowns and cuffs of coats.

Small Washington Homes and Apartments Need Reduced Sized Furniture, Says Expert

That a fireplace can be a focal point for achieving a pleasant background is shown in the living room pictured above. The grouping of the damask tuxedo sofa, Duncan Phyfe coffee table, English club chair with knife arm, upholstered in flowered linen, and nearby drum table is an excellent example of Miss Mary Gillies' suggestions for fireplace emphasis in home decoration. The old English prints, the attractive lamps, Chinese rug, French mirror and the flower-filled crystal horns of plenty on the mantel all blend to give the gayer accents neccessary to make a house a home

Mary Davis Gillies, Home Decoration Editor, Advises Love Seat Instead of Heavy Sofa, Also Bright Accents on Monotone Background

By Martha Ellyn.

MORE women have new houses in Washington than in any other city in the country. Even in these late years when the bottom has almost dropped out of house building in other parts of the country, Washington has proceeded in a gay fashion in its home building, says Mary Davis Gillies, editor of interior decoration, McCall's Magazine.

Martha Ellyn

On a recent visit to Washington, Miss Gillies inspected many of the homes and apartments which seem to have mushroomed into the landscape here since she was on the staff of the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture. She was especially impressed by the small houses and apartments in Arlington County, Virginia. The problem of furnishing them interested her. She said that these miniature homes must be handled in quite a different way from the average size ones and it is necessary to use small scale furniture instead of the conventional overstuffed. Love seats should be used in place of davenports or large sofas.

The advice Miss Gillies gives for the newly married or those going into a new house is not to start in "on high" but really shop for the things they like, as the taste in furnishings changes with time and income. An essential, she says, is to have an adequate floor covering to hold the picture together, and if there is not sufficient money for the better carpets and rugs, she advises the use of a good quality of rag rugs which are now woven in this country in attractive solid colors as blue, bronze and rust. They are not sleazy and will grip the floor very firmly. Never use a small scatter rug and expect to achieve any special effect in furnishings.

Center of Interest

Miss Gillies noticed the absence of fireplaces, which she thinks is one of the most important ways of having a center of interest from which to work in interior decorating. However, if there is no fireplace, a picture window can serve as the "fireplace" interest.

This interior decorator thinks that the furnishing of a home should reflect the personality of the owner. After a few moments in a room, most persons can give a description of the owner, that is, his likes and dislikes—his character. Overcrowding seems to be one of the "sins" of home furnishings. Miss Gillies suggests that a mantle should have at least three "wardrobes" and that the knick-knacks should be changed frequently. One of her pet hobbies is to have a storage place for such decorations. Color, too, she thinks, should be quiet with variations, and the hostess can introduce the accent note when she appears in the living room in a colorful dress.

Suggests Questions

Miss Gillies says that she has discovered in the last few years of making over rooms on very rigid budgets that the style of the furniture is much less important to the total effect of a room than the color scheme, furniture arrangement, window treatment and accessories. She has taken living rooms furnished with the unimaginative three-piece suites, and by using well-tailored covers on the three major pieces and using window tricks and accessories glamorous rooms have been the result.

Before you turn your thought and attention to color schemes, Miss Gillies suggests asking yourself the following questions:

Are you old-fashioned and home-loving?

Are you dramatic and modern in your point of view?

Do you entertain large or small groups?

Do you entertain at dinner, games, dancing or cocktails?

What are your family aims?

There are a wealth of ideas in the home furnishings departments of the local stores now. These shops will plan for customers without charge. Whether the shoppers are young brides furnishing their first home, bachelors taking an apartment, career women with little time for shopping around, or rugged individualists who do not want to live in a stereotyped home, there are solutions for decorations in the home.

Balinese Dancers Living Examples of Exercise's Benefits

IT'S TRUE what they say about the maidens of Bali—it is, if the dancing troupe now touring this country is a fair sample. They are really beautiful.

We're given to understand that no Balinese woman would rate a second glance in her country unless she had a slender waist, a gracefully regal carriage and a well turned ankle, so they have three points in their favor to start with.

They Use Their Heads

It seems to be natural for these girls to hold their heads proudly. They think it may be due partly to the custom of carrying things on their heads, which forces them to use the strong muscles at the sides and back of the neck. We could all have lovely throats if we used those muscles.

The arms are used constantly in all Balinese dances—and there isn't a scrawny or a flabby arm in the whole troupe! As a matter of fact, they have the most beautiful arms, shoulders and busts I have ever seen. And the explanation of the scarcity of beautiful arms and shoulders in this country is patent. We don't use our arms as much in a year as these dancers do in a single week.

Needless to say, the desk-chair spread is not one of their worries. Nor misshapen thighs! Their innumerable and intricate dance poses make use of both hip and thigh muscles in daily specific exercise.

Living Examples

When you come right down to it, these dances are as complete a set of specific exercises as could be found anywhere in the world—and their lovely figures go to show what a really good exercise program does for a girl!

Devi Dja, star of the company, is a young woman of 21. In her country she is practically an old woman! But she doesn't have to bother about her weight. It always hovers around 98 pounds, which is perfect, for the 98 pounds are all curves. None of the Balinese girls is tall—Devi Dja is only 5 feet! But her measurements are better than good: Waist, 24 inches; bust, 32 inches; hips, 34 inches; thigh, 20 inches; calf, 13 inches; ankle, 8 inches.

The Gentler Sex

Thirty Days 'Till Christmas

Well, after all, it was a good thing to get Thanksgiving over so early. Now you'll plunge right away into the Christmas shopping and get it all cleaned up so you can sit back like Mrs. Roosevelt and have everyone envy you. And then you'll be really ready to enjoy Christmas, the lights, the music, the decorations, all the happy expectation and excitement—yes, maybe you'll even have time to let a spirit of peace and goodwill and the magic sense of exaltation blossom in your heart.

You might as well go right downtown today and get started on the handkerchiefs and compacts. No, wait! This is Saturday, and there's always such a crowd.

No, the thing to do is to start in early Monday morning. Right the minute the stores open. Oh, wait, you have to go to the dentist Monday . . . And take the car to the garage to be fixed . . . And attend that club committee meeting. Well, then, Tuesday—no, the dressmaker's coming . . . and the man to set out the roses. And then the Gabbs are coming to dinner Wednesday, and you simply can't be exhausted when you face them. Well Thursday—no, that's the day of the club luncheon. And Friday's the Nitter's cocktail party. Of course you could shop in the morning—but then they'd all tell you how tired you looked. And then next Saturday—well the crowd will be even worse then, and besides you and George and the children were going to take that ride in the country.

Of course if you could sail in in a big way the first week in December you'd still have plenty of time. No, that's the week the Chumley's will be in town and you'll have to do something for them. Oh yes, and it's the week of the Swagg dinner—heavens, you're going to have to get yourself a little jacket . . . and some gloves . . . and slippers . . . oh, and it's the week of the Guild's bazaar . . . and then you have to put on that poetry program at the club. My, how things do pile up. It does seem as if there'd be some week that was clear.

Well, the thing to do is just to get everything out of the way by the eleventh—that'll give you two weeks. Still, Aunt Libby's arriving the end of that week and the house will have to be cleaned—why you even ought to have your Christmas decorations up now. And there's that rummage sale you promised to haul things for . . . and then the costumes for the children's school party. How life does crowd!

It really looks as if you're going to have to put off all your shopping until the week before Christmas . . . just as you always do. And there'll be so many things then—the church entertainment . . . and the club parties . . . and the baskets for the poor families . . .

Still, if you can get everything organized and go at it scientifically—with a list—and know just what you want, it won't be so bad. And anyway you're going to cut down ruthlessly this year on all your presents. Get this whole business down to a sensible basis. Why, you ought to do it all in a few hours once you started. And anyway, it's nearly a whole month now until Christmas.

Smooth Manner Aids Popularity

NEARLY EVERY nice-looking girl gets a chance socially—an invitation to a smart party, a prominent home. But not two chances—if her manners fail to pass the test of good society!

How her supper host winces if she refuses a second helping by saying "lobster doesn't agree with me" or "I'm full."

Inexcusable for her to discuss her digestion at the table. To refuse a dish she needs only to say a pleasant "No, thank you."

Of course, she doesn't know any better! But a really clever girl would check up on etiquette points before dining out.

Such a girl wouldn't dream of holding her goblet by the bowl—or eating peas with a spoon—or holding her knife and fork as she passes her plate. She would know it's correct to hold a goblet by the stem, to eat all vegetables with a fork, to put knife and fork on her plate as she passes it.

If a finger bowl is brought in with her dessert plate, the girl "in the know" doesn't look at it blankly, but sets bowl and doily above or at the left of her plate until the meal is over.

A man feels at ease with a girl like that. He knows she'll never embarrass him before his friends. She says "How do you do," not "Pleased to meet you," at introductions. She knows it's his place to give orders to the taxi driver—that it's her place to suggest when to leave a party.

Have the poise, sophistication that are admired everywhere! Our 40-page booklet, "Etiquette For Every Day," gives authoritative answers to hundreds of etiquette problems. Tells what's correct for introductions, invitations—when dining, dancing, visiting, motoring, at the theater.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, "Etiquette For Every Day," to The Washington Post. Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Sentimental Broadway Weeps at Funeral Of Man Who Helped Make 'Aquacade' Famous

New York, Nov. 24.

THE OTHER DAY I spoke of Broadway's sentimentality, as opposed to the common idea, in some quarters, that it is 100 per cent tough and hard-boiled in all its relations. But this overflowing sentiment is always noticeable when some vital statistic overtakes one of its denizens—a wedding, a birth or a funeral. At such a time, the citizens of Times Square absolutely give in.

Alice Hughes

A theatrical wedding at "The Little Church Around the Corner" brings out more tears, flowers, rice and top hats than any ten nuptial ceremonies on Fifth or Park Avenues, and the arrival of a show business offspring (in the upper, or electric light, brackets) is practically a civic holiday. So it is when one of the sons or daughters of show business moves to a better and undoubtedly more secure life.

I attended the funeral services for Sidney Spier, a winning, alert and able boy from Carolina who for two years had been chief of the publicity forces for Billy Rose. Sidney, who passed the acid test for press agents by being well liked by all the newspapermen here, died at a local hospital, very suddenly, the other night. A service was held in his memory at the same "funeral church" from which Rudolph Valentino was buried years ago. Again Broadway's heart wept copiously.

The sizable auditorium was filled, and people were standing—popular Broadway names and faces. Rose, whose "Aquacade" Sidney had helped make famous at the World's Fair, delivered a short, simple and moving eulogy, and Billy's new wife, Eleanor Holm, looked anything but a happy bride as tears cascaded down a face entirely without makeup. All Broadway seemed to love Sidney, and all its people turned out at his funeral services, mostly crying. Try to pull a fast one on show-folks, then duck. But marry, have a baby or die, and they love you and show it, usually in tears.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—There is nothing in this town quite like a Helen Cookman fashion show. She is perhaps the greatest designer of women's coats in this country, and hers is a great family project, for her two beautiful daughters, Frances and Mary Ellen, act as models for mother's wares, and otherwise help in this family business. Cookman clothes are miracles of line and tailoring. She herself sees to the dyeing of the basic "grey goods," and out of the finished fabrics come wonderful coats, travel clothes and suits that fit unbelievably. She is also famous for her classics, such as the Chesterfield, the tintype suit, the Gordian knot and the gathered-back coat. I have one of the last, and consider it by far the most beautiful coat I have ever owned. Mrs. Cookman leans not at all on French influences. Her work is native, fresh and varied. And so this plucky widow forges along with this intensely personal business in a highly impersonal fashion world. . . .

There's one beauty shop in town frequented by our local English actresses for their remake and repaint jobs. Lilian Mayle runs the place, and such girls as Gertrude Lawrence, Geraldine Fitzgerald, Anne Neagle and Margot Grahame are regular customers. Miss Mayle is proud of Gertrude Lawrence, for example. Miss Lawrence, no longer a mere chickabiddy, washes her face with soap and water, then creams it carefully, and washes it again with a camphor lotion. And she looks mightly lovely in "Skylark" this fall.

LITTLE HILDEGARDE, the Milwaukee songbird named Sell, and who has become a great local favorite at the Savoy-Plaza Hotel for supper, is now in Chicago, singing her cute songs at the Colony Club. But she tells me she'll be back in January to appear in a new musical show being written by Irving Berlin, Buddy de Sylva and Morrie Ryskind. . . . Well, how do you feel by now, or wasn't Thursday YOUR Thanksgiving?

Patricia Hurley and Jessie Baker Have Debut In Yule Tree Setting at the Sulgrave Club

Fifty Cedars and 15,000 Hemlock Sheaves Hide Woodwork; 300 Guests Present, All of Unmarried Set

By Dudley Harmon

Starting the debutantes' dances rolling this season, the former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick Hurley, and Mrs. Alfred Irenee duPont, of Wilmington, Del., were hosts at a large dance last evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Hurley's daughter, Miss Patricia Hurley, and Mrs. duPont's niece, Miss Jessie Baker, of Richmond, Va.

"Why, the Sulgrave Club smells just like a Christmas tree," remarked one of the guests on entering. Fifty cedar trees and 15,000 sheaves of hemlock had been massed in the upper halls and the ballroom, completely hiding the baronial dark woodwork. The whole scene was lit by blue floodlights, hidden in the greenery, giving to some of the more opetically inclined guests the impression that they were in a forest flooded with moonlight.

Mrs. Hurley had waved aside drawings submitted by florists' assistants,, and the whole unusual and lovely decorative scheme was entirely her own idea. Since Tuesday a corps of florists and electricians had been working from 7 o'clock in the morning until well into the evening. Lattice work set up against the walls of the large hall on the second floor was completely covered with the boughs, and in the adjoining ballroom the cedar and hemlock extended 10 feet up the sides of the walls. Blue floodlights, massed on the floor at the foot of the boughs, cast a soft glow over them, and the paneling between the greenery and the ceiling was illuminated with concealed lights which turned the woodwork a dusky blue.

The guests danced beneath the $20,000 worth of chandeliers—each of the four in the ballroom, all installed by the former owner of the building, late Senator Wadsworth, would now cost $5,000 to replace. Workmen using 25-foot ladders had placed blue electric light bulbs is all of these fixtures. One electrician, unfortunately, fell from his ladder several days ago and now has his foot in a plaster cast for the next month or two.

Senator Wadsworth Installed Fixtures

About 25 tables had been set up in the small living room and the hall, each centered with a tiny cedar tree. Two of the trees decked the large buffet table in the dining room, from which a hot supper was served continuously all evening.

The hosts received at the head of the curving stairs, Mrs. Hurley wearing a black gown, mostly fringe, with a green jacket embroidered in gold. Her pretty, dark haired debutante daughter wore turquoise blue moire, completely plain in front but with a casade of ruffles in the back from the waist to the hem, an narrow shoulder straps of the same material. Going on the theor that a debutante is entitled to have some fun at her own party, Mrs. Hurley and Mrs. duPont insisted that Patricia and her friend leave the receiving line from time to time for a whirl about the floor.

Miss Baker wore coral net with a bodice of silver sequins and a corsage of orchids, while Mrs. duPont's gown of white lace was fashioned on princess lines. She and her niece will leave Washington this morning.

Several Dinners Precede Dance

A number of dinners preceded the dance, the largest being that given by Mr. and Mrs. Hurley for the out-of-town guests from the Virginia hunt country (the Hurleys have a home near Leesburg) Richmond, and Wilmington. Seventy-five young people gathered at their large residence on Prospect avenue in Georgetown, where small tables had been set up in the drawing room, which incidentally is the longest in Washington, with large windows which look out over the Potomac. Cocktails were served downstairs in the amusing playroom and bar, brain child of the owners of the house, Comdr. and Mrs. William D. Thomas.

A dinner and theater party before the dance was given by Mrs. William Chapin Huntington for her debutante daughter, Joanna, who is home for the holidays from Smith College. Miss Huntington looked even blonder than usual in a powder blue taffeta frock with narrow shoulder straps and a bouffant skirt.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling entertained a small group of young people for their debutante daughter, Peggy, and another dinner was given by Clarence Hewes for his niece, Miss Ellen Hewes Flowerree, another pretty blonde, who wore a pink damask dress with a tight bodice and full skirt. Miss Diana Rowland, another of the dinner givers, was stunning in a black velvet Chanel frock appliqued all over with tiny red lacquer flowers.

At "Tuxeden," their house in Bethesda, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman entertained for their youngest daughter, Margaret, who will make her debut next year, and Miss Sheila Broderick, daughter of Lady Broderick. Among the guests were Frederick DePeyster, Quinby Brown, Schuyler van Renssalaer, and Miss Molly Thompson, all of New York, and all visiting the Tuckermans.

Some of Those Glimpsed at Dance

To return to the moonlight and forest scene at the Sulgrave: Glimpsed dancing to the music of Sidney's orchestra were:

Miss Nancy Leiter, getting her usual rush; Miss Emily Davis, stunning in black and white—a bodice of black paillettes and a black tulle skirt with a white overskirt of the same material; Miss Bille Byrd West, being cut in on by Roberto Mendoza, and the Misses Jane Acheson, Rosemary Merrill, and Alice Barry arriving with their escorts.

One of the most striking gowns, designed by the wearer and made by her capable mother, was that worn by Miss Patricia Prochnik. Made of cloth of gold, it had an off-the-shoulder bodice trimmed with mink, and a gold cloth muff trimmed with this fur completed the ensemble.

Miss Prochnik, Miss Joan McKenna and about 20 other of the season's debutantes had gone first to the cotillion ball given at Hotel Twenty-four Hundred for the benefit of the Georgetown Settlement House for Underprivileged Children.

Miss Helen Davis wore a frock of red velvet, made with a very full skirt. Miss Joan McKenna had chosen emerald green faille taffeta, trimmed with gold ruffles and topped with an antique gold necklace.

Miss Ann Wilkinson was dressed in red taffeta, made with a crinoline skirt, and her sister, Joan, wore black velvet with pink ruffles around the bodice and hem. Others who whirled about the floor included Miss Eleanor Flood, in a chiffon frock with a gray top and pleated fuchsia skirt; Miss Marilynn Himes, Miss Anne Moorhead, Miss Josephine Boyle, Miss Nancy Weller and Miss Kitty DuBoise.

The "stag line" included Christopher Bramwell, Harold Fangboner, Horton Schoellkopf, Stephen Elkins, Frank Holcomb, Richard Bolling, Canfield Himes, William Sheldon, Charles McKenney, Randall Hagner, Samuel Biddle, Quinn Shaughnessy, Eugene O'Dunne, Lieut. Chester Hammond, Christopher Rogers, James Parks, Winthrop Crane and Stephen Morris.

The dance was limited only to "unmarrieds," and there were about 300 present. Among the out-of-towners was Miss Elizabeth Haralson, of Tulsa, Okla., who is visiting Miss Hurley.

Middleburg Hunt's Thanksgiving Day Meet Largest in Its History With 200 Riders

THE THANKSGIVING DAY meet of the Middleburg Hunt was the largest in its history, 200 riders turning out to follow the joint masters, Miss Charlotte Noland and Daniel C. Sands. Pink coats were numerous and added color to the gray and chilly day.

Many parents of Foxcroft School students visited their daughters over the holiday, following the hunt and later watching a school basketball game. For the latter event the stands on the ball grounds were decorated with flowers, flags and banners, and green and brown blankets were offered the spectators. The Hound Team was victorious, 39 to 8, and was presented with a large silver cup by Miss Noland.

MANY PARTIES were given after the game, Miss Noland entertaining at her home, the Covert, for the many parents and alumnae there for the day. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frost, who live nearby, held open house; Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Iselin and their two daughters, both former Foxcroft students, gave a party for out-of-town friends and Mr. and Mrs. Newell Ward and Mrs. Millard Taylor were among those who gave teas.

Among visitors over Thanksgiving were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Howard, of California, owners of the famous race horse, Sea Biscuit. Mr. Howard's granddaughter, Miss Mimi Howard, is at Foxcroft. Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane has as visitors her sisters, Mrs. Wesson Seyburn, of Grosse Point, Mich., and two of the latter's daughters, the Misses Susanne and Isabel Seyburn.

MR. AND MRS. Deering Howe, of New York, who have a string of race horses, spent the day with their daughter, a first-year Foxcroft student. Mrs. Donald Ordway, of Battle Creek, Mich., rode on the hunt and spent the week-end with a Foxcroft daughter. Other parents here included Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Stranaham, of Toledo; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gambrill, of Connecticut; Mr. and Mrs. Powell Noland, of Birmingham, Ala., and their daughter, Miss Mildred Noland, who are visiting his sister, Miss Charlotte Noland, and their daughter, Miss Rosalie Noland, who is also at Foxcroft.

Mrs. Plunket Stewart, of Unionville, Pa., with her daughter, Miss Nancy Penn-Smith, is here to see her younger daughter, Mis Averil Penn-Smith, one of the basketball stars. Mrs. Sidney Miller, jr., and her mother, Mrs. Russell Alger, of Grosse Point, Mich, visited Mrs. Miller's daughter at Foxcroft over the holiday. They are guests of Mrs. Miller's sister-in-law, Mrs. Thomas Byrd, at Kentmere, in Clarke County.

Washington residents here on Thanksgiving Day included Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Beach, Mrs. Richard Shands, Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, Miss Ruth Hitchcock and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ely.

Dr. Thomas Neill and William H. Lipscomb followed the hounds on their large hunters, and Miss Helen Lipscomb came to the meet with her father, accompanied by her house guest, Miss Florence Millard, S. C. Others seen were Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Claudel, of New York (she is the former Miss Marion Cartier), Miss Deborah Rood, of Wilmington, and Walter Wicks, of Baltimore.

Several Countrymen Dr. Turbay's Guests For the Week-End

The new Colombia Ambassador, Dr. Gabriel Turbay, has several of his countrymen spending the week-end with him at the Embassy on Twentieth street northwest.

The house guests include the former President of Colomba, Dr. Alfonso Lopez, who arrived from New York City, where he is spending several months. Dr. Lopez is a brother of the former Ambassador here, Senor Don Miguel Lopez Pumarejo. The Consul General in New York is also in Washington for the week-end. He is Senor Jaime Velez.

Completing the distinguished house party is the former minister of government, Dr. Carlos Lozana, and Senora de Lozanao, accompanied by their small daughter. Dr. Lozano relinquished his post in the cabinet several weeks ago because of ill health. They arrived here by plane from Colombia.

Irma Bradley Becomes Bride

Miss Irma Ann Bradley, daughter of Mrs. Frederick E. Bradley and Walter Jerome Costello, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Costello, were married yesterday morning at 9 o'clock at the Shrine of the Sacred Heart by Mgr. James Smyth. A wedding breakfast followed at the Mayflower for members of the two families.

The bride wore a delft blue tailored ensemble of wool made with a hip-length jacket. Her corsage was of white orchids. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Clarron Render, whose frock was similar to the bride's in a deep shade of rose. Bradley Smith was best man.

Mr. Costello was transferred to Detroit from the Internal Revenue Bureau in Washington in September, and he and his bride will make their home there.

Mrs. Belin Fetes Miss Ruth Sowers And Her Fiance

Mrs. F. Lamont Belin entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Ruth Sowers and Lawrence White, whose wedding will take place this afternoon at St. John's Church. A small reception in the apartment of Mrs. William Sowers, mother of the bride-elect, will follow.

Mrs. Belin's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Peter Belin, of New York, will be a bridesmaid.

Yesterday he entertained at luncheon at the Army and Navy Town Club in honor of his grandson and granddaughter, Lieut. James Blair Glennon, U. S. Marine Corps, and Miss Jeanne Lejeune Glennon, who are also grandchildren of Rear Admiral James H. Glennon, of Washington.

Lieut. Glennon is visiting here from his station in Philadelhpia, where he is attached to the Marine Corps unit.

Veryl Schult Gives Party in Honor Of Mrs. Savage

Miss Veryl Schult, who makes her home at the Wardman Park Hotel, entertained at luncheon there yesterday at the Colonial Room in honor of Mrs. Carlton Savage, who before her recent marriage was Miss Shirley Payne. She and Mr. Savage, who is with the State Department, are making their home in Foxhall Village.

The other guests were Miss Elizabeth Cubley and Miss Jessie Williams, of Huntington, Long Island, in town for the holidays; Miss Daisy Alwine, Miss Anna Halberg, Dr. Margaret Stroh, Miss Carol McCamman, Mrs. George C. Dickens and Mrs. Helen Bolton.

Army Relief Luncheon Today

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, heads the list of prominent people who will attend the Army Relief luncheon today at St. Margaret's Parish House on Connecticut avenue.

A luncheon which will be served from noon to 2 o'clock, will be the highlight of the food and gift sale which will be held from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m. to raise funds for the Retired Officers branch of the Army Relief. Others assisting will be Mrs. Edgar A. Jadwin, widow of Lieut. Gen. Jadwin; Mrs. Merritte W. Ireland and Mrs. Horace McFarland, and Mrs. Theadore Pierson, who will assist Mrs. Amos A. Fries at the White Elephant table.

Mrs. Whitfield Rejoins Husband

Mrs. James W. Whitfield has joined Commander Whitfield at the Shoreham, where she came to spend the Thanksgiving holidays. Commander Whitfield, who has been on temporary duty here, leaves next week for New York to assume a new post, and Mrs. Whitfield will join him there.

During the month which Commander Whitfield has been stationed here, Mrs. Whitfield has been visiting in Wilmington, Del., with her father, Gov. Richard McMullen.

Brennans, Hurjas and Bakers Hosts As Society Gathers at Tea Tables

Sara Allgood Chats With Lord Lothian at Irish Envoy's Party

By Hope Ridings Miller.

TEA-TIME yesterday found half of Washington out and about as a flurry of parties accented the post-Thanksgiving calendar. The Irish Minister and Mrs. Robert Brennan, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, and Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Baker were on the hosting list; and from 4 to 7 o'clock, Capitalites by the dozens were dashing out to one or more of the events on tap.

Sara Allgood, the Irish actress of Abbey Theater fame, who is appearing in the play, "Madam, Will You Walk," was a center of interest at the Brennan party. Guests had been asked in for "just a cup of tea," and most of us went expecting to find a very small gathering. Miss Allgood was a surprise treat and so was the large company that included several members of the Diplomatic Corps.

Receiving informally, as they usually do, the personable Minister and his wife greeted their guests in the drawing room of the legation. Mrs. Brennan, who is one of the most delightful and most natural hostesses in Washington, was trimly turned out in a brown frock, fashioned with a floor-length skirt and cut on simple lines. Miss Allgood, who is as gay and as engaging off-stage as she is on, had a crowd flocking around her from the moment she arrived; but her longest conversation was with the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian, who said he had enjoyed her performances many times in London. That led to a string of reminiscences, and I slipped away to see who else was at the party.

Interesting Group Seen Over Teacups

The tea table, set in the dining room, centered with small rust-colored chrysanthemums and lighted with two clusters of yellow candles, was covered with an Irish lace cloth that Mrs. Brennan had made herself. Among those who admired it as they tea-ed and talked were Mgr. David T. O'Dwyer, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Russell, Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav Minister; Mme. Naoumoff, wife of the Bulgarian Minister; Lady Brodrick and her pretty daughter, Miss Sheila Brodrick, who plan to remain in Washington until after Christmas; the Misses Patten, Mrs. Ralph William Close, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Walsh, accompanied by the former's daughter, Mrs. Augustus Long; Mrs. Ralph William Close, wife of the South African Minister; Col. and Mrs. John A. Crane, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, whose burgundy plumed hat was most becoming; Miss Eleanor Conolly, Mme. Rajamaitri, wife of the Siamese Minister; Mrs. Henry L. Deimel, whose becoming frock was accented with a red velvet turban; Robert Webster, of the South African Legation; Mrs. Joseph Green, Mrs. Herbert Feis, and several others.

Mrs. Garth Healy, wife of the Secretary of the Irish Legation, was seen moving from group to group as were the three daughters of the household, the Misses Emer, Maeve and Deirdre Brennan, who generally assisted during the afternoon.

Hurja Party Is Gay Event

Biggest party on yesterday's round was the one given by Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja at their home at 2419 California. From 5 to 7 o'clock, an interesting cross-section of Washington society turned out for one of the gayest events of the Thanksgiving season. Mrs. Hurja was gowned in a sheer frock made with a swirling skirt of black mousseline de soie and a fitted jacket of gray starched chiffon embroidered in a number of colors.

As is usual at the Hurja parties, there was much traffic up and down the stairway, as drinks were served in the library upstairs and the dining room downstairs was the center of tea-table activities. The spacious drawing room also was a moving mass of official and residential celebrities, as was the music room and the reception hall.

Out-of-towners as well as newcomers to the Capital had their share of the spotlight, while local notables also held little courts of their own. Especially popular guests were Mr. and Mrs. Day Tuttle, the former of whom is director of the Washington Civic Theater. Mrs. Tuttle, who is spending the winter in New York, is down for the week-end, and she and her popular husband are being feted at a continuous round of parties.

Mrs. Whitman Popular Guest

Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, whose husband was a former Republican Governor of New York, was another who had a special place in the spotlight. Here to do a series of sketches for the Democratic Digest (no, I haven't made a mistake), she is staying at the Mayflower Hotel and will be here until Monday afternoon. Mrs. J. Frederick Essary brought her to the party.

Among assistant hostesses who took turns at the tea table were Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Sidney A. Cloman, Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, Mrs. John McClure, Mrs. Forrest S. Rutherford, Mrs. William A. Morgan, Miss Elizabeth Lowry, Mrs. Vurks Summers, Mrs. Marshall Duggs, and Mrs. Richard S. Jones.

To mention but a few I saw in the throng: There were Mrs. Stanley Reed, who arrived early and had soon disappeared from the picture; Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, the Solicitor General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, who were two of the most popular guests present; the Assistant Attorney Gen. and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, who add a lively note to any gathering; the Netherlands Minister and Mme. Loudon; Mme. Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, and the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza.

Finnish Staff There Full Force

"New faces" in the crowd included new members of the Finnish Legation. The secretary of the legation, Risto Solanko and Mme. Solanko were there; also Col. Per Zilliacus, and several others. The Minister of Finland, Hjalmar J. Procope, also stopped in briefly toward the end.

Just returned from New York was George Abell, who arrived for the latter half of the party. Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, recently back from Omaha, was there; also, Mrs. Francis Whitten, wearing a dark green ensemble that might have stepped right off a page of Vogue; Clarence Hewes, who had with him his popular debutante niece, Miss Ellen Hewes Flowerree, of New Orleans; Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, and the Netherlands Commercial Counselor and Mme. Kleijn Molekamp.

Others there—some of whom turned up at the Baker party before or afterward—included Mr. and Mrs. Marshall O. Exniocios, Miss Mary Johnson, J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Wright, Ralph Snowden Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, and Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Culbertson.

Still more who were seen in the crowd were Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Burton, Mrs. Ollie James, Mr. and Mrs. Jay Hayden, Mr. and Mrs. Walker Buell, Lady Leslie, Baroness von Below, Carlisle Bargeron, Baron Bodisco, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Frost, Mrs. Arthur Condon, Mr. and Mrs. Franklyn Waltman, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dillon.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil will entertain at a farewell luncheon tomorrow in honor of Senor and Senora Erasto Villa, who will leave shortly for their new post in Colombia.

Mrs. McCeney Werlich will entertain at tea December 5.

Mrs. James Lawrence Fly entertained some very young people yesterday afternoon in celebration of the tenth birthday of her daughter, Sara Virginia.

Miss Anna Wolcott Archibald will entertain at luncheon today at the Hay-Adams House for the ushers at Mme. Elvina Orlicz-Dreszer's concert on December 3 for the benefit of Polish refugee children. Among the guests will be Mme. Dreszer, Mrs. Newton Brewer, and the Misses Mary Senate Howes, Chiyo Thomas, Lorna Poulson, Alyce Duffin, Carolyn Wadden, Vera Bloom, Martha Wells Schoenfeldt, Elvina Rowe and Patsy Brewer.

Mrs. Paul Delano, wife of the Comptroller of the Currency, entertained at tea yesterday afternoon in her suite at the Hay-Adams House in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McKin Norton, of New York, who are making their home in the Capital this winter. There were about 30 guests, most of them "younger marrieds."

Daughter Born To Edward Burlings

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter on Tuesday at Columbia Hospital. Mrs. Burling formerly was Miss Carnealia Perin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson E. Perin.

Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, jr., of Georgetown, are also proud parents of a baby girl. Mrs. Wilmerding formerly was Miss Jane Mather.

Day Tuttles, of New York, Enjoy Social Whirl Here

Because of the official mourning a reception planned by Ambassador Alfaro for December 7 has had to be postponed and the invitations, many of which already had been sent, recalled. The reception was to have honored the Ambassador's West Point class of 1913 and to have been given at the Mayflower. Invitations will be issued at a later date.

Nieces Visit Alfaros for Holidays

Embassy in Mourning, Reception December 7 Has Been Postponed

Lunching at the Army-Navy Town Club yesterday with the Ecuadorean Ambassador, Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro, and Senora de Alfaro were their nieces, Miss Marcela Arias, of Panama, who is attending National Park College, and Miss Raquel Guizado, of Panama, who attends Holy Cross Academy, and Prof. G. H. Cox, of George Washington University.

The nieces of Ambassador and Senora de Alfaro are spending the holidays as guests of the Alfaros at the Mayflower Hotel. The luncheon was a very quiet affair as no official entertaining is being done by the Ecuadoarean Embassy from November 18 to December 18 because of the recent death of the President of Ecuador, A. Mosquera-Narvaes.

The Hintons Hosts To Krocks at Cocktail Party

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon at their home in Georgetown in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock, who recently returned from a stay at Palm Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Krock have with them for a visit the latter's sister, Mrs. Granger Brown, who will be guest of honor at a small tea to be given this afternoon by Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt at her home on N street, in Georgetown.

Moose Unit Hears Talk On Children

Dr. Reymert Blames Rise in Delinquency On Lack of Early Character Training

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

Nursery school and kindergarten methods are carried into high school and college in the American educational system, Dr. Martin L. Reymert, director of the laboratory for child research at Moosehart, Ill., declared last night. Speaking before an open meeting of the Women of the Moose, Dr. Reymert, who is also chairman of the Illinois advisory board for the prevention of juvenile delinquency, checked part of the responsibility for this problem back to the schools.

"Where in the American home or the American school system does a young person learn to do an unpleasant task with a smile?" asked Dr. Reymert. "With the choice of subjects and of professors left largely to the whims and inclinations of the growing boy and girl, they will usually choose the easiest way. They finish their education without the experience of self-discipline.

"Most young people come out of college asking 'What can you do for me?' instead of 'What service can I be to you?'" he said.

Alarmed at Rise In Delinquency

Dr. Reymert attributed many of the nervous disorders and lack of social adjustments in adults to lack of proper foundation in school and home training in this respect.

On the subject of juvenile delinquency, he expressed concern over its steady increase rather than its present extent, and this he attributed partly to school methods. He urged training which would inculcate in children respect for authority and a consciousness of their responsibility as individuals in the school, the home and the community.

This, he said, is one of the features of the training of the orphans of members of the Order of the Moose at Mooseheart. The city of children was established nearly 25 years ago by Senator James J. Davis.

They live in small cottages, with cottage "parents" supervising their home life, trained instructors and psychologists directing their education, and duties assigned them both at home and at school, giving their part in the harmonious operation of community life.

Dr. Reymert explained how the children are examined at his laboratory when they first come to Mooseheart, and their entire history taken. Their aptitudes are studied and recommendation made for their care and instruction at a conference of members of the staff of Mooseheart, under whose supervision they will be. Three months after they enter, a check-up is made as to their progress and from then on, each year, on a child's birthday, there is a review of his development.

Nervous System Complete at 7

During the ten years Dr. Reymert has been there, he has had opportunity to make observations as to the anatomical, physiological, mental, emotional, social and educational development of children which are considered a valuable contribution in the fields of medical science and psychology.

Dr. Reymert stressed the importance of preschool training and the responsibility which rests on parents for having it fundamentally right. A child's anatomical structure is practically complete at the age of 4 years and his nervous system established at the age of 7, he said. The only two things with power to change these definitely in later life are severe shock or religious experience.

Dr. Heymert, a native of Norway, and former assistant professor in the Royal University of Oslo, is known both here and in Europe as an expert in the field of child development. He was one of the scientists who sat in on the conference on the Donne quintuplets. He is now attending the meeting of the American Association for Applied Psychology, at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Gifts Increasing For D.A.R. Schools

Mrs. Orie E. Gibson, State chairman of approved schools of the District Daughters of the American Revolution, announces the number of chapters making Christmas contributions, either money or other gifts, is increasing as Christmas approaches.

As most of these schools are located in mountain districts, these underpriviledged children attending are made happy with gifts sent at this time.

One of the most interesting of the approved schools is the Martha Berry Schools and College, located in Mount Berry, Ga., and of which Miss Martha Berry is director.

It had its beginning 40 years ago when a small group of children gathered to hear Bible stories on Sunday afternoons; later meeting in a log cabin, which developed into a day school, which now is a large, modern institution. Miss Berry, past 70, continues to carry on the work.

Charles Dana Beaschler, who for three years directed the music at these schools and is now musical director at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will address the meeting of Mrs. Gibson's committe on Tuesday.

Monday Miss Janet Richards, well-known lecturer, will give a talk on "Founding of the Daughters of the American Revolution," at the meeting of Victory Chapter at 2 p. m. at the home of Mrs. Sherman S. Slick, 2561 Seventeenth street northwest.

The meeting of Our Flag Chapter will be held at the home of Mrs. Julia A. Mason Smith, on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Corbin Thompson, regent, will presida.

200 Attend Annual Benefit Card Party Of Sunshine and Community Society

NEARLY 200 yesterday attended the annual benefit card party of the Sunshine and Community Society, at the Wardman Park Hotel. Mrs. W. W. Deal, the president, and all her officers, were present.

Assisting on the committee were Mrs. Frank Shortall, in charge of tickets; Mrs. J. Noble Hoover, prizes; Mrs. Henry F. Sawtelle, in charge of the cake table, and Mrs. Stuart Boyer, of the candy.

ART CONTEST—Budding artists at the Barney Neighborhood House have done their part toward getting out a crowd for the sale of handiwork being sponsored by the board of trustees at Wesley Hall Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. They have made attractive posters to advertise it.

Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck offered prizes for them, winners of which were Evelyn Cochran, first; Margaret Peter, Juanita Tonkin and Betty Jane Peter. Mrs. Samuel Herrick and Mrs. Howard LeRoy, of the arts and crafts committee of the board, were the judges. There also was a prize made by the whole kindergarten—done of autumn leaves, each the work of one of the children, arranged on the poster by their teacher. Mrs. Herrick has arranged to give the class a prize for it, too.

ON THE WING—Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, will be off for Montclair, N. J., with Mr. Daniel just as soon as the November session of the federation is over Monday afternoon. They will be away a week, and after a brief stop over at home on their return, will be off again for Chicago for another week.

Mrs. Daniel will have as her luncheon guests Monday, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Mrs. Virginia White Speel, National Republican Committeewoman for the District; Miss Lucy Witherspoon and Miss Dora Bailey.

MERRY CHRISTMAS—The M. Eleanor Brackenridge Club at its meeting Friday night, at the home of Mrs. James L. Russell, 4103 Henry street, Brentwood, Md., will hear a talk by Miss Ethel Regan, county home demonstration agent for Prince Georges County, on "Christmas Gift Suggestions."

Mrs. Lucius Latham and Miss Louise Fincham will be assistant hostesses.

Goodwill Guild Plans Bazaar

The executive board of the Women's Guild of Goodwill Industries met yesterday morning at the Industries and spent practically the entire meeting discussing plans for a bazaar to be given December 8 at the Shoreham.

The proceeds of the event will be used for the welfare fund maintained by the guild to aid Goodwill employes and reimburse them for time lost in case of illness or hospitalization. They work on an hourly basis and any loss of time often means deprivation. The guild's chief purpose is to aid the workers and supplement their wages with special assistance in case of urgent need.

Mrs. Samuel Herrick is president of the guild, which was established two years ago and has done much for the Industries during its brief history. A pantry fund, a sick benefit fund and a welfare fund have been established for the employes, and the guild also has equipped the kitchen at the Goodwill plant, provided a new refrigerator and started an antique shop.

The bazaar December 8 will include the annual fashion show of Goodwill costumes, salvaged from contributions through many years, and a modern fashion show.

Mrs. R. C. Bowker is general chairman of the event, with Miss Gertrude Lutz, vice chairman. Others assisting with various details include: Style show, Mrs Chesly Manly, chairman; Mrs. I. B. Kirkland, jr., and Mrs. James Craig Peacock. Dolls, Mrs. Edward Campbell Shields, chairman. Food, Mrs. Irene Caldwell, chairman; Mrs. W. W. Husband, vice chairman. Tickets, Mrs. P. P. Herrick, chairman. Publicity, Mrs. Stanley C. Sears, chairman; Mrs. Miller Hickerson. Patronesses, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, chairman; Mrs. Herrick, vice chairman. Music, Mrs. Howard Nichols, chairman. Membership, Mrs. Karl Feninng, chairman.

Bazaar to Sell Czech Crafts Here

The Czecho-Slovak-American women of Washington have organized a bazaar which is to be held December 7, 8 and 9 at 1210 Eighteenth street northwest.

In addition to handwork at which this group has been busy for weeks, there will be many Czecho-Slovak products imported prior to the German occupation and products of the Czecho-Slovak Industrial Art group recently established in New York.

This group, mostly refugees, was formed for the purpose of keeping Czecho-Slovakia alive through its arts and industries. Dolls, ceramics, glassware, wooden ware, embroideries, Christmas cards and other articles suitable as Christmas gifts will be on sale. A small entrance fee will be charged, for which tea and Czecho-Slovak cakes and cookies may be had.

The proceeds of the sale will be deposited in the relief fund of the Czech-American National Alliance, whose headquarters is in Chicago.

Women From South American Nations Complete Tour

Concluding a two-month good will tour of the United States under auspices of the Peoples Mandate Committee, representatives of Argentine, Brazil, Costa Rica, Cuba and Venezuela have arrived in New York for a four-day visit before sailing for their homes. Miss Susana Perez Irigoyen, Mrs. Lucia de Paula Fonseca, Mrs. Angela Acuna de Chacon, Miss Mercedes Guerra and Miss Yvonne Gonzalez Rincones have made the journey from coast to coast under leadership of Miss Mabel Vernon, of Washington, director of the Peoples Mandate Committee.

In the first undertaking of its kind, the women from American republics have visited 40 cities, colleges, universities and industrial plants. They have addressed thousands of people gathered in their honor at luncheons, dinners, college assemblies and club and organization meetings. With the purpose of the tour to spread information on inter-American affairs, increase friendly relations and make better known the effective peace system that is being created in the Western Hemisphere, it is felt, according to a statement by Miss Vernon, that the object has been carried out most successfully.

The dinner will be at 7 o'clock Thursday evening at the Town Hall Club, sponsored by the Zonta International with Miss O'Crowley, co-chairman of the international relations committee, presiding. On the same day the delegates will be guests with Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt at a luncheon given by the Grace Steamship Line on the S. S. Santa Rosa.

Ban on Taxicab Cruising in F and G Streets Lifted

The Commissioners yesterday lifted the Sunday and nightly cruising ban for taxicabs along downtown F and G streets and approved further parking restrictions on Fifteenth street in various sections of the city.

Taxicabs hereafter will be permitted to cruise along both streets, between Ninth and Fifteenth streets, between 8 p. m. and midnight on weekdays and all day Sunday. The recent ban kept the taxicabs off the two streets from 8 a. m. to midnight on weekdays and between 2 p. m. and midnight on Sundays.

All proposals were approved on the recommendation of Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

U-Turns Prohibited

U-turns on East Executive avenue, from Pennsylvania avenue to Treasury place, are prohibited on recommendation of the White House officer in charge of traffic, who stated taxicabs bringing passengers to the Executive Mansion were the worst offenders

Four streets in the Northwest section were designated as one-way. These are: California street, from Eighteenth street to Nineteenth street for westbound traffic; N street, from Eighteenth street to Little Sixteenth street, for eastbound traffic and from Connecticut avenue to Twenty-second street for westbound traffic.

T street, from Florida avenue near Ninteenth street to Fifth street, for eastbound traffic only; Vernon street, from Nineteenth street to Eighteenth street for eastbound. U street between Bohrer place and Third street was restored for two-way traffic.

Northwest Streets

Hartford place, between Ogden place and Oak street, no parking on the west side at any time.

Kennedy street, from Fourteenth to Sixteenth streets, no parking on the south side at any time, except Sundays between 9 a. m. and 1 p. m.

M street, between Thirteenth street and New Jersey avenue, no parking on the south side at any time, except on Sundays between 9 a. m. and 1 p. m.

Meridian place, from Sixteenth to Brown street, no parking on the north side at any time.

O street, from Fifteenth street to the first alley, no parking on either side at any time.

Otis place, from Tenth to Thirteenth street, no parking on the south side at any time.

T street, between Florida avenue and Seventh street, no parking on the south side at any time, and on the north side parking shall be limited to 15 minutes at all times.

Virginia avenue, from Nineteenth street to Twenty-third street, no parking on the south side from 7 to 9:30 a. m., and on the north side from 4 to 6 p. m., except between E street and Twenty-second street, no parking on the north side at any time.

Eleventh street, from Florida avenue to New York avenue, no parking on the west side from 8 to 9:30 a. m. and on the east side between 4 and 6 p. m.

Seventeenth street, from Park road to Newton street, no parking on the east side at any time.

Twentieth street, on the east side in front of 1119 to 1129, from a point 35 feet south of the south driveway to a point 10 feet north of the north driveway, no parking at any time.

Northeast Streets

Northeast streets effected by the new regulations are:

New York avenue, on all streets for a distance of 300 feet in all directions from the intersection of New York avenue, Montana avenue and West Virginia avenue, no parking between 7 and 9:30 a. m. and from 4 to 6 p. m.

Sixteenth street, from Benning road to C street, no parking on the east side at any time.

Independence avenue southwest, between Fourth street and South Capitol street, no parking on the south side at any time.

Armstrong High Pupils to Be in Radio Workshop

Armstrong High School students step into the Radio Workshop program, sponsored by The Washington Post, the public schools and WJSV, at 7 o'clock tonight. They promise a half-hour of entertainment, including spirituals.

A quartet, composed of Joseph Waddy, James Tillman, Wilton Smith and Matthew Thomas, will sing "Go Down Moses." A girls' chorus will sing "Loch Lomond" and "Solvejg's Song."

There will be vocal and piano solos. The Radio Workshop is presented each Saturday night as programs entirely arranged and offered by Washington school children. The Armstrong program will be the fourth.

and RFC. Net reduction is 365, while the other agencies have added 108 members to their various staffs.

Sizeable reduction in personnel is shown by the Coast Guard and Lighthouse Bureau. Last June these two arms of the Government totaled 6,572 employes, but since the Lighthouse Bureau was transferred to the Coast Guard, the total has dropped to 6,068 (September figures). Some of the reduction is directly due to voluntary retirements and failure to fill vacancies in the Lighthouse Bureau, while some of it is seasonal in the Coast Guard.

In the office of the President, the Budget Bureau, transferred from the Treasury, has jumped from 67 in June to 106 in October. The Office of Government Reports has dropped from 362 to 309, but most of these employes were merely shifted to another agency.

O'Conor Names 2 To Geology Board

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 24 (AP).—Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor today appointed Holmes Baker, Frederick banker and businessman, and Dr. W. H. Snealy, Sharpsburg physician, to the State geological and economic survey advisory commission.

Dr. Isaiah Bowman, president of Johns Hopkins University, is the third member.

could carry greater traffic loads in swift safety by use of a light system similar to the "block" method, according to Post surveys. With lengthening of the signal cycle, fewer stops would be necessary.

It is apparent from observations throughout the city—observations made as an average motorist who daily traverses District streets—that there is ample room for improvement of the present signal-light system before the time comes when Washington will have intersection grade separations and elevated "freeways."

With little cross traffic during peak hours, streets like Thirteenth, Sixth, Sixteenth, Connecticut avenue, Fifteenth street and Fourteenth street (when Thomas circle is completed) could readily be adapted to the "block" light timing system, it was found.

(More details of The Post survey will be outlined tomorrow.)

a vote of confidence in traffic authorities, combined with a recommendation for additional funds to make traffic improvements.

Speakers at the luncheon was Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, who described the street-improvement projects now under way.

Whitehurst said he was "surprised" at The Post's statement that "little or nothing" had been done to eliminate downtown traffic congestion. He said $6,000,000 had been expended in the last six or seven years on efforts to empty rapidly the downtown business area of rush-hour traffic.

The highway director said work on the Thomas Circle underpass would be completed the latter part of January. He also outlined tentative plans to construct a grade-separation at Fourteenth street and Maine avenue (formerly Water street).

After completion of the work at Thomas Circle, Whitehurst said, it "will be up to the people of Washington to decide whether similar revamping should be undertaken at Scott and Dupont circles."

The committee also urged that the subject of traffic safety become a compulsory, half-hour-a-week course in public schools.

Hitch-Hikers Warned

A joint conference of traffic, police, school and AAA officials in conference yesterday decided that youngsters discovered begging or "hooking" rides to and from school must be punished.

The conference voted unanimously to recommend that superintendents of schools call attention to the dangers of hitch-hiking and impress on children the fact that it's illegal. Schoolboy patrolmen will be instructed to report cases and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, said arrests would be made if warnings fail to halt the practice.

Called to foster child safety, the conference praised the work of patrol boys but warned against overstepping their authority by attempting to direct vehicular traffic.

Horticultural Club Elects Goodhart Head

Surgeons Correct Deformities by Use of Arithmetic

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 24 (AP).—Surgeons who attempt to correct deformities in persons crippled by accidents must go back to fundamental arithmetic in their treatment, Dr. Earl D. McBride, of Oklahoma, said at the Southern Medical Association's annual meeting today.

The body with all its bones, joints and muscles, works as a unit with any strain put on the leg muscles or joints being transferred immediately to the arms, neck and shoulders, he declared.

Many of these strains can be calculated with the exactness of an engineer designing a crane or derrick, Dr. McBride asserted. In radical displacement of the bones, as in an improperly healed hip fracture, the strain on the point may be increased ten times.

A warning against the indiscriminate use of quinine in treatment of the common cold, malaria and other diseases was issued by Dr. S. B. Forbes, of Tampa, Fla. It frequently causes deafness and impairs the sight, he said.

'Nip' Sales Upheld; No Evidence Seen Of Children's Use

Baltimore, Nov. 24 (AP).—Refusing to ban the sale of "nips," the city board of liquor license commissioners said today "no evidence whatever" had been found that children consume the contents of miniature liquor bottles in the public schools.

"If miniatures are sold to minors, the answer is not to abolish miniatures, but to abolish the sales to minors," said Chairman Charles T. Le Viness and the associate commissioners, Dr. Joseph L. Valentini and C. Delano Ames.

At a hearing August 17, the Anti-Saloon League and a saloon keepers association, represented by Joseph L. Hirsch, said children were the principal purchasers of miniatures. Hirsch also asserted large quantities of empty miniature bottles had been found in school washrooms.

Dr. Bassett Killed

Speakers Put Democracy Up to Youth

Conference Here Hears Challenge to Make Education A Key to Liberty

Four adults last night challenged the youth of Washington—and of the Nation—to solve the problems of the democracy they inherited and to wipe out the social inequalities their parents found insuperable.

Addressing the opening session of the first Washington Youth Conference, which convened at the Y. W. C. A., the speakers agreed that education offered the key to the problems, but that it was up to today's younger generation to discover of what education should consist and how it was to be universally applied.

Speakers were Katharine F. Lenroot, chief of the United States Children's Bureau; Jessie La Salle, assistant superintendent of District schools; Thomas Hibben, director of operations, National Youth Administration, and U. Simpson Tate, treasurer, National Negro Congress. The three-day conference on "Education for Practical Democracy" was called by the Washington Youth Congress in conjunction with a committee of adult sponsors.

Essentials Cited

The three essentials in education for democracy, declared Miss Lenroot, are universal education, a varied school program adapted to all levels of physical and mental capacity, and leadership among the parents and teachers.

"Provision of schools and teachers and equipment is not enough to reduce educational inequality," she asserted. "Parents must have the means to send children to school . . ."

Among elements inherent in an educational program for democracy Miss Lenroot listed development of an understanding of the meaning of democracy; tolerance for the next fellow; learning to evaluate propaganda; realization that citizens must be willing to serve their government unselfishly.

"You've inherited a mess," Miss LaSalle told the college and high school delegates. "Even now the American democracy is threatened from within by the very things that brought about totalitarianism abroad—a growing dishonesty as shown in fabricated propaganda, a growing lack of respect for the individual, a failure to open our eyes to economic and social injustices.

Holds Utility Basic

"We must reorganize the educational system so that it is not based on knowing, but on learning what to do with what we know."

Mechanization of industry has created great demands for workers who must learn simple services or single skills, a type of employment which does not furnish the work satisfaction of the higher skilled jobs, Hibben said. "Thus it is necessary," he urged, "to teach young people how to secure intellectual and physical enjoyment out of life itself outside their immediate jobs."

Tate praised the American educational system as the best in the world, but pointed out "glaring inequalities"—advantages of urban education over rural, North over South, white over colored, physically able over the handicapped. He averred that the dual system of education usually discriminated against the colored pupil, and said that even in Washington the colored schools were at a disadvantage in recreational facilities, building equipment, and healthful environment.

Greeting on behalf of the adult sponsors was delivered by Miss Elizabeth M. Haney, Y. W. C. A. general secretary. Among greetings sent the conference was that of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who hoped "this conference will be an inspiration to all those who attend to work hard for our democracy and for better citizenship."

Panel sessions today will discuss the student, the school, teaching and study methods, curriculum, and texts. Fred J. Kelly, chief, division of higher education, United States Office of Education, will be principal speaker in the afternoon. Entertainment, including jitterbug dancing, is scheduled for the evening.

Zoning Board Gives Approval To Six Appeals

Denies 4; Decision on 4 Delayed, Including Good Shepherd Laundry

The Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday approved appeals of six applicants, denied four and deferred action in four other cases.

The appeal of the House of the Good Shepherd to be permitted to build a two-story laundry on its property at Thirty-sixth and R streets northwest was among those on which decision was put off. The case had aroused a spirited fight at a public hearing Wednesday by the Burelith Citizens Association.

Members of the board sent to the Commissioners a recommendation that the usual $20 fee for a hearing be decreased to $5 for applicants desiring to build additions to single family dwellings or erect private garages.

Petitions approved follow:

Mary E. and William Hilton, for permission to enclose a rear first story porch at 4122 Military road northwest.

M. F. Poms for permission to use the rear of 1421 T street northwest for an automobile paint shop.

National Paint, Varnish and Lacquer Association to establish an educational institution at 1500 Rhode Island avenue northwest.

Appeals denied were: G. & C. Properties, Inc., for permission to use the rear of 3823-25 Fourteenth street northwest for a plumbing and heating shop and offic

Margaret Moriarity, to erect a one-story rear porch, enclosure of front porch and erection of rear second story, addition at 1236 Quincy street northeast.

Mary E. Stelz, for permission to relocate and make structural alterations to two dwellings at 4911 and 4915 North Capitol street.

William Liff, to permit erection of a three-story apartment house at 604 Alabama avenue southeast.

World Has Waited Too Long To Remedy Evils, Says Cleric

Social, Political and Economic Problems Are Discussed by Philadelphian at Dinner Climaxing 'Men and Missions' Observance

Dr. Dan Poling, Philadelphia clergyman, last night scored nations and communities which "have waited too long" to remedy social, political and economic evils. He spoke at a "Men and Missions" dinner at Reformation Lutheran Church.

"Civic life in America too long has been dominated by partisan politics," he told several hundred laymen and ministers. "We've waited too long to deal with the situation rising out of repeal."

He said he could not forget the promises made by the advocates of repeal, that it would balance the budget and solve the unemployment problem.

"Repeal has placed thousands of lovely girls behind bars," he said, adding that, for the first time in his remembrance, America now has the equivalent of the European barmaid.

The clergyman contended that America has waited too long to solve the problems of road accidents and drunken driving. But he insisted modern youth is not responsible for such conditions.

Discussing the international situation, Dr. Poling told the diners that there was an opportunity for appeasement, for peace with justice, but those in authority waited too long.

"The Allies insisted upon grinding the German nose in the dirt, and out of the dirt arose Hitler," said he, expressing the conviction that, by its failure to be positive and firm, America has made its contribution to the present situation.

Describing neutrality as "something fraught with tragic potentialities," Dr. Poling said he favored keeping America out of war on the basis of what the last conflict taught, by the human test, and for the divine reason that "they who take up the sword shall perish by the sword."

Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the host church, introduced Dr. Poling. The function climaxed local observance of a national "Men and Missions" celebration. Malcolme Lamborne, sr., of Lewis Memorial Methodist Church, handled arrangements and Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, gave the invocation.

Among guests were Paul Williams, member of the executive committee of the World Christian Endeavor Society; Dr. W. L. Darby, executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches; Clinton N. Howard, Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, president of the Federation of Churches and pastor of First Baptist Church; Dr. William S. Abernethy, Calvary Baptist pastor and president of the Ministerial Association; Dr. Dudley Carpenter, of St. Alban's Episcopal Church; Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller and Maj. Guy Withers, both of National City Christian Church; Maj. Charles Dodd, local commander of the Salvation Army, and also Maj. Gilbert Decker and Adjutant W. T. Powell; Harvey Prentice, superintendent of the Gospel Mission, and DeMerritt Smith, former president of the District Endeavor Society.

Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, First Congregational, and the Rev. Walter G. Borchers, jr., assistant pastor; the Rev. Ralph W. Loew, assistant pastor, Reformation Lutheran; the Rev. A. F. T. Raum, First Methodist; the Rev. Olindo Marseglia, assistant pastor, Italian Baptist; the Rev. Paul Yinger, Cleveland Park Congregational; Dr. C. C. Hung, Chinese Community; the Rev. Charles Enders, Concordia Evangelical Lutheran; the Rev. J. Raymond Nelson, Bethesda Baptist, the Rev. William La Rue, Takoma Baptist, and the Rev. John A. Trader, Lewis Memorial Methodist Church.

Thomas Spence, Bishop James E. Freeman's secretary and Kenneth Robbins, secretary to Dr. Albert J. McCartney, also attended. William R. Schmucker led group singing.

Thomas Again Heads Civic Federation

Dr. Harris Elected Vice President to Replace Bradford

Charles M. Thomas was reelected by acclamation as president of the Federation of Civic Associations last night at a meeting in the District Building. The election was participated in by 23 associations.

Reelected also were Mrs. Velma Williams, member of the Board of Education, first vice president; Mrs. Ruby M. Kendrick, recording secretary; Mrs. Mary Curtis, assistant recording secretary; Kenneth H. Carter, corresponding secretary; Col. Howard D. Queen, treasurer; the Rev. David C. Lynch, chaplain; George W. Beasley, parliamentarian. Dr. George H. Richardson is president emeritus.

Dr. Harris Elected

Dr. Edward F. Harris, president of the Lincoln Civic Association, was elected second vice president, replacing Hugh Bradford, who did not have delegate status.

A report of activities of the year was made by the president, with emphasis on problems of taxation, housing, commercial interest and social service.

A letter addressed by the president to the Board of Education with reference to recreation was indorsed. This letter referred to "neglect of the needs and rights of divisions 10-13 of public schools, which are denied the direction of their own Community Center section of the recreation program."

Attention was called to the organic law which provides for colored administration in colored schools, and the federation indicated that "it would be satisfied with nothing less" in the administration of recreation facilities.

Restoration of direction of Community Centers, Divisions 10-13, to Mrs. Anna G. Carroll, was demanded, the federation stating that it did not feel it necessary to carry its displeasure to Congress, but stood ready to do so if its demands were not granted.

Hits Vocational Setup

Col. H. D. Queen, reporting for the committee on education, criticized the vocational setup in colored schools as more than a decade behind the times, although originally in the forefront of vocational education. He said the equipment for mechanical training in the Armstrong High School and the Phelps Vocational School was antiquated.

With relation to a study of an alleged loan shark situation, the federation proposed a poor man's counsel, particularly for the colored citizens of the District. The federation directed appointment of a committee to work with the Federation of Citizens Associations toward organization of a legislative advisory council.

March of Science Must Solve Unemployment, Says Engineer

Creation of New Industries Only Solution, National Geographic Society Told By Lecturer on Electrical Wonders

Unemployment can be solved only when new industries are developed through scientific research, Ernest L. Foss, electrical engineer, told members of the National Geographic Society last night at Constitution Hall.

Ninety per cent of employed persons today, he said, work in industries developed in the last 40 years.

Foss declared the invention of the telephone by Alexander Graham Bell had resulted in an industry which employs hundreds of thousands of persons all over the world.

After demonstrating a model of an early telephone and comparing it to the device in use today, he said further expansion of the telephone industry would provide additional employment.

With a small Tesla coil which picked up energy from his body, Foss lighted fluorescent gas-filled tubes. He fried eggs in a skillet heated by the coil and kept an aluminum plate suspended in the energy thrown off by the apparatus.

Foss demonstarted a glowing tuby which he explained was lighted indirectly by the heat and light of the sun which produced slow combustion of gasoline and air in the tube.

Another scientific invention on display was a "talking flashlight." A small microphone in the end of a flashlight transformed a human voice into light rays. The rays were picked up by an electric eye, similar to a radio tube, which converted them into sound waves and sent them through a loud speaker.

Free Lunches Extended to 700 Students

26 Vocational and High Schools to Serve Needy Pupils Beginning Monday

More than 700 additional students in public schools will receive free lunches under an extension plan adopted yesterday by the District Commissioners.

Acting at request of the Board of Education and recommendations by Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy, the Commissioners approved a plan to provide lunches to needy students in vocational, junior and senior high schools.

School officials said the service would begin the first of next week. Free lunches now are provided needy elementary students through a WPA project.

It was pointed out extension of lunches to students in upper grades could be worked out without increased expenditure of District funds. Vocational, junior and senior high schools have cafeterias and food will be supplied by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation.

The WPA project employs persons in a central kitchen where food is prepared for elementary school students.

All told, 26 high schools will be in a position to serve needy students. School officials said there were 200 white students, many of whom have been provided with free lunches by teachers and principals, and 525 colored students who will benefit by extension of the free lunch plan.

Capt. Markland Given Battleship

Capt. Henry T. Markland, assistant chief of the Navy Bureau of Ordnance, yesterday was ordered to command the battleship West Virginia, operating with the fleet.

No relief was immediately assigned to the post Capt. Markland has held for more than three years. It is expected, however, that he will be detached soon to take over the sea command.

Arlington Bar Hears Darr on Free Advice

Free legal services should be provided for the poor, Sefton Darr, president of the District Bar Association, declared yesterday at the luncheon meeting of the Arlington County Bar Association at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

The problem is being studied by a committee of the Arlington County Bar Association composed of former State Senator Frank L. Ball, chairman; Harry R. Thomas and Edgar W. Pumphrey.

Capital News in Brief

Optimists to Dance

The Optimist Club of Washington will be host at a dinner dance tonight at the Washington Golf and Country Club, with exhibitions of modern ballroom dancing by experts from the Arthur Murray Studio. Dr. William W. Chase is club president.

Burglar Caught

A 25-year-old colored man, already out on bond on two assault cases, was arrested by police last night in the act of looting a clothing store, at 735 Seventh street northwest. A burglar alarm caused the capture.

A confederate fled down the street deserting a car in which he was awaiting the other burglar. The car had been reported stolen.

$.25—No Questions Asked

Cornelius J. Morgan, 1105 Fourth street northeast, cab driver, didn't ask any questions when two passengers placed a cold, hard object against the back of his neck last night. He emptied a pocket and handed over its contents, a lone 25-cent piece.

The bandits did not ask any more questions, either, so that Moran saved the contents of his other pockets, a sum over $5. Holdup occurred at South Capital and G streets, Moran told polict.

Model Plane Meet

An indoor model airplane meet will be held today in Constitution Hall under auspices of the District of Columbia Recreation Department, beginning at 9:30 a. m.

Body Pinned Two Hours Under 11-Ton Truck

Baltimore, Nov. 24 (AP).—Scores of firemen and policemen worked two hours yesterday to free the body of Harry E. Bergen, 61-year-old watchman, crushed to death in a collision between his automobile and an 11-ton trailer-truck.

Three Hurt, One Critically, in D. C. Accidents

Three persons were injured, one critically, in District traffic accidents yesterday.

Mrs. Georgia Thompson, colored, 39, of 1621 Sixth street northwest, was described as in "very serious condition" at Emergency Hospital after she was felled by a car at Georgia avenue and Kennedy street northwest. She was treated for a broken leg and possible fracture of the spine. Alonzo Gilliam, colored, 27, of Chevy Chase, Md., was charged with reckless driving.

Five-year-old William Thomas, 2602 L street northwest, sustained a broken hip and shoulder when he ran into the side of a truck while playing in the 1000 block of L street northwest, according to police. He was taken to Emergency Hospital.

In a three-car crash at Rhode Island and Florida avenues northwest, Chester Roark, 51, of Greenbelt, Md., suffered head lacerations and possible concussion of the brain. Police said his truck overturned after it was struck by an auto when Roark drove through a red light. The other machine then struck a third auto. Roark was charged with passing a traffic signal.

Fireman Hurt in Fall

Morrison M. Davis, 27-year-old District fireman, suffered undetermined back injuries yesterday when he fell down a flight of steps at his home, 6405 Thirteenth street northwest. He was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Missing Md. Youth Found Drowned

Westminster, Md., Nov. 24 (AP).—Denton Haines today identified the body of his son, Ralph, 19, after it was recovered from the water at Pretty Boy Dam, Towson, Md.

Ralph, a farmhand, disappeared the night of October 22, and his overturned automobile was found on the roadway near the dam, said John Thomas, Towson police officer.

Dr. W. P. E. Wise, of Pikesville, gave a verdict of accidental drowning.

Anacostia Citizens Indorse Pine

Opposition to enlarging the powers of the District Government was voted last night by the Anacostia Citizens Association.

The group went on record favoring suffrage for District citizens and indorsed District Attorney David A. Pine for District Court justice. Increases in gas taxes or their use for general purposes by the District Government was opposed.

D. C. Art Show Sells Quarter Of Exhibits

Washingtonians are becoming art conscious, according to Richard Lahey, principal of the Corcoran School of Art.

With unconcealed pleasure he pointed out that the second annual exhibition by alumni of the school came to a close yesterday with 27 paintings, drawings and sculptures having been sold in three weeks.

The figure constituted one-fourth of art works exhibited. Prices ranged from $5 to $50.

In addition, he said, several sales are still pending and at least one artist was commisisoned to do a portrait.

Many of the young men and women who were represented in the sales exhibition worked their way through art school by running elevators, making sodas, driving taxicabs and performing other odd jobs.

The national exhibition of mural designs, sponsored by the section of fine arts and which opened at the Corcoran Gallery of Art at the same time as the alumni show, will close tomorrow, it was announced yesterday. Visiting hours on the final day will be from 2 to 5 p. m.

Md. Fire Destroys Church, Parsonage

Chapel, Md., Nov. 24 (AP).—A church and its parsonage were destroyed last night by fire that broke out as the colored congregation was preparing to hold Thanksgiving services.

Firemen rushed from Easton, 7 miles away, in time to save the household effects of the pastor of the Methodist Church, but everything else was lost.

Dirty Work in Cornwall Makes a Rousing Film

Laughton Outdoes Himself in 'Jamaica Inn;' Famous Comic Drops In on His Actor Son; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

RAGING STORMS on a rocky Cornish coast, shipwrecks, murder, attempted hangings, a few surreptitious potshots in the back, the lacey elegance of Regency life, with its candelabra, fine silver and old port; imprisonments, escapes, wild pursuits on land and sea, trickery, treachery, brutality, the law and an insane man's device for cheating justice at the end. Whew!

BELL

Which is by way of saying that those are a few of the major elements of swashbuckling and bloodthirsty melodrama that will be encountered when "Jamaica Inn," starring Charles Laughton, is unleashed on the screen at the Earle Theater, come next Friday. It is pretty strong meat that is served up here, but somehow the whole dastardly business of the arrogant squire and his band of hired cutthroats, whose profession is wrecking ships with valuable cargoes and murdering the crews "without trace," is not nearly so hard to take as this bald description suggests.

The adaptation of the Daphne du Maurier novel, that is reputed to have sold more than a million copies, is a crimson, violent and blunt recital of ghastly deeds, to be sure, but it is so adroitly played in such perfect pitch that horror strangely gives way to admiration as the thing progresses.

This is primarily due to the uncommonly fine work—even for him—contributed to the film by Charles Laughton, in the role of Sir Humphrey Pengallan, one of the most handsomely veneered blackguards that ever slit a throat, lived on plunder or admired a pretty lady. As yesterday afternoon's preview screening ran its course, it became more and more amazing that Laughton should turn out to be such an enormously versatile fellow. His Pengallan is no whit like anything he has heretofore brought to the screen. Occasionally there may be just a dash of Capt. Bligh in it, but in the main it is so variegated, so nicely shaded and so insinuatingly convincing a portrayal the star offers that it goes down in the little black book as his best to date.

Then, too, there is the matter of his new leading woman, never before seen on an American screen. She is Maureen O'Hara, a dark-eyed beauty with perfectly molded features, who combines marked ability as an actress with her natural endowments as a decoration of any celluloid footage in which she appears. "Jamaica Inn" is a forbiddingly turbulent item in which to make a screen debut, but Miss O'Hara comes through with flying colors—and many bruises, lacerations and contusions, no doubt.

The supporting cast, lords and ladies, felons and pirates, is composed of British players of fine capabilities. Leslie Banks and Emlyn Williams are the two who will prove most familiar to American audiences.

It is highly possible that after you have had a shot at "Jamaica Inn" you will hurry out for a shot of Jamaica rum, for the good of the nervous system. Exceedingly dirty work at those Cornish crossroads.

And that wasn't all yesterday afternoon. The drama cricks arrived early at the Warner Brothers projection room and caught Zone Manager John J. Payette and his executive crew with 19 minutes still to go on "Geronimo," Paramount's heroic melodrama of the Apache scourge in our own Southwest—America's, not Washington's. It began to look for a while as if "Jamaica Inn" would be in the nature of an anticlimax, after the Indian chief and his 3,000 warriors began picking on that little band of 16 surviving U. S. cavalrymen, but Mr. Laughton and his gang held their own with the redskins fairly well in the matter of no holds barred and no fouls allowed!

A proud father was in town over Thanksgiving to watch his son do a splendid job of acting, with George M. Cohan in "Madam, Will You Walk?" at the National. In addition to being a proud father, he also is one of the most celebrated comedians of the contemporary theater and the radio. Yeah, Ed Wynn.

The elder Wynn has every right to take pride in his son, Keenan, who refuses to trade on the "old man's" name and insists on going it on his own as a "straight" actor. We have remarked here before that Keenan is an A-No. 1 comic and "hoofer" on his own account, but will have none of it because he does not want to trade on his pappy's reputation. His dad likes that in him and so do I.

Nothing definite, mind you, but pressed a little on the point, Ed admitted that he might be along again before long in a musical piece that is rumbling around in the back of his mind. I gathered that a page or two of it might already be on paper. There was to have been another talk bout it, but, what with the holiday (?) and all, it couldn't be wangled. Maybe both of the Wynns are still here. I'll find out.

Speaking of "Madame, Will You Walk?" it now is being bruited about, as the saying goes, that after Mr. Cohan withdraws from the cast on Saturday night the Sidney Howard comedy will be withdrawn by the Playwrights' Company until next season. That would be a smart move. "Madam, Will You Walk" is too good to be blasted into oblivion by false impressions of its inferiority. We have saved the Playwrights' Company a terrific amount of nervous energy by writing a Sunday piece, pointing out precisely how the play can be made a smash hit! And it isn't costing them a cent. (Advt.)

As an accommodation to their Patrons, the RKO theaters throughout the United States have put on sale the RKO Gift Ticket Books, good at any RKO theater from coast to coast, no matter where purchased. The success of this venture was so great last year that the books are on sale earlier than usual this season. They make nice Christmas presents, since the tickets may be used by any member of the family. That "nontransferable" gag is out. Furthermore, each book carries a special bonus coupon this year that probably means something or other. Anyhow, you can find out at RKO-Keith's, where Manager Meakin already has the handy little gadgets on sale.

Another of those weekly football rallies will be celebrated at Loew's Capitol Theater tonight. The full squads of the Detroit Lions and the Washington Redskins—scheduled to tear each other apart out at Mr. Griffith's ballyard tomorrow—will be on hand. Turk Edwards, who leads the local Marshallites, and the captain of the Detroiters will be introduced from the stage by Master of Ceremonies Sam Jack Kaufman, who is fresh out of Detroit himself.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 24.

RECORD: Bob Moses and Civil Service Commissioner Paul Kern are continuing the feud which was started by Moses when he denounced Kern's offer of bonus credits to municipal employes for exposing frauds . . . Moses and others described this as an OGPU plan . . . No one, however, has as yet explained why Kerns proposed this idea. As a matter of fact, this was an aftermath of the criticism drawn by the transfer of Agnes Sullivan, whose probation report on conditions in Brooklyn helped to bring about the inquiry there. When the newspapers editorialized about Agnes' transfer, Kern—to indicate that fraud exposers are not penalized—introduced this bonus-credit plan.

AMBITION: Paul V. McNutt, former High Commissioner to the Philippines, was introduced to the members of the Dutch Treat Club by Publisher Roy Howard . . . McNutt made no reference to his Presidential aspirations. He discussed, instead, the campaign issues used by all successful politicians in the Philippines . . . "Frankly," he sighed, "I wish I had one as good."

TERROR: Louis Elshemius, the venerable artist whose work received little attention until recently, didn't read his biography, "And He Sat Among the Ashes," until William Schack, the author, presented him with a copy. "I haven't read the book," Elshemius confessed to him, "because I can't afford to buy a copy" . . . For the last 15 years the artist has subscribed to a newspaper-clipping service. He received few clippings during that period, but when the book was published, the clipping service sent him all the comments published about his biography throughout the country . . . Elshemius returned them. "And don't charge me for them," he warned. "I engaged you to send me clippings about myself. These are about Schack's book."

ENTERPRISE: John Steinbeck is writing a new play. It will be called "There's One in Every Family" . . . Although Steinbeck never saw a performance of "Tortilla Flats" or "Of Mice and Men," he has a complete record of all the drama reviews they received as well as the comments and stories published about these plays . . . Wallace Ford, who played George in "Of Mice and Men," collected all the clippings, made phonograph recordings of them and mailed these recordings of them and mailed these recordings to Steinbeck.

HOPE: A Warner Brothers official here brings a vaudeville troupe to Sing Sing Prison every year to entertain the convicts . . . A well-known young lady came to his office and pleaded to be permitted to make the trip. "I can dance very well," she insisted. "We know you can, so that's all right," she was told. "We'll take you" . . . Because the show was to long, the young lady was informed that she couldn't go on . . . "But I must go on," she explained—and did go on, "because my father's up here. He's an old vaudevillian—and he's never seen me work."

CHATTER: George White will venture into the night-club business. He's taking over the Casa Manana . . . The Algonquin Hotel will feature a supper club, with entertainment. The new room will open next Wednesday . . . Secretary of Commerce Wallace will do a book review for C. B. S. on Tuesday . . . The Sheik Al-Rawaf of Arabia was fired by Universal. He had been hired as a technical adviser for "I Cover the War," but was dropped from the pay roll when he insisted that his name be absent from the screen credits . . . When Benny Goodman, Tommy Dorsey and Bob Crosby learned that Artie Shaw had abandoned his band—the story was revealed first in this column—they offered to supply arrangements to the orchestra and joined the Shaw crew in a jam session on Monday night.

ARTS: Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is interested in bringing the Ballet Russe to the screen . . . Bob Rubin of M.-G.-M. is interested in the plan and discussed it with his associates . . . "Metro Presents the Ballet Russe.' That sounds marvelous," he enthused. "Why can't we get Eleanor Powell to do it?"

KNOWLEDGE: A reporter lunched yesterday with Arthur J. Burks, author of the new genosophy book, "Who Do You Think You Are?" . . . "Mr. Burks," the reporter asked, "just what is genosophy?" . . . The author sipped his drink, set it down slowly and said: "Did you have a father?" . . . "Of course," was the reply . . . "And a mother? And grandparents?" Burks continued. The reporter nodded . . . "Well," the author said, motioning for his check, "that proves it" . . . "Proves what?" the reporter asked . . . "Genosophy," said Burks—and walked out.

Christmas Hits Hollywood Far Ahead of Time

Hollywood Boulevard Already Transformed Into Santa Claus Lane

By Frederick C. Othman

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, Nov. 24.—Temperatures were 86 today in the shade, where there was any, and we sallied down Hollywood boulevard in our summer pants to discover sweating tinsmiths fitting all the lampposts with sheet metal Christmas trees.

That's by way of indicating that when it comes to celebrating anything, Christmas included, Hollywood's always ahead.

Tonight, a full month before the great day, a Santa Claus uncomfortable in hot red suit and whiskers, will begin his nightly sleigh rides under the semi-tropical moon. It is no ordinary sleigh, either. It cost the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce $25,000 to get a sleigh with a straight-eight engine and a smokestack to puff artificial snow upon folks who never have seen the real thing.

Opening ceremonies will be something. Stretched across the boulevard at La Brea avenue will be a 300-foot ribbon of movie film. Harold Lloyd will snip it with a pair of golden scissors and Santa Claus will step on the starter.

Soda Pop Christening

The Misses Priscilla, Rosemary, Lola and Leota Lane will smash a bottle of orange-flavored soda pop on the radiator of Santa's sleigh.

Miss Penny Singleton will snap the switch that lights the tin Christmas trees and illuminates the artificial moons strung above the trolley wires.

With his snow puffing 20 feet into the air and getting in the hair of the onlookers, Santa will roll slowly down the boulevard. He won't be alone. No sir.

As first assistant he will have Miss Dorothy Lamour, without her sarong. She'll wear clothes, all right, but no sarong. She said she did not think it appropriate.

Those two great horsemen, Gene Autry and Leo Carillo, will canter alongside.

That not-so-great horseman, Buck Benny, will bring up the rear, provided the chamber of commerce can find him a tame enough horse.

That Drum Majorette

Miss Elsie Crabtree, the University of Nevada co-ed whose dimpled knees and press agent got her in bad with the dean of women, will be head drum majorette. She will have 60—count 'em—assistants, all with beautiful knees.

Behind them will strut six brass bands, playing "Silent Night" at one and the same time, while 125 police contend with an expected 300,000 spectators. That's a lot of spectators.

Thereafter until Christmas, Santa will make his 3-mile ride, with a different movie star nightly as guest.

The Christmas tree merchants, meantime, are spreading sawdust on all the vacant lots on Wilshire boulevard, setting up their paint-spraying equipment, and preparing for early business. It still will be possible to buy a Christmas tree in Hollywood the color nature made it, but it will be difficult.

Technicolor Xmas Trees

Trees will be painted white, blue, pink, gold, silver, lavender and other colors to match the wallpaper.

Barring a strike by studio workmen, the season will be a reasonably joyous one for the movie colony. When war was declared, the big studios each discharged several hundred employes, but most were rehired.

Production has continued to boom and there have been so many mob scenes that the 8,000 registered extras, whose wages averaged $20 each last year, may do a little better in 1939. Nearly 500 pictures have been completed since the first of the year and—to show the unbounding optimism of the scenario writers—nearly 4,000 movie titles registered.

The producers have spent almost $150,000,000 this year and a large chunk of this money is about to be expended for Christmas presents. Smart shops already are advertising emerald necklaces at $10,000 and ermine coats at $5,000.

Some child of a movie star probably will be surprised Christmas morning with his own private merry-go-round, advertised at $325, installed.

Cast Reunion

Reunion of two of the principal characters in "Maisie" takes place with the signing of Ian Hunter for the role of Dr. Warwick in "Congo Maisie," featuring Ann Sothern.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 24 (INS).—Hollywood, beware! New York is deadly serious about luring movie production back East. Today I learned that Nat Ross, formerly associated with the Laemmles, has raised a million dollar bankroll to produce "Hellzapoppin'" on Long Island with the entire cast of the New York stage hit, including Olson and Johnson, doubling in the movie between shows.

LOUELLA PARSONS

All that remains to cinch the deal is a tie-up with a major production company to release the picture—and there are two of our biggest companies bidding for it. With "Hellzapoppin'" paving the way, there's no doubt that several other current stage hits will follow suit and ask producers to film the movie versions of their shows right in New York. The rumor was strong before I left Hollywood that New York would offer many inducements to Hollywood producers to make pictures in the East next year—and they're getting the ball rolling sooner than expected.

The wholesale sinking of neutral liners on the high seas is not exactly a comedy idea—but the current headlines have given Richard Maibaum an idea for a story for funny ma Frank Morgan. Yesterday M-G-M bought his yarn called "Hurray—I'm Alive," which has a novel twist. It's about a henpecked family man who is booked to sail for Europe on business and misses his boat at the last minute. The liner is sunk and his name is listed among the missing. Believing this is his chance to escape forever from his temperamental family, he fails to report he is alive. Frank should be very funny as the hero who discovers it's more fun to be officially alive than legally dead. William Thiele will direct.

Charles Boyer couldn't have been more upset over the story that he had come back to America to make propaganda films for France. The first thing he did when he and Pat Paterson arrived was to call his agent in Hollywood. "I don't know how such an absurd story ever started," he said over the long-distance telephone. "There isn't a word of truth in the assertion I'm back here to go on a lecture tour or to make propaganda films. I returned because I have several important film contracts to fulfill—and I'm going back to Hollywood to do what I've always done—act!"

Snapshots from all over collected at random: Bruce Cabot is giving Cobina Wright, Jr., a rush in Hollywood. They were at the Lamaze together. Virginia Cherrill (Mrs. Cary Grant No. 1) and her husband, the East of Jersey, have turned over their palatial estate to 100 of the evacuated children of London and have taken an apartment; Jerry Hopper and Marsha Hunt celebrated their first wedding anniversary today at Santa Barbara, where they spent their honeymoon; my "biographer," Roz Russell, is up to her neck completely redecorating her home in Beverly Hills; after signing a six months' lease for a house at the beach, Isa Miranda discovered the sea air made her ill and she's moving back to town.

Lyle Talbot, who had been seen everywhere with Adonel Massey, showed up at the Club Seventeen with Jean Marshall; Katherine Aldridge with Al Wright, Jr., at the Beverly Derby; little Gloria Jean and her mother leave for Dallas, Tex., where Gloria will sing with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra Sunday and Monday; Joan Fontaine, looking and feeling much better after gaining three extra pounds, with the bridegroom, Brian Aherne, at the Katinka Restaurant; Nena Quartaro (I haven't heard her name in a long time) was at the House of Murphy with Earl Chase, a New York artist.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Takes Off Weight

Spencer Tracy went back to work on a studio sound stage, fifteen pounds lighter than when he left for Idaho location on "Northwest Passage."

Author Owen

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Nov. 24.

There's more behind this break between Gary Cooper and Sam Goldwyn than meets the eye. It's been brewing for a long time. But only now has come out into the open. Ever since Marco Polo, Gary feels his career's been taking a nose-dive. And now, in "The Westerner," which he turned down flat after reading the script, because he felt it wasn't fair to the public to star him in a picture which gave the starring role to Walter Brennan. He loves Walter and is delighted that he's got the part—but tried to persuade Sam to use another boy; but nothing doing. Now, mind you, Gary didn't complain when Sam took an unknown girl and put her in the lead—nor when he gave socialite Forrest Tucker a prominent part, nor Dana Andrews the boy from Texas who used to be an attendant at a gasoline station. But when Sam said, "So you don't think I'm a good producer" and Gary said, "No," the fat was in the fire and the fun started. Then Sam threatened, unless Gary did the part, to close the studio. Not wanting to throw 100 people out of work, Cooper is now in Arizona doing "The Westerner," where they had a splash opening of Goldwyn City, attended by the Governor amidst pomp and ceremony. But the producer and star were not on speaking terms.

HOPPER

Mind if I nominate Edna Mae Oliver as the most courageous woman in movies? In "Nurse Edith Cavell" she refused to surrender her chateau to the invading German army and in "Drums Along the Mohawk" she refused to give up her home to the Indians and even made them carry her downstairs in her bed. Fair warning to anybody trying to dispossess her.

Probably the most memorable tag line in any play was in "Front Page"—"The so-and-so stole my watch!" Well, Howard Hawkes claims he has one equally as startling in "My Girl Friday" and to make sure nobody hears it before the preview everybody, including most members of the cast, were shooed off the Columbia lot while the scene was being shot.

How about giving Arthur Unger a one-line description anent this anti-Willie Bioff labor campaign. "For 'Variety's' sake his is the last stand of one-man journalism." He owns 'Variety.'

Looks serious for Sonja Henie and Alan Curtis, now that Priscilla Lawson has decided to remain in New York. There'll be a divorce . . . Is it true that Joe Schenck bought a controlling interest in Grauman's Chinese Theater? The head electrician at RKO could double for Kay Kyser. His name is Frank Eucker and he looks so much like Kay the latter ought to hire him to sign his autographs and play benefits.

George Raft is the best-dressed "convict" in pictures. His prison uniforms are custom tailored and he has three duplicates made so he can change into clean clothes after working in water scenes and things.

Our labor strike has been postponed until Friday with another meeting set for that day. I loved Eddie Mannix's fairness as representative of the producers when he said, "When the 10 per cent increase first came up we were too busy to sit down and talk it over with them. And as for Willie Bioff, who represents the unions, mind I don't agree with him, but I respect his attitude, he's one of the most constructive-thinking fellows I've ever met." Which to me is high praise in a labor battle.

1940 Winter Olympic Games Canceled

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Win the professional football championship and never mind the expense—those are the orders under which Coach Gus Henderson of the Detroit Lions is operating. They were issued by a little red-faced man named George A. (Dick) Richards who happens to own not only the Lions but three thriving radio stations and a reputation for bizarre showmanship.

POVICH

A rich man's whopping toy—that's a fairly accurate description of the big, meaty Detroit football team. Mr. Richards, who has acquired a generous share of the world's goods long since, has developed an amazing passion for football. But it must be winning football. That's why he fired his coach, Dutch Clark, last season. He was severly pained by Clark's losing teams.

The paradox is that Dick Richards hasn't seen his Lions play this season. Doctor's orders sent him to the quietude of his California ranch. They permit him to watch Pacific Coast college football, but they prohibit the excitement of watching his own team play. And so Mr. Richards contents himself with scouting the college lads for likely-looking prospects for his Detroit team.

Richards to 'See' Game by Telegraph

He won't see the Lions battle the Redskins tomorrow at Griffith Stadium, but he won't be completely cut off from the game. In his Palm Springs, Calif., home he has installed a direct telegraph wire that brings him the play-by-play description of all of his Lions' games and tomorrow he'll be looking over the telegrapher's shoulders for word of his heroes.

But even a rich man's order can't produce a football championship. Richards' Lions started well enough this season with four straight victories, but of late they have not been doing so well. They have only an outside chance at this writing to figure in any championship. When they lost to Cleveland last week it was sad news to Richards. Only on the twin possibilities that they beat the Redskins tomorrow and then beat the Packers next week can they remain in the race. With two victories of that sort, they would find themselves in a three-way tie with the Packers and Bears for the Western Division championship.

The same sort of grandiose tactics that helped him to success in the business world, Richards has brought into pro football. His background is interesting. As an automobile tire salesman in this thirties he became the No. 1 salesman of the Firestone Tire Co. Then business for himself beckoned and he bought out a Detroit automobile agency.

Largest Overhead in Pro League

The business he bought wasn't much until Richards began to practice his own magic sort of salesmanship. In the huge show window of his agency, he installed no less than Paul Whiteman and his band. For one week, he paid the King of Jazz $10,000 and charged it to advertising. It was no less than a terrific stunt. Richard's automobile business developed into the foremost in Detroit.

He got in on the ground floor of radio with his new-found wealth and took over a small station in Detroit. Five years later he could have sold it for a profit of 500 per cent, but, showman, that he was, Richards liked the appeal of radio. He didn't sell. What he did do was to buy another radio station in Cleveland, and another radio station in Beverly Hills, Calif.

His Detroit football team probably operates at the greatest overhead expense of any team in the league. Richard's football offices are located in a large hotel beneath a sign portraying a galloping lion in Neon lights. His board of directors sounds like a Who's Who of the automotive industry. His Lions probably travel more de luxe than any club in the league.

Dick Finicky About Lions' Uniforms

He doesn't think the show his team puts on should begin and end with the football they play. That's why the Lions are attired in silver-colored football pants with jerseys of a shade of Honolulu blue selected by Richards himself. He's finicky about such things as lining up the headgears in a tricky array before the game. Nothing bothers him as much as a stray helmet or a shabby-looking ball player, unless it's losing a football game.

He's gone the whole hog on a band for his Lions. He likes the idea of a band at a football game, and nothing less than a 150-piece unit would suffice. So he hired the famed Wayne University Band intact. And nothing less than the biggest bass drum in captivity would please him. He had one made to his special order in a Chicago factory and fumed a bit because delivery was delayed because they had built the thing so big that they had to dismantle it before they could get it out of the building.

And you ought to see Dick Richards' water wagon for use when the Lions call a time-out. That, too, is a special job designed by Richards himself. It's the same Honolulu blue with white trimmings, with individual drinking cups and towel racks for his darlings. And the darn thing has no less than a Klaxon horn to sound its coming.

He likes his football team, big, fast and smart. When Bill Shepherd reported to training camp 15 pounds overweight, Coach Gus Henderson was frantic. "I know you can get the weight off, Bill, but hurry," said Henderson. "The boss might drop around and he explodes when he sees a football player with a fat tummy."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Nov. 24.—Before any of us gets into an ugly brawl over whether Maj. Bob Neyland is a better coach than Elmer Layden, or whether a school's football department could do better under Howard Jones than it could under Elmer Layden or Carl Snavely, let's not overlook the fact that in the not too distant future all of these current immortals will be fired for "incompetence."

CONSIDINE

What's that?

Of course they'll be fired. One of these years those fine coaches are going to insult enough alumni by coming up with a bunch of very bad football players, or enough of their good players will be hurt to make their teams blow four of five games, or the school will get a president like the distinguished Dr. Robert M. Hutchins and that president will make the coach use scholars. Then the coach, even though he will be a greater tractician than he is today, will suddenly be a bum and be given the bum's rush.

We mustn't forget that ten years ago about the mightiest name in football coaches was Wallace Wade. At least he commanded more money from the magazines than any other coach, except perhaps Rockne. But after he went to Duke, he apparently lost his contact with his talent-getters and disappeared from national view until last year or so, when his friends shanghaied Ace Parker off the Virginia Poly campus, and unearthed Eric Tipton.

Pop Warner Was Right in There

Right in there with him ten years ago (and before that) was Pop Warner, who today knows more football than Layden, Snavely, Neyland and Jones combined. But Pop's a secondary coach at San Jose College, the real coach being Dud Degroote. Frank Thomas and Harry Kipke were the coaching idols of the man in the street a decade and less ago, but you don't hear too much of them today, when, through additional experience, they must be better coaches than they were when the magazines were clamoring for them and their ghosts. Twenty years ago the wonder coach of the ages was Charley Moran—who happened to come up with two distinguished academicians named Bo McMillan and Red Roberts, and Zuppke was a terrific master-mind, the public believed, when he had Grange. And by the by, what ever became of Bernie Bierman? Yes, we know he's still at Minnesota, but why isn't he even more of a wonder man than he was a few short years ago—when you couldn't throw a rock into the Gopher squad without hitting an All-American.

Striking examples of how flimsy a hold even great coaches have on their jobs or their fame can be found in the cases of Jones and Jock Sutherland. Whether Southern California beats Notre Dame tomorrow, or gets run right out of South Bend, Jones will keep his job. Because the Trojans are as good as in the Rose Bowl. Two Pacific Conference games remain on his schedule, Washington and U. C. L. A., but he should win those

And Now He's a Wonder Again

But a year ago when Southern Cal lost its opener with Alabama, and lost later to Washington in a fog in Seattle, the wolves were baying at his door. His luncheon speaking engagements dropped off, and he became the pariah of the once enthusiastic Rotarians. Petitions were signed, asking for his dismissal. Then his athletes got hot, got into the Bowl, and a third stringer named Doyle Nave happened to thriow a couple of passes which connected and beat Duke. So Jones is a wonder coach again, and the Pacific Coast wolves are concentrating now on Tiny Thornhill, of Stanford, and Stub Allison, of California, who, it is charged, have lost their knack (and their Grayson, Topping, Moscrip, Bottari and Chapman). They'll go, probably this year.

Sutherland went out and got what they hired him to get, the best amateurs money could buy. So he was fired, because he was such a good coach and had such a great team that football henpecked the educational side of the university. At least the president of the school thought it did.

Coaches have been generally envied because they always make more money than the faculty of their schools, and usually more than the presidents of the schools. But their lot isn't hot, when you come right down to it. Their brethren in the schools of education can go along, year in and out, teaching the educational equivalent of the Statute of Liberty play, without ever having to care whether the classes are full of idiots or lousy with Phi Beta Kappas. There's a blessed anonymity beyond the curiosity or venom of scalp-hunting old grads. The coaches make a little more money for the few years they stay in one spot, but there isn't one master among them, no matter how great an artist, who can rise above the abject need of good, subsidized talent, or above the sadistic second guessing of an unfeeling alumni.

War Causes Nazi Officials To Resign

International Prexy Says It's Too Late To Transfer Event Slated for February

By the Associated Press

Brussels, Nov. 24.—The 1940 winter Olympic games, doomed from the start of the European conflict, have been abandoned and will not be transferred from Garmisch-Partenkirchen, Germany, to another site, it was announced today by Count Henri de Baillet Latour, president of the International Olympic Committee.

Latour's announcement followed an earlier one from German Olympic officials, saying they would be forced to resign as hosts to the skaters, skiiers and bob-sledders because of the rule forbidding a warring nation to stage the games.

Can't Move Games

From Lausanne, Switzerland, Secretary Andre Berdez of the International Olympic Committee voiced hope that it would be possible to transfer the snow games to another site, but Latour said it was too late. His apparently was the last word.

"We abandoned the games because we could not hold them in a belligerent country," he said, "and it is too late to arrange for another site."

As the games are scheduled in February, it obviously would be difficult, if not impossible, to install elsewhere in such brief time a plant worthy of the winter sports. Particularly scarce are bob-sled runs of Olympic championship caliber.

Scarcity of Sled Runs

This scarcity of suitable winter plants was emphasized by the selection of Garmisch-Partenkirchen as the Olympic site for the second straight time. Since the 1936 games were held there, extensive improvements have been made.

Abandonment of the winter games is not expected to shake Finland from its firm determination to stage the summer games at Helsinki. The Finns already have spent large sums in preparation for the sports, and they probably will hold them on schedule even if all the contestants are from the Scandinavian countries.

Robin Lee Turns Pro As Games Are Canceled

St. Paul, Nov. 24 (AP).—Robin Lee, of St. Paul, five-time and present national amateur senior figure skating champion, has turned professional, Ayner R. Lee, father and instructor of the 19-year-old youth, announced tonight.

Robin will become instructor at the Winnipeg, Manitoba, winter club, December 1.

Cancellation of the Olympic winter games prompted Robin and his father to accept the Winnipeg offer. The youthful skater had hoped to add an Olympic title to his string of championships before he joined the professional ranks.

Hitler vs. Benito; Game: Football Crowd: 100,000

International News Service Staff Writer

Berlin, Nov. 24.—In the first international football match since the outbreak of the war, Chancellor Hitler's German team will face Fremier Mussolini's Italian players Sunday in a sell-out game in Olympia Stadium in Berlin.

The game has been a complete sell-out for some days, and not even an inch of standing room is available in the huge bowl. More than 100,000 managed to obtain admission ducats, but approximately 100,000 fans were unable to procure tickets and will have to listen to the game on the radio.

G.W., Bucknell Clash Today At Stadium

Colonials 6-5 Choice To Break Five-Year Jinx Over Rivals

Looking better each week, George Washington University's Colonial eleven will be a 6-5 favorite to break a five-year jinx this afternoon by beating Bucknell's Bisons at Griffith Stadium.

Kickoff is scheduled for 2:00, Expected attendance: 8,000. This is the last scheduled college game of the local season.

Bill Reinhart's Colonials, displaying their best offensive of the season last week in defeating Kansas for their first major victory, will take the field at full strength to prevent a sixth consecutive Bucknell triumph in this series.

Ed Wiliamoksi, sophomore halfback star, apparently is recovered from injuries received in the Kansas game, and will start at left halfback. Tom Grady, another sophomore back who starred against the Jayhawks, will be held out to relieve Wiliamoski.

Bucknell, which was strong enough to extend Georgetown, 7-13, last month, will unveil in Halfback Funair, Fullback Kiick, and Guard Johnny Plewak, three of the finest college players to appear here this season.

Plewak, especially, is an exceptional player for he weighs only about 150 pounds. It was Plewak and his running mate at guard, Grieco, who headed the Bucknell defense that bottled Georgetown's spread plays more effectively than has any other Hoya foe in two years.

A battle of super ends also is expected to feature this game. G. W.'s All-America candidate, Bob Nowaskey, will meet his match in Johnny McElhanny, Bucknell junior wingman, according to reports from Lewiston, Pa.

If McElhany actually is half the end Nowaskey is, then fans today will see on the same field two of the greatest college players in the Nation, for according to many football sages who have seen him, Nowaskey is without peer as an all-around end.

Bantam Champion K. O.'s Webster

Cleveland, Nov. 24 (AP).—Georgie Pace, the National Boxing Association's world bantamweight champion, scored a technical knockout over Jimmy Webster, of Toronto, in the eighth round of a scheduled ten-round nontitle bout tonight.

The Cleveland Negro had Webster hanging on the ropes at the end of the seventh, after Webster twice went down on his knees in that stanza. Referee Lou Parker stopped the fight after 28 seconds of the eighth round.

Grinnell Gymnasium Destroyed by Fire

Grinnell, Iowa, Nov. 24 (AP).—Rand Gymnasium at Grinnell College, oldest gymnasium west of the Mississippi River, was destroyed by fire today. The loss was estimated at $15,000.

The building, used for women's athletics, was constructed in 1897.

Four Titles at Stake In Major Games Today

Southern California-Notre Dame Game Holds Spotlight of Intersectional Games; Ohio State Plays Michigan; Missouri Seeks Big Six Crown

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Nov. 24.—Three major conference championships and the Eastern "Ivy League" title come up for settlement tomorrow as college football reaches its next-to-last major Saturday. But chief interest will be attached to the gridiron festivities at South Bend, Ind., where no championship of any sort will be at stake.

There Rose Bowl-minded Tennessee's scouts will be in the jam-packed stands as unbeaten, once-tied Southern California deploys against Notre Dame. It promises to be a battle of potent backfields, with man power likely to decide the issue and both teams amply equipped in that respect.

Titles at Stake

The conference races will come to a close in the Middle West. Ohio State, which has gained the momentum of a streamlined steam roller, will stack up against Michigan and can be tied for Big Ten honors only if upset by the Wolverines while Iowa is dumping Northwestern. Missouri can sew up Big Six honors by beating under dog Kansas.

A tie seems the likely finish in the Southern Conference, where Duke and Clemson, all-winning in league competition, will be favored to win their final games from North Carolina State and Furman, respectively. Cornell, third in national ranking this week, will seek its second straight Ivy League championship and first all-winning season since 1923 in its annual battle with Penn; Harvard and Yale will meet in their traditional clash, and on the Pacific Coast U. C. L. A., seeking to keep up with Southern California in the race for the Rose Bowl, is likely to strike a tartar in Oregon State.

While a number of top teams can hold their fire until the second Thanksgiving Day or next Saturday, this observer is not as fortunate and therefore puts the following predictions on the line (probable attendance figures in parentheses):

Notre Dame-Southern California (58,000)—They said the Trojans have been priming for this one all fall. Despite the awesome reputations of Messrs. Schindler, Lansdell and Nave, this vote goes to Notre Dame.

Penn-Cornell (70,000)—Even in Philadelphia, the odds on this one are 1-3 in the Ithacans' favor. Recalling last year's scoreless tie, these odds are downright silly. Still, everything is on the Big Red's side except Francis Xavier Reagan, and he can't block this vote for Cornell.

U. C. L. A.-Oregon State (60,000)—The Uclans' Kenny Washington is rated probably the best back on the West Coast. The Uclans are playing

Navy Seeks 1st Major Win Over Tigers

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 24.—A big "pep" rally was staged by the regiment of midshipmen in front of Bancroft Hall tonight, the eve of the football battle with the Princeton Tigers in Palmer Stadium, Princeton, tomorrow afternoon. The Middies broke forth with their enthusiasm immediately after supper and the celebration was attended by practically all officers assigned to the station and members of their families.

Ranking officers and members of the coaching staff, one after another, were called on and delivered brief addresses of encouragement to the jubilant youngsters. The general trend of remarks was that the Middies have an even chance of subduing the Tigers and thereby annexing their first major victory of the season.

Tars Spirited

In chilly blasts from the northeast and under a heavily overcast horizon that forebode snow or rain for the game, the Tars put zip and dash into their final practice session this afternoon. Special stress was given to defensive work against aerials, as Princeton, with its famed Dick Alderice, is noted for its overhead game. Their own passing also came in for a long rehearsal. Every player likely to be used against the Jungaleers was given a chance during the workout. The injury jinx has eased to a marked degree, although at least three members of the "A" squad will not make the junket to Princeton, it was announced. These are Pat Gray and Ralph Boyer, blocking backs, and Hal Harwood, regular center. They are being nursed along for the Army game next Saturday. Emmett (Pumpkin) Wood, ace of the backs, who has been the chief victim of injuries, appears to be in good condition, but it is questionable whether he will be used tomorrow.

Lions' Passing Attack May Equal Redskins

Detroit Has Three Standout Tossers Ready for Tomorrow

The emphasis will be on forward passing when the Redskins meet the Detroit Lions tomorrow, it is apparent from the past performances of the two teams. Both the Lions and the Redskins are equipped with high-caliber passing and receiving units and are partial to aerial play.

Sammy Baugh and Frankie Filchock comprise a potent passing duo, but the Redskins will be outnumbered by the Lions if the Detroit club chooses to call upon all its passers. Coach Gus Henderson has no less than three stand-out throwers available.

Sloan Passes

They are Dwight Sloan, former Arkansas star who made a professional reputation with the Cardinals last season; Johnny Pingle, the rookie from Michigan State whose passing talents have proved a pleasant surprise to Henderson, and Darrell Tully, a first-year man from East State Texas Teachers College. Tully, as a collegian, compiled a passing record superior to Baugh's in point of efficiency.

In Ray Hamilton, 6-foot 4-inch end, the Lions boast one of the most-feared pass receivers in the league. Hamilton, a teammate of Sloan's at Arkansas, played last year with the Cleveland Rams and the Detroit club bid high to acquire him. Jim Moscrip, former Stanford ace, will be at the other end for the Lions.

The Lions will also bring to Griffith Stadium a new-found threat in Phil Martinovich, rookie placement kicker who three weeks ago tied the league record by kicking three field goals in a single game. From anywhere within the 45-yard line the Lions are expected to call on Martinovich if their attack bogs down.

Will Yank Marty

Martinovich, however, will see little action aside from his kicking duties. In an effort to learn his other talents, Coach Henderson left Martinovich in for one additional play against the Chicago Bears and it cost the Lions the ball game. The Bears threw a touchdown pass into territory he was supposed to cover.

Bright stars of the Detroit line are Alex Wojciechowicz, the former Fordham center, and John Wiethe, 195-pound running guard from Xavier University. Wiethe's play in the line has been one of the features of the Lions this season.

The Redskins today will share the Griffith Stadium field with the Lions, who will arrive in the city early this morning and stage an hour-and-a-half workout before noon.

Jersey Team Defeated in Rough Game

Ross Knipfel Gets 'Shiner' in Melee; Locals Near Scoring Record for Season

By Jack Munhall.

A fire on the Baltimore road delayed the Jersey Skeeters last night and they were fully half an hour late for their Eastern Amateur Ice Hockey League appointment with the Washington Eagles at Riverside Stadium. But the 30 minutes proved merely a reprieve for the River Dale, N. J., visitors, for they took the ice to absorb a 7-to-0 shellacking from the winging Eagles, who thereby retained their second-place tie with the Baltimore Orioles.

The seven goals represented the Eagles' high scoring mark of the season, and was only one behind the league record of eight, established by the leading New York Rovers' team. The Rovers have won three of four games, and the Orioles, who beat the Atlantic City Sea Gulls last night, and the Eagles have copped three and lost two.

Twenty-two hundred paying customers saw the Eagles flash vastly improved teamwork and considerably sharper shooting and passing as they completely routed the Skeeters, who recently walloped the Sea Gulls.

Fight Enlivens Game

A fist fight between Paul Courtreau, the Eagles' scrappy center and former welterweight professional boxer, and Joe Ranniker, Skeeters' defenseman, touched off a short but spirited free-for-all between players of both teams in the third period.

Courtreau and Ranniker each drew a two-minute penalty for "unnecessary roughness" and Ross (Nip) Knipfel, Washington's great defenseman, a shiny "mouse" for their parts in the slugging battle.

For Knipfel his black eye was strange reward for the prominent role he essayed in the Eagles' splendid victory. Returning to the line-up after missing the Atlantic City game because of water on the knee, Knipfel "made" his team. His steady defense play and clever passing seemed to improve the Eagles 25 per cent over their performance against the Sea Gulls in their local debut last week.

Score Three Times in First

Knipfel, big, blond and nice looking, was credited with one unassisted goal as the Eagles scored three times in the first period and twice each in the second and third, and one assist.

The Eagles' scoring star, in the number of points made, was Bill Cairns, a spare, who twice sent shots skidding past the visiting goalie, "Goofy" Hemming. Alan Foster, "Admiral" Dewey, Courtrea and Ken Partis tallied once each for the winners.

The Skeeters, balked by the Eagles' stalwart defense and by the

55,000 to See Harvard, Yale

By the Associated Press

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 24.—Although Harvard and Yale rank as the weakest among the "Ivy Leaguers," a crowd of 55,000 is expected to watch those ancient rivals play their fifty-eighth football game tomorrow at the stadium.

A comparison of the spotty records of the Crimson and the Blue indicates they are set for their customary hard-fought and close contest. Because Capt. Torby MacDonald will start, the odds makers have declared the Crimson the favorites. Harvard's 1939 attack was built around MacDonald last spring and then discarded when he became an early casualty.

The price makers and many others expect that the speedy MacDonald will be able to make Coach Dick Harlow's wide plays click, thereby scattering the Yale defenses and providing openings for the spin-bucking and off-tackle slams of Charley Spreyer, George Heiden, Fran Lee and Joe Gardella, Harvard's only other efficient carriers.

Spangler Signed For Arena Bout

Joey Spangler, battling welterweight from Richmond and Dick O'Leary, formerly of Boston, now fighting out of Baltimore, were signed yesterday by Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn to meet in a six-round semifinal to the Phil Furr-El Brookman eight-round event at Turner's Arena Monday night.

O'Leary stole the show in Baltimore last week going six fast rounds with the favorite Lew Raymond.

Bullis Prep Routs Devitt, 33-0, in 'Little Army-Navy' Game

Every Player Sees Action For Victors

Dove, Leahy Star As Bullis Defeats Rivals in Game At Silver Spring

Complete and tasty revenge was Bullis Prep's portion yesterday as it ground Devitt under a 33-0 score in the seventh renewal of the two school's annual "Little Army-Navy" game at Sligo Park, Silver Spring.

Beaten, 19-0, in last year's engagement and on the short end of a 4-2 count in games since the series began in 1933, Bullis bounced back against its white-helmeted foes and scored almost at will. Every man on the Bullis squad saw action to run up the widest margin ever registered by either team.

Dove Stands Out

Twice in the first period Bullis shoved into pay territory and then sent its second team against Devitt's surprisingly inadequate defense. Ed Dove, a former George Washington High school star, provided the punch of that period, rushing the line for both touchdowns. The first two of three placements hung up by Bill Leahy made the score 19-0 before last year's prep champ had started to roll.

The third touchdown didn't come until after the half time rest, and this time it was Bud Troxell who crossed the crucial white line from the five. The score was set up by Troxell's 15-yard aerial to Bill Helbrook. Leahy missed the placement.

In the closing minutes of the third period Troxell set up his second touchdown with another arrow-straight pass, this time to George Simmler for 20 yards. The next play saw Helbrook dash 7 yards around end to tally, but again Leahy missed the conversion.

Spectacular Aerial

By the time the fourth quarter rolled around Bullis didn't particularly care to score again and Devitt didn't care if it did. The closing touchdown resulted from the longest and most spectacular aerial of the game, a 30-yard toss by Helbrook to Simmler, who caught the ball on the 25 and evaded the last two Devitts for 6 points.

Despite the one-sided outcome, it was a hard-fought and bitter clash. Several times fist fights were narrowly averted, and every tackle was as hard as it possibly could be made. Numerous penalties for roughing and holding marked the game, which was also highlighted by an excessive number of pass interceptions in the final quarter.

"Punchy" Kemp, quarterback of the Devitts and a former All-High selection, played as much ball as anyone on the field, though his brilliant performance was staged alone.

85,000 to See Ohio State and Michigan Clash

Victory Will Give Buckeyes Big Ten Grid Championship

By the Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 24.—For the first time in a decade the Amalgamated Order of Self-Appointed Football Forecasters neglected to award Ohio State the Western Conference championship in September.

And so tomorrow the Buckeyes, one of the surprise elevens of this astonishing season, play Michigan here certain of walking off the field no wore than a tie for the title.

Only Prestige Remains

This was to be Michigan's year, the forecasters said two months ago, but all the Wolverines can salvage out of their thirty-sixth meeting with the Scarlet and Gray is prestige, and the possibility of having knocked the Buckeyes out of their first undisputed conference championship since 1920.

Here are the "ifs" of the showdown Saturday in the conference:

If Ohio State defeats or ties Michigan, the title belongs to the Buckeyes alone for the first time since 1920.

If Michigan wins from Ohio State, then Iowa, the No. 1 upstarb of the fall warfare, can gain a share of the championship by beating Northwestern. A loss or tie by Iowa will hand the crown to Ohio State all alone regardless of how the Buckeyes fare.

85,000 to See Game

Given favorable weather, the meeting of Ohio and Michigan is expected to attract 85,000 spectators, one of the largest crowds of the year. Rain was forecast for tonight with colder weather tomorrow.

The payoff when the last gun sounds tomorrow is likely to be on reserves—a department where Ohio State is extremely long and Michigan woefully short.

So far Michigan has been able to muster a capable starting front and when it has been intact Tom Harmon, the touchdown kid from Gary, Ind., has gone to town. With substitutions in the lineup, Harmon and Michigan have stopped.

In contrast Ohio State has used an average of 38 players a game, the 49 men who saw action against Indiana being the top and the 26 used against Minnesota the low. Four Buckeyes who were not picked for the trip hitch-hiked their way to the Chicago game and played as Coach Francis Schmidt used all of the 40 players in uniform. With practically the same team that won but four games in 1938, Schmidt has brought his eleven thundering into the last battle of the year with only a loss to mighty Cornell.

Rain Dampens Kansas Hopes

By the Associated Press

Lawrence, Kans., Nov. 24.—Coach Gwinn Henry stuck out his hand, had it dampened by a drop of rain today and remarked dolefully "it looks like only tradition will be on our side tomorrow."

Kansas, with nothing to lose, and Missouri, with a bowl bid to gain, clash tomorrow in a football game which means Missouri's first Big Six crown, if they can overcome the Jayhawks.

Only once in the past 20 years have the Tigers been able to defeat Kansas at Lawrence, and that is the tradition Henry referred to.

Rain, of course, would handicap Missouri's passer, Paul Christman, as much as it would Ralph Miller, the Kansas hope. But if you remove "Rifling Ralph" from the offense you have only a Kansas team that lost to five of its seven opponents so far this season.

Miller, recovering from a knee operation, has played only 34 minutes this season, but 19 of his 26 passes have been completed.

Basketmen Sought

Manager Frank Smith, of the Naiman Photo 145-pound cage team, expects to have one of the outstanding quints of the city this season, and would like to book games witn strong teams. Either at home or away suits the Photomen, and Smith can be reached at Adams 3425.

Billy Conn Awarded E. J. Neil Trophy

Louis Only Other For Writer Memorial Fighter Named in Poll

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 24.—The Edward J. Neil Memorial Trophy for 1939, honoring the memory of the late Associated Press foreign correspondent and boxing writer, was awarded today to Billy Conn, dark-haired world light-heavyweight champion.

Making the second annual award of the plaque, which went last year to Jack Dempsey, the New York Boxing Writers Association decided the Pittsburgh Irish lad had done "the most for boxing" during the current year. Only one other candidate, Joe Louis, received any votes in the balloting.

Boxing writers also re-elected the association's officers, headed by James P. Dawson, of the New York Times as president, and for the first time selected their "slate" of champions and two outstanding challengers in each fistic division. Leading in this group were the heavyweights, with Bob Pastor and Tony Galento, Joe Louis' most recent knockout victims, as most logical challengers for the Brown Bomber's crown.

Dinner Goes With It

The award of the plaque to Conn will be made formally at a dinner in January. The trophy is rectangular bronze on wood, embossed by a likeness of Neil, who was killed during the war in Spain.

Conn, who is 22, has been fighting professionally only since 1935, and has campaigned actively as a light-heavyweight for less than eight months. He won the title from Melio Bettina, of Beacon, N. Y., in Madison Square Garden last July, and defended it successfully against Bettina in Pittsburgh in September and against Gus Lesnevich, of Cliffside Park, N. J., here several days ago.

In their rankings for each division, the boxing writers voted Bettina and Lesnevich as leading challengers for Conn's crown.

Among the middleweights, where a controversy over champions exists, the writers named Ceferino Garcia, recognized in New York State and California, as their titleholder, with Al Hostak, of Seattle, who holds National Boxing Association recognition, voted the leading challenger. Vic Dellicurti, of New York, was second challenger.

against lightweight titleholder Lou Ambers here next Friday, headed the 147-pound ranks, with Pedro Montanez, of Puerto Rico, and Ambers as the top challengers. Chief contenders for Ambers' lightweight crown were selected as Sammy Angott, of Louisville, and Billy Marquart, of Winnipeg, Canada.

Back of Joey Archibald, of Pawtucket, R. I., the champion, in the featherweight ranks were Petey Scalzo, New York, and Simon Chavez, Venezuela, as top contenders.

Among the bantamweights, where Sixto Escobar recently vacated the title, Lou Salica, of New York, was nominated by the writers as champion. Georgie Pace, of Cleveland, recognized several days ago by the National Boxing Association as titleholder, and K. O. Morgan, of Detroit, were selected as challengers.

Little Dado, of the Philippines, was picked as flyweight champion. Enrico Urbanati, of Italy, and Small Montana, of the Philippines, were named challengers.

at home. Tossing out last week's tie with Santa Clara, U. C. L. A.

Ohio State-Michigan (75,000)—Though the return of Forrest Evashevski to his blocking duties has put Michigan back in high, we like the Buckeyes' all-around strength and plunk down for Ohio State.

Iowa-Northwestern (40,000)—Probably because we've picked against them the last two weeks, Nile Minnick and Co. will double-cross us this time. Still, those Hawkeyes should be rolling for fair, and Iowa is the choice.

Harvard-Yale (57,000)—Those Crimson Sophomores know the ins and outs of the Harlow strategy now. Harvard.

Duke-North Carolina State (10,000)—Shouldn't be hard for the Dukes.

Nebraska-Oklahoma (35,000)—The Huskers are improving rapidly, and are the choice to surprise. Nebraska.

Carnegie Tech-Duquesne (30,000)—Cornell's only rival for unbeaten-untied honors in the East, Duquesne should stay that way.

Clemson-Furman (16,000)—Banks McFadden, Shad Bryant and Clemson.

Purdue-Indiana (25,000)—Purdue on superior attacking strength.

Mississippi-Mississippi State (20,000)—As tough as they come. State.

Georgia-Auburn (18,000)—One of Dixie's older rivalries, and it shapes up as a win for Auburn.

Kansas-Missouri (24,000)—Missouri, which proved a week ago that it doesn't need Christman's passes to win.

Texas Christian-Rice (10,000)—T. C. U., which is beginning to rally.

Princeton-Navy (35,000)—The choice is Princeton, beaten only by Cornell.

Florida-Georgia Tech (15,000)—The rambling wrecks of Tech.

Boston College-Kansas State (20,000)—Boston College.

Wisconsin-Minnesota (40,000)—Not too hard for Minnesota.

Chicago-Illinois (5,000)—Chicago won one last week, but not this. Illinois.

St. Mary's Boys Club Boxer Outpoints Jimmy Page at Arena

Jim Page, tow-headed youngster from St. Mary's Boys Club, Alexandria, annexed the District A. A. U. 112-pound novice championship last night, outpointing Jimmy Page, a clubmate, at Turner's Arena.

It was a slow bout. Both boys were too well acquainted with one another and, consequently, overly cautious. Page, however, punched harder and more frequently and won going away.

The bout featured an inter-city program that saw a team from Police Boys Club No. 5 gain a 3-2 edge over a picked Baltimore team.

There were two knockouts. Kenny Swann, cool and calculating Washington lightweight, scored the first, dusting off wild-swinging Charley Williams after 1 minute, 35 seconds of the first round.

Charley Maimone, Galento-like 160-pounder from No. 5, accounted for the second. He flattened Jimmy Ross after 1 minute and 55 seconds of the second round. The bell saved Ross at the count of nine in the first after the District lad dropped him with a hard right.

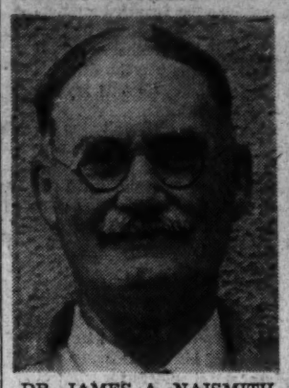
60 POUNDS—Tony and "One Punch" Audwini drew.
85 POUNDS—Marvin Bailey (St. Mary's) decisioned Jack Divver (No. 5).
60 POUNDS—Billy McLane (No. 5) drew with Sonny Magatutu (No. 5).
118 POUNDS—Willie Taff (unattached) decisioned Tony De Toro (No. 4).
112 POUNDS—Gordon Neal (Baltimore) TKO Danny Petro, 55 seconds third round.
118 POUNDS—Reds Vernon (Washington) decisioned Vic Tummillo (Baltimore).
118 POUNDS—Joe Brocato (Baltimore) decisioned Bernie Hardy (Washington).
135 POUNDS—Kenny Swann (No. 5) knocked out Paul Williams, 1:35, first round.
160 POUNDS—Charley Maimone (Washington) knocked out Jimmy Ross (Baltimore), 1:55 of second round.

Naismith, Inventor Of Basketball, Has Heart Attack



DR. JAMES A. NAISMITH

Lawrence, Kans., Nov. 24 (AP).—Dr. James Naismith, 78-year-old inventor of basketball, was critically ill again today. He suffered a heart attack.

The University of Kansas professor emeritus of physical education returned home from a hospital Wednesday night after his recovery from a cerebral hemorrhage.

"He might come out of it again, but it doesn't look so favorable this time," his physician said.

Naismith's pulse was weakening.

Y.M.C.A. Court League Starts

Basketball hostilities at Central Branch of the Y. M. C. A. will be formally launched tomorrow on the 1736 G street court when the eight-team senior league plays its first game. The junior circuit, called the Junior Sunday School League, will not start action until next Sunday.

Teams in the older series include Mount Vernon Methodist, Calvary Methodist, Calvry Baptist, Concordia Lutheran, National City Christian, Ninth Street Christian, West Washington Baptist and Epiphany Episcopal. Marinus DeGast, member of the "Y" staff will be in charge.

Five clubs will operate in the junior league, which will be starting its sixth season. The entries are Calvary Baptist, Mount Vernon Methodist, Rhode Island Avenue Methodist, St. Stephen's and Incarnation Episcopal, United Brethren and Y. M. C. A. United Brethren dominated the loop in its first three seasons, and the "Y" club won the last two years.

Howard Soccer Team in Action

The Bison soccer team of Howard University will clash this afternoon at 1 o'clock, in the university stadium, with the unbeaten team of Far Easterners representing Wheaton College. The Bison team is composed principally of West Indians and Central Americans, and has an enviable record to date, two victories, a tie and a loss.

In the Bison lineup will be Clyde Burnett and Edward Burgess, forwards, from Trinidad, B. W. I., and Bermuda. The Wheaton team is captained by Paul Crief, of Jerusalem, Palestine. Stacy Roberts and Jim Phillips are from Korea, Steve Garrison from India, Robert Moseley from West China and Bruce Linten from Canada.

St. Gabriel's Claims Parochial 120-lb. Title

St. Gabriel's School staked a pretty reasonable bid to the 120-pound Parochial grid championship of Washington yesterday at Gonzaga Field, where it convincingly turned back the last survivor of an informal tournament, Holy Name, by a score of 48-0.

miraculous saves of Goalie Gordon Lee, who was perhaps the Washington team's outstanding star, were never in the running—except in the frequent exchange of blows. Then they appeared to hold their own.

Rough most of the time, the game assumed proportions of a barroom brawl midway of the final 20-minute period, and the players seemed to concentrate as much on swatting each other as on blasting the puck.

Besides Knipfel's beautiful "shiner," which probably has taken on a bright purple-black hue by now, other more than usually serious casualties included:

(1) A slight gash over the right eyebrow of Joe May, Skeeters' wing.

(2) Cut mouth for Jim Gregory, Skeeters' wing.

(3) Several slight heart attacks for members of the working press and radio who were within "fanning" distance of swinging sticks and peppering pucks.

The Eagles' squad will leave by bus for Atlantic City at 11 o'clock this morning. They meet the Sea Gulls on their home rink tonight in a battle to hold second place. Sunday, they move over to New York to meet the Rovers in an afternoon contest.

Then on Tuesday the highlight game of Washington's early home schedule will be played at Riverside, at 8:30 p. m., against the leading Rovers.

Mary Fox Rolls 150 to Lead Ladies' League

Ollie Pacini Sets Two Marks in S.E. Bowling League

Season record for individual game in the fast Independent Ladies Bowling League was shattered by two pins last night at Arcadia Alleys, Mary Fox rolling a neat 150 in behalf of Razzberries team. A new set mark was also hung up when Vivian Nolan, of Gallinger & Huguely, turned in 377.

Though unable to register a high mark for the season, Harrington Tavern team managed for team game, 548, and Galliher & Huguely high set, 1,568.

In the Interstate Commerce Commission League the best performance was credited to Harry West, who went seven pins above the previous season mark for set with 402. He also had high game for the night, 146. Complaints won game and set honors with 568 and 1,648.

QUEEN PIN

Ollie Pacini paced the record-busting in the Southeast Bowling League as two old marks went by the boards. Pacini's set of 429 was high for the season, and it was coupled with Harry Brown's 428 to help Quality Shop to a team set mark of 1,852. Quality took a 2-1 decision from A. B. Price.

In other league clashes George Honey paced Square Deal to the first of four odd-game victories over City Baking after losing the opening tiff; Bacas Brothers beat Dargan; Maryland Market beat Stephanson's and Bantam beat the Red Men.

BETHESDA

Local bowlers took a beating in the exhibition match between White and Koski, of Connecticut, and Bethesda's Jack Perrell and Frank Rieley. The two-man team engagement went to the Connecticut rollers, in town to participate in the Dixie Sweepstakes today, by a margin of 831 to 686. Koski's 164 and 439 were best of the night. The best Perrell could do was a set of 348.

In the singles Rieley earned some measure of honor for the locals with a 410 set to White's 362, though Koski turned in a 380-315 victory over Perrell.

ICE PALACE

Rolling 7 spares and 2 strikes and leaving only a single pin standing, Walter Berthold, of Blue Ribbon, rolled a 176 game to pace his out-of-town rollers to a 150-pin margin in a special exhibition with Ice Palace pinsmen. The final result was 1,949 pins to 1,799 for the local contingent. Berthold's teammate, Bogino, ran a close second for individual honors with a game of 170. Krauss had the best game for the Palace, 157, but best set went to Talbert, with 387.

Wofford Defeated By Stetson, 14-7

Daytona Beach, Fla., Nov. 24 (AP). Stetson's Hatters made two passes count for touchdowns tonight to defeat Wofford College's football eleven, 14-7.

An 18-yard aerial, Golden to Hughes, accounted for Stetson's first touchdown in the opening period and Lanier Smith kicked the extra point.

Getting the ball on the Stetson 49 on a pass interception in the second period, Wofford marched to the 1-yard line where Taggart passed to Young for six points and Hardy's kick provided another to deadlock the socre, 7-7.

Rollins Outclasses Presbyterian, 13-0

Orlando, Fla., Nov. 24 (AP).—The Rollins Tars scored early and late tonight to overcome a stubborn Presbyterian College eleven in an S. L. A. A. game here, 13 to 0.

Shortly after the game opened, the Tars moved to the Presbyterian 6-yard line on a series of lateral passes, plus a 10-yard dash by Justice, and tallied on a lateral from Justice to Bouton. Brankert kicked the extra point.

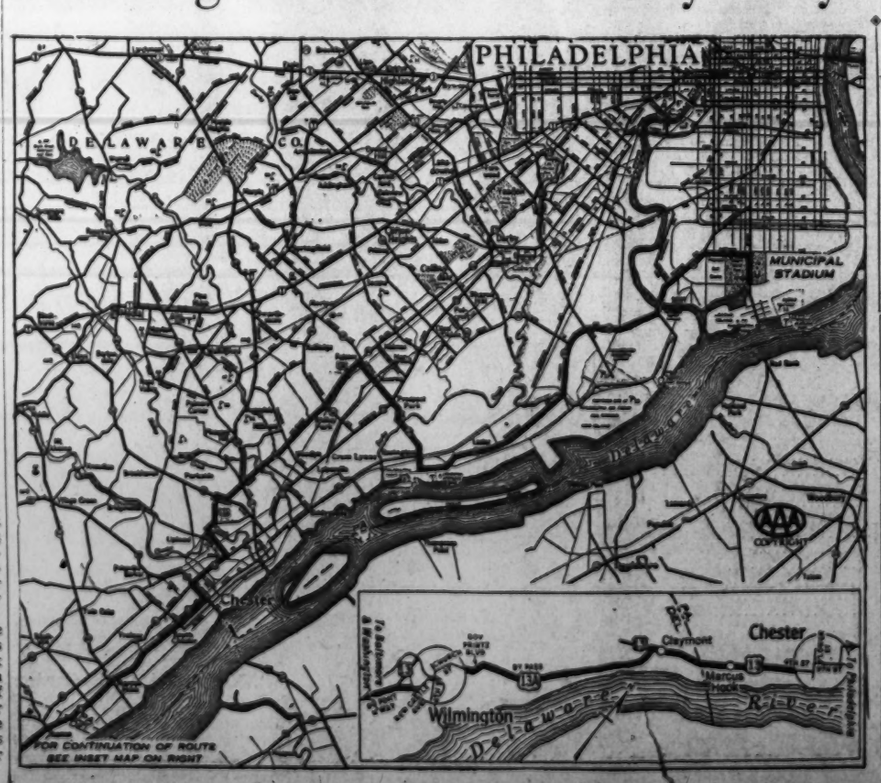
Planning to Motor to Army-Navy Game?



A. A. A.'s Map Designed For Fans Who Plan To See Annual Classic

To save wear and tear on the nerves of motorists driving to Philadelphia December 2 for the Army-Navy football game, the American Automobile Association came to the forefront yesterday with a map designed to get you there with a minimum of traffic difficulties.

"You may well believe the luck which got you the tickets to the game is deserting you as you arrive in the vicinity of Wilmington, Del.," officials said. "Here several crowded highways join yours and the combined traffic winds slowly through city after industrial city all the way to Philadelphia."

The A. A. A.'s alternate route, shown on the accompanying map, should be used only if traffic is as bad as expected, it was said.

From junction of U. S. 13 and U. S. 13A, just south of Wilmington, follow U. S. 13A through Wilmington to junction of U. S. 13 at Claymont, 9.0 miles.

U. S. 13, Claymont to Kerlin street, Chester, 4.1 miles.

*Left on Twenty-second street (becomes State route 520) and continuing on route 520 to Folsom and junction of route 420, 3.9 miles.

Right on route 420 to Essington, left through Essington to junction of route 191 at Eighty-fourth street, 7.0 miles.

Penn Claims Pre-Game Victory —Cornell Must Use 'Old' Jerseys

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Nov. 24.—Pennsylvania claimed a pre-game victory today over Cornell in a friendly battle over the color of the jerseys to be worn in tomorrow's forty-sixth gridiron meeting of the two Ivy League rivals on Franklin Field.

Cornell must discard the "lucky white" jerseys it has worn through an undefeated and untied season in favor of its old familiar red jersey—because Pennsylvania has decided to wear white. Hopeful Penn followers see a psychological victory for Penn in the decision for college football players are as superstitious as other athletics.

Visiting teams have been given the choice of uniform colors until this year when eastern collegiate officials changed the ruling at the request of—Pennsylvania. A mixup on colors in last year's Penn-Lafayette game prompted H. Jamison Swarts, Penn's director of athletics to urge the revision.

While officials were settling the jersey question, Franklin Field was deserted as both teams went through final drills on gridirons far distant from the stadium. Cornell, holding its last workout at home this morning, was scheduled to arrive here tonight while Coach George Munger took the Penn squad to nearby Swarthmore for the night.

Penn's hopes of upsetting the heavily favored Ithacans depends considerably on Quarterback Frank Regan's passing success. He had a lesson in yesterday's pitching of professional star Davey O'Brien for the Philadelphia Eagles against the Pittsburgh Pirates. It was O'Brian's success that gave the Eagles their first league victory.

Maryland Official Confirms Resignation of Coach Dobson

Eppley Blasts All Rumors About Harlow

Director of Athletics Says Harvard Coach Hasn't Been Signed; Board Meets Monday

Official confirmation of the resignation of Frank Dobson as head coach of football at the University of Maryland was given last night by Geary P. (Swede) Eppley, director of athletics.

Eppley denied, however, that Dick Harlow, present head coach of Harvard football, has already been signed to succeed Dobson at a reputed salary of $15,000.

"Frank Dobson has submitted his resignation," Eppley told The Post, "but as yet no action has been taken to accept it. A meeting of the university athletic board has been called for Monday morning and an announcement will be made then."

Blasts "Rumor" Stories

Eppley, declaring that newspaper rumor stories had done nothing at all to help "an unfortunate situation," said:

"I can say officially that Harlow has not been signed to succeed Dobson next year. Where one newspaper got the idea that Harlow has been signed at a yearly salary of $15,000 is beyond me. So far as I know no negotiations have been carried on with Harlow."

Following Maryland's season finale with Syracuse Thursday, Dobson told a Post reporter:

"I know nothing about Harlow coming to Maryland, but I can say there will be a new football coach here next year. In the light of all these rumors which haven't been confirmed or denied by Maryland I don't feel that I could remain here."

Harlow under Contract

The Maryland athletic board which will meet at College Park Monday morning is comprised of Eppley and Dr. L. B. Broughton, dean of the school of arts and sciences; Dr. Ernest Cory, head of entomology; Dr. William B. Kemp, professor of statistics and genetics, and Dr. William Supplee, associate professor of organic chemistry.

Just what nature of business will be discussed by this group Eppley was unable to say last night. It is understood, however, that Dobson's resignation will be accepted and that action will be taken to make a definite statement concerning the identity of the new Maryland coach.

Harlow, whose name has been most often linked with stories of Dobson's successor, has denied repeatedly that he would leave Harvard, pointing out that his contract there does not expire for several years. MUNHALL.

Episcopal Meets Tough Virginia Rival

39th Tangle Finds Alexandrians With Edge on Forestmen

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 24.—One of Virginia's most heated prep school grid rivalries will be renewed here tomorrow afternoon when Episcopal High School's varsity eleven engages the Woodberry Forest School team, of Orange, in their annual contest. The kickoff is scheduled for 2:30.

It will be the thirty-ninth consecutive meeting between the two teams in a rivalry dating back to 1901. Episcopal holds a 19 to 17 edge in the series by virtue of victories in the past two games. Two games have resulted in ties.

A slight favorite in the pregame rating, Episcopal can annex the nonmilitary championship of the State for the fourth consecutive year by either defeating or tieing the Orangemen. The Maroons won from Virginia Episcopal School, of Lynchburg, 10 to 7, in their only appearance against a member of the four-team circuit, while the Woodberry eleven has lost decisions to Virginia Episcopal and St. Christopher's, of Richmond.

In general competition Episcopal has won five games and lost two, remaining undefeated on its home field. Woodberry's season's record is slightly inferior, showing four victories and three defeats.

The Episcopal eleven will be greatly strengthened for the traditional contest by the return of "Squinch" Goodwin, triple-threat halfback, who has been out of the line-up with an injured knee. A younger brother of the University of Virginia's Howard Goodwin, "Squinch" has watched the past three games from the bench, but has been pronounced fit for a starting berth in tomorrow's game.

Jesse Couch, Maroon halfback, who was injured in practice two weeks ago, will not be in the starting line-up, but may see action before the final whistle sounds.

Northeast Wins In Field Hockey

Cleveland, Nov. 24 (AP).—Northeast defeated the Great Lakes Reserves, 3 to 1, today in the National Women's Field Hockey Tournament.

The Northeast Reserves defeated the Southeast Reserves, 4 to 1. The score was 2 to 0 at the half. Virginia Vacca, of Flushing, Long Island, and Louise Stinson, of Mohawk, N. Y., scored two goals apiece for the victors. Mollie Fleet, of Richmond, Va., scored for the Southeast contingent.

Philadelphia's Middle Atlantic team, defending champion, was held to a 2-all tie by a hard-playing Midwest entry. Middle Atlantic, which trounced Southeast, 9 to 0, yesterday, was expected to coast to a win over Midwest.

Good Upset Chance Conceded in Phila. Cage Game Tonight

Tonight in the ballroom of the Broadwood Hotel at 9:15 o'clock the Chris Heurich, jr., sponsored Brewers are to oppose the Philadelphia Sphas in an American Basketball League game.

Tomorrow night the Brewers move to Newark, N. J., where they meet the Newark Hebrews in an exhibition.

Coach Posnack and eight players are to make the trip to Philadelphia this afternoon. The players are Mike Bloom, Jim Brown, Eddie Boyle, Ralph Bennie, Whitey Wilson, Kit Carson, Carroll Shore and Ben Goldfadden.

The Brewers tonight will feature a greatly improved line-up over that which lost seven consecutive games to the Sphas last season and are conceded a fine chance for an upset.

W. & L. Grid Coach Gets New Contract

'Tex' Tilson Signed for 2 More Years; Riley Smith Retained as Assistant for Same Period; Generals Won Three, Lost Four, Tied Two

By the Associated Press

Lexington, Va., Nov. 24.—Washington and Lee University athletic authorities announced today that Warren E. (Tex) Tilson, head football coach since 1933, had been given a two-year contract extending through the 1941 season.

A two-year contract has also been signed with Riley Smith, first assistant to Tilson, who came to W. and L. from the Washington Redskins this year.

Athletic officials announced that action will be taken regarding the other football assistants at a later date.

Tilson's best team was in 1934 when the Generals won the Southern Conference championship. This year's club defeated Sewanee, West Virginia, Virginia Tech, tied Southwestern and lost to Richmond, William and Mary, Virginia and Washington University.

Quantico Team To Meet Balt. Firemen Today

Marines Seek First Victory in 2 Years Over Oldest Rivals

Special Dispatch to The Post

Quantico, Va., Nov. 24.—The entire squad of Quantico Marine gridmen left here this morning on a special bus bound for Baltimore, where they are to clash with the local firemen, their oldest rivals, in a season-closing football game tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

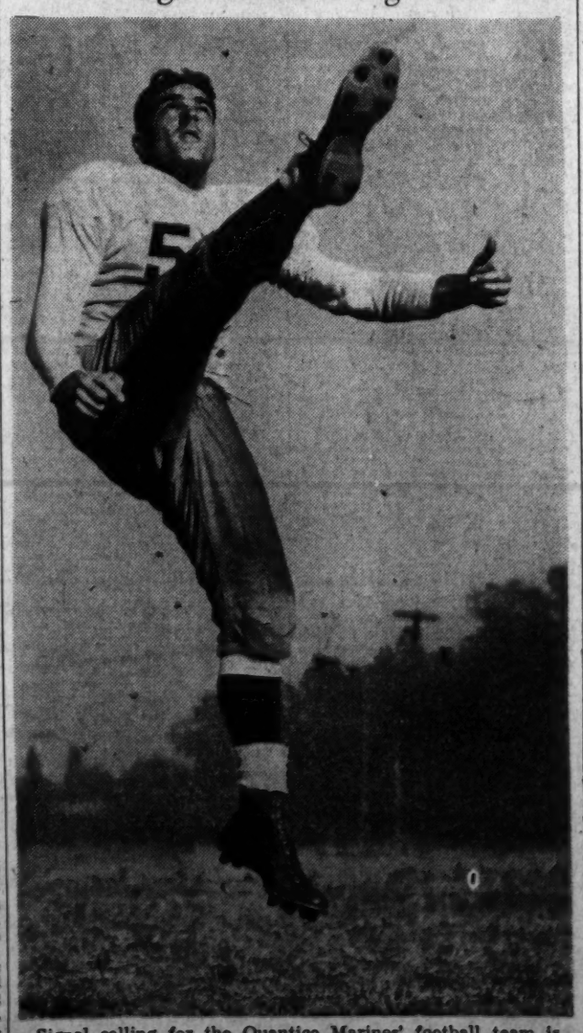
Except for light workouts this afternoon and tomorrow morning, practice for the Leathernecks is over for the 1939 season. They are in excellent condition, and have high hopes of trimming their old foes for the first time in two years.

Better Record

Although the Devil Dog record for this season is somewhat better than that of the Smoke-eaters, Coaches C. E. Emrich and Mark Boswell hesitated in predicting a victory for their aggregation here this morning, because "the Firemen are always at their very best when they stack up against the Marines."

Few changes are expected in the Leathernecks' starting line-up. Jimmy Falzone, Dell Boynton, Al Hora and Everett Aikman have only one rival for backfield honors; he is Johnny Pechulis, fleet second-string tailback who tallied two touchdowns against Washington National Guardsmen here last Sunday. "Tommy" Tomlinson, former regular tackle who has been away on leave during several recent games, may again get a first call in the line. But otherwise "Red" Harper, Al Wrobleski, Milt Rogers, "Tiger" Laws, "Spike" Wieman and Capt. Rudy Morse are pretty certain to hold down their usual jobs.

In Charge of Marauding Marines



Signal calling for the Quantico Marines' football team is taken care of by this 6-footer, Everett Aikman. The former University of Southern California star will be at the helm today when the annual rivalry with Baltimore's Fire Department is renewed in the Oriole City

100,000 Hunters In Wisconsin Hills

Madison, Wis., Nov. 24 (AP).—One hundred thousand hunters—possibly more—were moving into Wisconsin's northwoods today in search of deer and bear, largest of the State's native wild game.

The season on buck and deer and black bear opens tomorrow at 6:30 a. m. Deer may be shot in 30 counties, bear in 21. The season ends December 1. Bag limit is one of each animal.

The United States Biological Survey estimated there were 324,000 deer and 2,000 bears in the State.

Last year 103,721 hunters took 32,855 bucks in seven days.

Notre Dame Underdog in Trojan Game

Irish Aren't Favored For First Time During Season

By the United Press.

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 24.—They thought it couldn't happen here, but tonight a Notre Dame football team—of all people—is the underdog on the eve of its annual struggle with Southern California.

The odds favor the Californians because the records say they should.

The Trojans have come this far unbeaten and once tied. Since they were held to a 7-7 deadlock by Oregon in the opener, they have rolled to five straight triumphs, picking up 131 points along the way and surrendering only seven.

Tarnished Record

Notre Dame's record, on the other hand, is tarnished by a one-point defeat at the hands of Iowa—the only defeat in eight starts. In those eight games, the Irish have scored 89 points against 53 for the opposition. Not a very impressive tabulation for a Notre Dame team.

This year's Notre Dame team lacks the explosive touchdown production of previous Irish elevens. It has done more traveling between the 20-yard lines than a suburban commuter, but the pay-off punch has been lacking.

Plenty of Spirit

For the better part of the season, they have been laying back waiting for the breaks—and cashing in. They can't afford to do any watchful waiting against Californians. They tried that strategy last year and before they knew it, the Trojans themselves had capitalized on the breaks and were out in front, 13-0. That's the way it ended.

Yes, the odds favor Southern California.

But when Notre Dame is a short-ender beware!

There's that certain something they call the "spirit of Notre Dame." You can feel it crystallizing on this prairie campus as the game approaches. They don't call these lads the "fighting Irish" simply because it sounds pretty. And at the kickoff before a full house of 56,000 tomorrow, odds will mean exactly nothing.

$1,000,000,000 Paid By Anglers in U. S. During Year

Sportsmen of the line and rod variety shelled out nearly $1,000,000,000 this year for tackle, bait, gasoline for the old car and other necessary items, the Interior Department reported yesterday.

Expenditures for tackle alone, according to Charles E. Jackson, acting commissioner of fisheries, totaled approximately $35,000,000. Live bait receipts, too, accounted for a good share of the total. Maine, one of several States specializing in that industry, exported 20,000,000 blood and sand worms a month to New York during the fishing season.

At Freeport, Long Island, fishermen spent $1,000,000 during the past season.

Among expenditures by fishermen by States in 1938 were:

Clemson Plays Furman Today Before 17,000

Tigers Hold Edge In Series With Ancient Rivals

By the Associated Press

Greenville, S. C., Nov. 24.—A 43-year-old feud whose outcome from season to season has usually been as unpredictable as the flip of a coin will be renewed here tomorrow when Clemson and Furman clash before an expected crowd of 17,000 in a contest that dips deep into the bright dye of tradition.

More often than not in the long series the favorite has had to bite the dust. The set-up for tomorrow is more or less typical. Clemson is on the threshold of its third consecutive season without defeat in the Southern Conference.

Only One Defeat

Only Tulane, undefeated Southeastern Conference power house, has turned the Tigers back this season and then only by a hairline 7-to-6 count.

Furman, with more to gain than to lose, would like nothing better than to be the team to pull the Tigers down. And particularly since 1927 has Furman been relentlessly the fly in Clemson's ointment.

It was in 1927 that the great Josh Cody-coached Clemson team invaded Greenville the odds-on favorite and returned home smarting under a 28-0 defeat.

The present Clemson coach, Jess Neely, brought his first Tiger team to Greenville in 1931. His was a team sadly lacking first-rate material; Clemson had won only one game that year, and Furman was the favorite by several touchdowns.

But again the unexpected happened. Clemson and Furman battled to a scoreless tie.

Clemson Holds Edge

In late years the competition has been keener. Once, in 1915, the Tigers won 94 to 0; in 1918 they won 67 to 7. But for the last eight years only 63 points have been scored by both teams; 40 of these have been registered by Furman, the underdog on five occasions.

Last year the teams spent a cold, rainy and muddy Thanksgiving fighting it out at Clemson. The game went to the Tigers by a field goal, 10 to 7, but again the underrated Hurricane had extended the Tigers to the limit.

Clemson holds a slight edge since the series began 43 years and 27 games ago. Thirteen games have been won by the Tigers, 10 by the Hurricane, and four ended in ties.

Tomorrow's game will parade two top-tier backs, Banks McFadden, of Clemson, and Capt. Roten Shetley, of Furman. McFadden handles Clemson's punting, passing, signal calling and much of the ball carrying. Shetley is Furman's iron man spinback, passer, broken field ace and line plunger.

It Isn't 'Hot' News But It's One Way Of Winning Title

Harlingen, Tex., Nov. 24 (AP).—Take a deep breath and then wade into this bit of razzle dazzle concerning the football championship of District 36-B, Texas Interscholastic League

Rio Hondo won the lower bracket title and the right to meet Freer, the upper bracket winner, for the district championship.

This gave the title to Lyford, which had won over Edcouch-Elsa. But—

An ineligible player was discovered on the Lyford team, so Lyford forfeited the title to Edcough-Elsa. But—

Army in Long Drill For Navy Game

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 24 (AP).—Faced with an idle week-end, Army's football team went through a long scrimmage against the plebes today in preparation for the finale with Navy.

Coach Bill Wood alternated two elevens from his varsity squad during the lengthy workout.

Carolina Closes Week Of Drills for Virginia

Chapel Hill, N. C., Nov. 24 (AP).—George Stirnweiss and Sweet Lalanne broke loose several times for long runs to feature today's scrimmage of Carolina, closing a week's [illegible] for the Virginia game [illegible] Thursday.

[illegible] also contributed some hard running and blocking and Harry [illegible]kle some effective line plunging. Gates Kimball, Dick White, and Jim Woodson stood out in the offensive, and Saylor and Brantley in the defensive line.

Minnesota Society Holds Wisconsin Party

For the eighth time this season Minnesota football fans will forgather today at the Lafayette Hotel to listen to the play-by-play account of their favorite football players in action.

This time the Gophers' clash with Wisconsin will be the point of the informal party, to which all natives of the two States are invited by the Minnesota Society. The game, to be played in Minneapolis, will start at 2:30 p. m.

Calder, 'Landis of Ice Hockey' Praised by Coach Mackenzie

By Redvers (Red) Mackenzie.

The men who have guided the destinies of ice hockey for the past 20 years have been noted for their far-seeing and sane handling of the sport. They have constantly sought to give the public what it wants and with that end in view they have tinkered and changed the rules only enough to speed up the action, eliminate a number of blasts from the referee's whistle and, in short, to give Gus and Minnie Fan all the thrills and enjoyment possible from the fastest game on earth.

MACKENZIE

Frank Calder, president of the National Professional Hockey League, is the Judge Landis of hockey. He has held this high office for something like 16 years, and his wise counsel and masterful guidance of the major loop has been the outstanding reason why hockey has captured and held the public interest in every city in which it has been played on a serious scale.

30 Years Ago

Let us turn the clock back 30 years and look in at a hockey game in the old Westmount Arena in Montreal. It is probably 15 below so you had better put on the old scarlet underwear, stand in line in the snow while a few hundred people pass the ticket seller before you. It was far from a rare occurrence to see fans stand in line all day long in bitter cold to get a chance at a rush and seat for the evening game. They only played one or perhaps two games per week in those days and the fans were hungry for action whenever a game was played. Rivalry was intense and it is probable that nothing in sports history surpassed the white heat that was worked up by the athletes among the paying customers even in this sub-zero atmosphere. Trainloads of the faithful followed their ice favorites from city to city and large bets were made on the outcome of the games.

"Played 60 Minutes"

If you look out on the ice you would see eight or perhaps nine men warming up for each club. The old timers of that era accuse the present generation of all sorts of things as was and is the custom of old timers. They say, "We played the entire 60 minutes of every game and unless we broke a leg or two that eighth or ninth man never even got on the ice. But you fellows take a rest every three or four minutes and are a bunch of sissies. My rheumatism is a bit bad or I'd go out on the ice right now and show you how I scored the goal that won the Stanley Cup in 1905."

They played seven men on a side—the extra player being called "Rover." He had no set position to play but wandered around backing up scoring attempts and then getting back to help out his defense. The three forwards did not know what it was to backcheck following failure to score on their part but left it to the defense to break up the return attack and hand them the puck again for a return offensive. In this way they received a breather after every scoring raid and consequently it was not a remarkable feat to go through the whole game without relief. Rest periods know that they automatically become defenders the moment they lose possession of the puck and they must "backcheck" with vigor to overtake their flying "check" (the men they are covering). As a rule they are changed every few minutes, not because they are dead on their feet but because a fresh man keeps the pace hot and the customers satisfied.

Welch, Miller May Miss Randolph-Macon Game With Injuries

By the Associated Press

Hampden-Sydney, Va., Nov. 24.—The Hampden-Sydney Tigers, favored with clear weather today, held an intensive final practice session for their home-coming game against Randolph-Macon here tomorrow.

Tiger hopes are being placed on a smooth-running backfield combination, including Ed Null, Syd Walden, Elmo Berry and Henry Lannagan. The game is expected to attract a crowd of about 3,000.

All former Hampden-Sydney captains have been invited to sit on the bench with the team.

Coach Frank Summers, of Randolph-Macon said his squad showed two casualties, Cocaptain Everett Welch, a senior back, and Robey Miller, a guard, who has been ill of influenza. Miller, however, reported for practice Thursday.

Prairie Dog Wins Cherrystone Handicap

Woodsaw Second to Son Of Bull Dog

7,000 See Deep End Take Show Money; Winner Pays $7.70; Clocked in 1:13 3-5

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 24.—Mrs. Emil Denemark's Prairie Dog, a son of Bull Dog and Fairy Eyes, turned in a courageous race to win for the favorite players in a crowd of 7,000 here today. The 5-year-old gelding marched postward in a group of six class C sprinters to compete in the Cherrystone Handicap and came to the imaginary wire a length and a half in advance of the nearest opposition. B. P. Woodson's Woodsaw was second by half a length over the Paragon Stable's Deep End.

The betting customers played the field backwards and forwards and it was not until the closing minutes of the wagering that Prairie Dog was installed a slight choice. He brought his backers a return of $7.70 for the usual deuce investment. Ideal racing weather prevailed and Prairie Dog was clocked in 1:13-3-5 for the 6 furlongs over a fast track.

In a previous meeting, Deep End had defeated Prairie Dog by a head. Both picked up eight pounds. Irish Setter, well played, took the early lead closely pressed by Deep End. At the far turn, Deep End forged to the front and Prairie Dog moved around on the outside.

Irish Setter then tired and dropped back. Deep End fought along with Prairie Dog for a sixteenth of a mile and then he too faltered. The Denemark gelding, ridden by Jockey Glen Smith then took command and was never threatened. Woodsaw, off slowly, did close with a rush to be second but he could not seriously menace the winner. Deep End held on long enough to be third.

Selections at Bowie

Dear Al:

One of the small army of "stoopers," those poor fellows who wander around with their eyes glued on the ground looking for discarded tickets that may have value, spotted a daily double ticket "9 and 2." This was Thanksgiving Day. At last he had made a lucky strike. The No. 9 horse, Clyde Tolson, already had won the first race. If he could get Clapair, No... 2, home in the second race he would have plenty of reason to celebrate. He went up in the stands clutching the ticket and determined to root Clapair home. In the stretch, Clapair was well back in the field. Jockey Meade began driving the horse and, with a last-second rush, Clapair got up to win. Our hero went down under the stands, got in line and noticed that other persons held tickets of another color. He slid out of the line sadly, tore up his ticket and wandered off staring at the ground. He had the right numbers but last Wednesday's ticket. One of his buddies told me the story. No news from Dunlad, the big horse. He spent a quiet night and is on his feed. A canvass of horsemen this morning showed that 60 per cent of those interviewed were of the opinion J. Yancey Christmas' Rough Pass, third of the Dixiana's Sirocco and Faymar in the Walden at Pimlico, would reverse the decision in the seventeenth running of the $7,500 Endurance Handicap, today's mile and 70 yards feature. The Endurance, which was inaugurated in 1922, has been won by Oui Oui, Tree Top, Sumpter, High Star, Dolan, Sortie, Soul of Honor, Snowflake, Sweep All, Mad Frump, Projectile, Chickstraw, Commonwealth, Bright Plumage, Betty's Buddy and Legal Light in the order named. The Endurance wasn't run last year, due to the blizzard which curtailed the last few days of racing here. Pari-Mutuel Manager J. Donald Hay gave out the information that $547,000 was handled by his crew Thursday. With two Saturdays yet to come, General Manager Joseph A. Farrell and his associates should enjoy a highly profitable meeting. Trainer G. Diggs has arranged to ship G. G. Waugh, jr.'s Caidon, Early Broom, Connamista, Giggle Lee and Jewell Song on Monday to Charles Town, W. Va., for the 12 days' sport beginning December 4.

BILL.

First race—Gayova failed to get up when competing against better grade fillies last start but should be equal to scoring over the mediocre field she meets today. Summer Stock indicates by late races that she is ready for her best and appears to be the speediest contention. Turkey Hash broke badly last start; might improve.

Second race—The Runner races well over this strip and his recent fifth behind better horses in New York should have him or edge for a winning effort despite his high weight. Papalinda displayed speed earlier in the week and may be the one to beat. Pete Wendling is in clever hands and must be rated a chance.

Third race—Court Dance needed his last race when beaten by shifty handicap performers. Racing with a claiming tag today, he appears well placed. Clingendasl was a beaten favorite last start and may be capable of showing an improved effort. Clocks has speed and is dangerous at fit.

Fourth race—Zostera surprised to whip a classy field of platers this week but his time was good and being similarly placed today figures to win back. Sargazo has been consistent when placed with this sort and will be the one to beat. Sketchbook is not outclassed and has a good money chance.

Fifth race—True Call established herself as one of the best fillies of the Pimlico meeting and being favorably treated in the weights, she receives high figure at this distance. Sirocco whipped Rough Pass when they met at Pimlico in the Walden Handicap and appears slightly superior to the latter in this race.

Sixth race—Alexandrine has shown a liking for the Bowie strip and receives high figure despite indifferent efforts in late races. Dorothy Pomp stopped badly in her race Thanksgiving Day but meets greatly inferior company today and must be considered. Cerisse III is handled by Hirsch Jacobs and is capable of upsetting all the dope.

Seventh race—Charming Herod placed second to Careful Miss after winning at this distance earlier in the meeting. He should carry his weight to victory. Count Tetrarch won his last and should be a speedy contender. Camasido was poorly ridden last out and with the right handling should show improvement.

Best bet—Court Dance.

Postlude

Friday Morning Music Club presents Henry Field, pianist, and Emily Coville, soprano (Myrtle Alcorn, accompanist), in Barker Hall. Program: Piano compositions by Beethoven, Brahms, Debussy, Moszkovski and Rakhmaninoff; manuscript songs by Francis Frank, Elizabeth Lambert Hebb and Mary Ware Goldman.

Henry Field, a violinist recently domiciled in Washington, appeared as guest artist on the program presented yesterday by the Friday Morning Music Club. His technical equipment is soundly based and proficient, and his dynamics are well controlled. Judgment on his tonal coloring and finesse in interpretation must be suspended until one has heard him use an instrument of more sonorous and responsive quality.

His selections were Beethoven's early sonata in A-flat major, the E-flat major rhapsody of Brahms, Debussy's "Claire de Lune," Moszkovski's "La Jongleuse" and Rakhmaninoff's preludes in G-sharp Minor and B-flat major. As an extra number he played the scherzo from Brahm's F-minor sonata.

Emily Coville, capably accompanied by Myrtle Alcorn, introduced five unpublished songs by three members of the club. Of these novelties the most satisfactory, by virtue of its successful evocation of a poetic mood, was "Greeting," by Francis Frank. This is a charming lyric sensitively written and apparently influenced by Dupare, although "influence" in this case is used only to indicate the style of treatment.

One was reminded of Robert Franz by Elizabeth Lambert Hebb's "The Carolyn Lullaby" and "The Message," songs with clear melodic profiles and effective modulations. In "You Are No More" and "Adventure," by Mary Ware Goldman, the handling of both voice and piano was in the urgent manner of Richard Strauss.

Rabbi S. H. Metz Addresses Forum

Democracy is a way of life deriving its idealism from the Christian-Hebraic tradition, Rabbi Solomon H. Metz declared last night at an open forum meeting at Adas Israel Synagogue. The future of democracy is not secure if it remains only a political conception, he said, pointing out that Hitler got his start "in a democratic Second Reich."

Other speakers were Louis Ottenburg, who spoke in behalf of the Community Chest, and Joell Wolfson and Irving Levitas, who spoke on "religious loyalties."

U. S. Building League Reports Rapid Growth

New Accounts Opened By 584,000 Persons In First 9 Months

By Thomas M. Cahill.

News of the steady growth of the building and loan industry comes to the District of Columbia Building and Loan League from the national organization. New accounts in savings, building and loan associations were opened by 584,000 people in the first nine months of 1939, the United States Savings and Loan League estimates on the basis of returns from a large sample of associations.

This means that there were 22,000 more new people investing funds directly for home financing than during the same period of 1938. Every month except two saw more new accounts opened this year than last, according to George W. West, president of the National league.

At the same time, he explained, there was larger volume of additional investment by those already having share accounts than there was during the first three quarters of 1938. Even in 1937, when there was notable recovery comparable to the present upturn, the investments in thrift and home financing institutions did not show the same vigor as they do now and have shown all year, it is said.

"A traditional investment for 109 years with the people of small income, the savings, building and loan associations have widened their influence in the past two decades to include persons of every walk of life, from the unskilled laborer to the affluent corporation official or professional man," says Mr. West. "But the size of the average account in an association is $100 less this year than last because of the increase in small accounts which reflects the greater number of persons using these thrift institutions. Today's average account is $824.34."

Turnover Normal

Mr. West states that the turnover of accounts was at a normal pace during the first three quarters this year. There was a 25 per cent increase in the number of accounts closed, as compared with the same period of last year, but this was largely the result of individuals using funds they had built up by monthly savings in the institutions as cash down payments on homes in a year which has seen more interest in new home building and buying than any other of the 1930's.

Mr. West states that besides providing millions of dollars in this way for the initial payment on the home the savings and loan institutions have provided 31 per cent of all the funds borrowed on home mortgage security during the first nine months of the year. Volume of mortgages recorded by these institutions is estimated at $868,000,000 in the Federal Home Loan Bank Board index. Thus, he explains, the 9,000 savings and loan associations are continuing their century-old role as institutions which make home ownership financially possible in America.

Rothaermel a Visitor

William M. Rothaermel, vice president and director of agencies of Continental American Life Insurance Co. of Wilmington, Del., visited the DeForce agency of the company this week. Mr. Rothaermel is well known throughout the United States as an insurance executive and agency director. He reports that production for the company for October was two and one-half times as good as September.

Production for the year is ahead of last year and the DeForce agency of Washington is ahead for the year as compared with 1938, and for the month of October as compared with the previous October. J. Harry Covington, a prominent Washington attorney of the firm of Covington, Burling, Rublee, Acheson & Shorb Mr. Rothaermel states, is one of the two original directors still with the company. James A. DeForce qualified for the Founders Club as fourth man in the first 32 leading producers of the company for the month.

Saul Co.; second, Byron Mathews, National Savings & Trust Co.; third, Lloyd Carey, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; fourth, Charles Penn, Morris Plan Bank. Doubles: first, John Riordon and Byron Mathews of the National Savings & Trust Co.; second, J. Earle McGeary, W. B. Hibbs & Co., and Kenneth Birgfeld, American Security & Trust Co.

Cotton Futures Except October Close Higher

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Cotton futures abruptly snapped out of an early losing streak today when heavy foreign selling let up and contracts suddenly became scarce. Old type contracts advanced 1 to 2 points, the day's best levels, while new October lost 3.

In the last hour the market appeared in an oversold condition, brokers said, and lively bidding by spot interests, plus short covering and buying by co-operatives, found little for sale.

Figures indicating shipments of American cotton to foreign buyers were running well ahead of last year surprised observers who had recently expressed concern over freight space shortages.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil futures held their ground today in the face of reductions in shortening and salad oil prices announced by refiners. Final prices were 1 to 2 points higher. Trade and refiner interests helped prop the list.

Sales totaled 103 contracts: December, 6.58 bid; January, 6.48 bid; March, 6.32 bid; May, 6.13 bid; July, 6.04.

Crude oil sold in the valley at 4¼ cents. While the southeast valley and Texas quoted 5¼-5½ at the close.

Wheat Prices Close Lower in Nervous Day

Chicago, Nov. 24 (AP).—Wheat prices started upward, then tumbled a cent a bushel or more but finally rallied in a nervous trade today.

Selling that came after midsession was associated mostly with weakness of securities following the reference of President Roosevelt to consideration being given taxes for defense funds. Buying that righted the market and permitted prices to close only fractionally lower than Wednesday was stimulated largely by reduced estimates of the Argentine wheat crop now being harvested and the United States winter crop for 1940.

Wheat closed ⅛ to ½ cent below the previous close, December, 88¼; May, 85¾@85⅞. Corn ⅛ off to ⅛ up, December, 50¼@51⅜; May, 52⅝@52¼. Oats, ⅛ off to ⅜ higher. Rye unchanged to ⅛ higher, and lard unchanged to 7 higher.

Cost of Living Declines After September Rise

NewYork, Nov. 24.—The cost of living of wage earners in the United States declined slightly between September 15 and October 15, in contrast to a rise during the preceding month, according to the regular monthly survey of the division of industrial economics of the conference board. Declines in the prices of foods and sundries accounted for this drop, but all other items of the wage earner's budget rose, most of them seasonally.

The 5 per cent rise in the price of food which occurred as a result of speculative buying between August 15 and September 15 was checked by a drop of 1.2 per cent from September to October, but food prices remainded higher than the levels of the other months of this year.

Wage earners' living costs as a whole were also higher than in any other month of the year except September. They were 0.2 per cent below those of October, 1938, 15.4 per cent below those of October, 1929, and 19.4 per cent above the low point of 1933. Food prices, compared with the same periods were slightly lower than those of October, 1938, 27.5 per cent below October, 1929, and 30.4 per cent higher than the 1933 low point.

Rents, clothing and coal prices also advanced during the period

The purchasing value of the dollar was 116.8 cents in October as compared with 116.4 cents in September and 100 cents in 1923.

Capital Transit Maintains Rise In Net Income

$79,395 October Profit Is More Than Double Same Month in 1938

The Capital Transit Co. in its monthly statement yesterday to the Public Utilities Commission reported for October a net income of $79,395.94 which compares with $38,192.42 for October a year ago, an increase of 107.9 per cent. For the first ten months of this year net income was $485,131.00 against $193,124.22 for the same period last year, a gain of 151.2 per cent.

Operating revenues last month totaled $1,084,561.09 and $992,735.67 for October 1938, a gain of 7.2 per cent. For the 10-month period operating revenue amounted to $9,929,766.54 compared with $9,328,085.19 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of 6.5 per cent.

Operating expenses of $713,738.29 last month compared with $700,877.70 a year ago, an increase of 1.8 per cent, and this item for the first ten months totaled $6,855,317.48 compared with $8,758,801.23 in the same period last year, a gain of 1.4 per cent.

Gross income for October was $140,525.11 against $98,499.54 for the corresponding month last year, an increase of 42.7 per cent. For the 10-month period gross income was $1,097,327.01 which compares with $793,650.98 for the same period in 1938, an increase of 38.3 per cent.

Pepco October Net Shows 4.12% Drop

The Potomac Electric Power Co. yesterday reported to the Public Utilities Commission a net income of $344,738.13 for October which compares with $359,544.66 for the same month last year, a decrease of 4.12 per cent. For the first ten months of this year net income was $3,498,456.20 against $3,582,837.90 for the corresponding period a year ago, a decline of 2.35 per cent.

Operating revenues last month were $1,354,931.23 and $1,267,710.74 for October 1938, an increase of 6.88 per cent. For the 10-month period operating revenues totaled $13,112,940.47 against $12,477,582.82 for the same period in 1938, a gain of 5.10 per cent.

Net operating revenue for the month was $444,231.34 which compares with $458,785.75 last year, a decrease of 3.17 per cent. For the period ended October 31 net operating revenue amounted to $4,504,989.52 which compares with $4,535,455.27 for the same period a year ago, a decrease of .87 per cent.

Gross income in the month was $444,237.45 and $459,009.99 in October a year ago, a decrease of 3.22 per cent, and for the ten months this year gross income amounted to $4,505,960.44 as against $4,537,904.08 for the corresponding period last year, a decrease of .70 per cent.

Farm Cash Income Is 6.335 Billion In Ten Months

American farmers received an estimated cash income of $6,335,000,000 from marketings and Government subsidies during the first 10 months of this year.

Reporting this yesterday, the Agriculture Department said income from the same sources during the corresponding period last year was reported at $6,193,000,000.

The October income was put at $894,000,000, compared with $836,000,000 in the same month last year.

The farm income from marketings alone during the first 10 months of the year was estimated at $5,695,000,000, or 2 per cent smaller than that for the same months last year.

The income from grains, fruits, vegetables and meat animals was larger, but these increases were more than offset by smaller returns from cotton and cottonseed, tobacco, dairy products and poultry products.

Nation Opposes Federal Rail Rule, Survey Reports

Out of every 1,000 Americans, some 775 are opposed to Federal operation of the country's railroads, according to a poll completed yesterday by Pathfinder, news weekly published here.

Conducted on a country-wide basis, the poll asked the question: "Do you think the Government should run the railroads?" In percentages, the answers disclosed 77.5 voting "no" and 22.5 voting "yes."

Many of those interviewed volunteered the information that they were against Government operation because they felt such a step would lead directly to outright ownership. Although political affiliations had little to do with this attitude, Republicans were found to be least in favor of Government operation, while those who voted Democratic in 1936 were less positive in their objections.

"It is noteworthy," Pathfinder declared, "that the majority of those questioned were conversant with the economic importance of railroads in the United States."

President's Defense Tax Hint Hits Prices; Business Rise Continues but Market Lags; Proposed Borrowing Shades U. S. Bonds

New York, Nov. 24.—Losses of 1 to more than 3 points were numerous among the speculative leaders in the stock market today and were coupled with weakness in the United States Government bond market and softness in the leading commodities. Just what branch of financial or business affairs was improved by moving Thanksgiving Day up a week has not yet been determined.

In the stock market the list held fairly well until the President gave his press interview in which he disclosed that special consideration is being given the idea of a special tax to finance defense and then prices melted away rather rapidly. The decline as measured by the composite average was 0.39 point, which is sharp in comparison with the recent irregular fluctuations, and trading increased on the decline. The total turnover was 817,481 shares.

There have been many theories advanced to explain the unwillingness of the stock market to reflect the improvement in business which started at about the time of the outbreak of the European war. One such explanation has been the probability of an increase in taxation and the inability of the present Administration to avoid a deficit in its ordinary operations.

Deflation Looms

The President's words today gave substance to this fear and contributed to the belief that the expectation of heavier taxation, with its deflationary effects, is one of the reasons why the stock market finds it impossible to move ahead with business. True, the Chief Executive indicated that a tax for defense would be a special tax, but experience has shown that special taxes soon become regular taxes and are rarely if ever repealed. The defense bill estimated for the next year will amount to about $5,500,000 a day, and like all taxes it must come out of industry and out of the pocketbooks of the people. Incidentally, it is about 25 per cent of what Great Britain is spending while at war.

True, the President said he wished to have the question discussed by the public in order to reach a decision as to whether the additional sum for defense is to be borrowed, thus avoiding an immediate increase in taxation, or whether we are to pay as we go. The latter plan is far the sounder of the two, as the public debt is rapidly approaching the limit and if we use our borrowing power while at peace there will be little we can do if we are forced to go to war. In other words, a problem confronts us because of the careless spending of the past few years; spending which was veiled by terming each problem an emergency. Now with the real emergency a distinct possibility, industry is faced with the choice of additional piling up of the Federal debt or another deflationary tax. Little wonder that the stock market refuses to reflect improved business.

Nonproductive Spending

Many who have opposed the Administration's wastefulness in the last few years may hesitate to attack the enlarged defense appropriations on the ground that to do so would be unpatriotic. From the standpoint of economics, the money spent for useless leaf-raking and projects which can never return their costs to the taxpayers, are nonproductive, the same as expenditures for armament, and if we are faced with a situation where we must buy defense, the pity is that we have wasted our national credit in the last few years. Our unwillingness to protest in this crisis, in effect provides the Administration with an opportunity for more nonproductive pump priming. But those who spend the money should make certain there is no boondoggling where the Nation's defense is concerned.

The market today gave evidence of the knowledge that taxes mean deflation and the heavy selling started when the President gave out his interview. Aviations were under pressure, Curtiss being the most active stock, falling a good fraction, followed by North American Aviation, down 1¾. Steel lost 2¾ and Bethlehem 2¾. Most of the heavy industries were heavily sold.

Bond Prices Lower

Listed bonds moved lower today, in a rather nervous market. Losses were fractional in best-grade investment issues, while some of the speculative obligations showed larger recessions. The adverse trend of the stock section was reflected in a similar, but more modest, general down trend of speculative bonds. Foreign dollar securities were fairly active and irregular. Trading amounted to $8,100,000.

United States Treasury securities were marked down on a precautionary basis, owing to the imminence of the $500,000,000 borrowing operation. To some degree the clearance of portfolios also resulted from preparations for taking up whatever new securities are offered. Recessions ranged from 1-32 to ¼ point in the long bonds, while only smallest fractional losses appeared in short-dated issues.

Highest-rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds showed more fractional recessions than gains. A long list of speculative rails receded fractionally, and some bonds were off 1 to 2 points. The local tractions ran into realization selling, but B. M. T. bonds snapped back and closed with gains. Communications bonds followed the main trend downward, as did holding company convertibles and similar bonds.

Belgian bonds were soft in the foreign department, owing to the fresh troubles of the small neutrals, but the Scandinavians held their ground. German bonds were irregular, while Canadian and Australian issues declined. Most of the Latin-American default bonds drifted lower, but there were a few exceptions.

Germany Sells Chile Large Railway Order

Chile was said by a Commerce Department official yesterday to be expecting Germany to deliver a large order of railroad equipment, despite the newly announced British blockade on exports from Germany. Mervin L. Bohan, commercial attache at Santiago, based his belief of Chile's expectations of getting the railroad equipment on the fact that Chile now has published a September 30 decree facilitating the purchase.

Chile ordered 11 electric trains, five Diesel electric trains, three electric locomotives and additional equipment from Germany before the war started.

Banks Cut Down Federal Holdings

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Banks again reduced last week their holdings of Federal securities which they bought in September to stem the price decline which followed the outbreak of war in Europe.

The Federal Reserve Board said the 12 banks reduced holdings of Government securities by $56,000,000 in the week ended November 22, cutting their joint investments to $2,593,000,000, compared with $2,826,000,000 on September 20. Lendable excess reserves of banks were said by the board to be approximately the same as the $3,170,000,000 total of the preceding week.

Am. Smelting Votes $1 Special; $3 for the Year

New York, Nov. 24.—American Smelting & Refining Co. directors authorized a special dividend of $1 a share on common stock, payable December 28 to holders of record December 4. This will bring total 1939 payments to $3 a share against $2.25 in 1936

R. C. A. 20 Cents

Directors of Radio Corporation of America declared a dividend of 20 cents a common share, payable January 16 to holders of record December 3. The last previous dividend was of the same amount, paid last December 14.

Cluett, Peabody, $2

Directors of Cluett, Peabody & Co., Inc., voted a final year-end dividend of $2 a common share, payable December 23 to holders of record December 12. The disbursement lifts payments for 1939 to $2.75 a common share, contrasted with 85 cents a common share in 1938.

Fairbanks, Morse $1 Special

Fairbanks, Morse & Co. announced a special dividend of $1 a common share, payable December 27 to holders of record December 8. The latest payment will make aggregate disbursements $1.50 a common share for the year 1939, compared with 25 cents a common share in 1938.

Am. Cyanamid, Stock Special

American Cyanamid Co. directors today announced a special stock dividend on the class "A" and "B" common stock, payable in shares of 5 per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock, second series, $10 par, in the ratio of one share of preferred on each ten shares of common. The dividend is payable December 15 to holders of record December 1. The board also announced the regular quarterly cash dividend of 15 cents a share on the class "A" and "B" common, payable January 2 to holders of record December 15.

Bethlehem Head Calls Rise Natural

Grace Wants Peace and The Kind of Business That Goes With Peace

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 24.—Eugene G. Grace, president of the Bethlehem Steel Corp., gave employes today a glimpse of the big producer going full blast and called the business upturn mainly a "natural recovery" after the long depression.

"Shelves were bare of reserve supplies, equipment in many fields was in need of repair, installations of needed facilities had been postponed.

"In other words, our whole industrial structure was operating on a hand-to-mouth and minimum requirement basis."

The war, he added, brought a "quick recognition of the fact that the amount of domestic goods on hand was limited," causing the September-October rush of buying to avoid a shortage.

The veteran operating chief of the Nation's No. 1 "war baby," as Bethlehem Steel is labelled in Wall Street, again avowed his preference for peace.

"We want peace and the kind of business that goes with peace," he said. "Efforts and money invested for destructive purposes are in the end a complete loss."

Pension Rate Restored

He announced, as one of the benefits of business revival, restoration of a 15 per cent cut in pension payments made in 1932. More than 1,700 on the pension rolls will get the increase, it was said.

Asking employes to be "unswerving in our vigilance to prevent any subversive influence from turning us aside from the task in hand," Grace hinted Bethlehem was against general boosting of steel prices, which has been discussed for some time in steel circles.

Most of Bethlehem's output, he asserted, was going into consumption and did not "represent important demand from the warring countries."

Bethlehem's pay rolls, it was disclosed, are carrying 20,000 more employes than a year ago, with pay rolls in the three months ended September 30 $10,000,000 above the comparable 1938 figure.

Average pay, it was noted, was $7.03 a day, with hourly average rates up to 91.2 cents compared with 69.2 in 1929 and 22 cents in 1914.

Brokers' Loans Rise $31,000,000 in Week

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $494,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $31,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $56,000,000.

Week's Financing 74% for New Capital

New York, Nov. 24 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities during the week ended yesterday, totaling $29,962,883, were the second largest since the beginning of the war, Poor's Publishing Co. reported today.

Although 28 per cent below the previous week, new offerings were more than double any other week since the start of the conflict put a damper on new financing. About 74 per cent of the total represented a need for new money rather than the refunding of old debts.

Retail Buying Climbs to Peak For This Year

By the Associated Press

New York, Nov. 24.—Retail buying activity reached a new high for the year this week with the help of favorable weather and Thanksgiving preparations, Dun & Bradstreet said today in its weekly survey.

The year-to-year advance in trade for the country as a whole was estimated at 8 to 13 per cent.

While store sales were broad in character, the agency said, purchases of formal wear were heavy and men's clothing stores reported their best week this year.

"Clearances of fall merchandise were advertised in some cities," the review stated, "but merchants showed a tendency to defer sales until a later than usual date because of the strong position of stocks. Holiday purchasing was reported to be starting earlier and in heavier volume than last year. Expanded facilities for credit buying were said to be playing an important role in the more active turnover of expensive lines."

On the wholesale front the review found trading "still characterized mainly by replacement orders covering current requirements" with most of the new business coming from stores in industrial sections.

Treasury to Study New Large-Scale Financing Plan

Secretary Morgenthau invited Federal Reserve officials yesterday to confer with him Monday on proposed large scale financing by the Treasury.

Morgenthau has indicated that before January 1 the Treasury may borrow $500,000,000 of cash and issue new securities to refund $1,378,364,200 of 1⅝ per cent Treasury notes due March 15.

Another imminent financing operation is the sale of $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 of Tennessee Valley Authority notes to enable TVA to repay the Treasury for money advanced recently to purchase Tennessee properties of the Commonwealth & Southern Utilities System.

The conference will include Chairman Marriner S. Eccles and other members of the executive committee of the Federal Reserve Board's open market committee.

Ord Preston Appointed To A. B. A. Committee

Ord Preston, president, Union Trust Co., and president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, has been appointed to the co-operating committee of the American Bankers Association in connection with the association's regional banking conference of 13 Eastern and Southern States, to be held in Richmond, Va., December 7-8, it was announced yesterday by Robert M. Hanes, A. B. A. president, and president of the Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.

Burd W. Payne Funeral Set For Today

Veteran Civic Leader Survived by Wife, 3 Children

Services for Burd W. Payne, 78, who died Wednesday at Sibley Memorial Hospital, will be held at 11 a. m. today at Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be private.

A resident of Washington since 1901, Mr. Payne was a veteran civic leader and was known as an authority on District legislation and an ardent champion of local suffrage. He served as chairman of the public utilities committee in the Federation of Businessmen's Associations, as a delegate from the Columbia Heights Businessmen's Association. He also was chairman of the legislative committee and several special committees of the Columbia Heights Association.

Mr. Payne was born in Schuylkill County, Pa., and was educated in public schools there. Before coming to Washington he was secretary to former Representative George R. Patterson, of Pennsylvania, and took an interest in State politics. He was sent to Panama in 1906 as a Government auditor, remaining until 1911, when he returned to Washington as an auditor in the General Accounting Office.

He was active in affairs of the Central Labor Union here and was a member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants and of the District of Columbia Suffrage Association.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary L. Payne; a daughter, Miss Mildred W. Payne, and two sons, A. W. Payne, of Washington, and L. W. Payne, of Raleigh, N. C.

A. G. Malone Dies; Custodian for Maritime Board

Arthur G. Malone, 51, custodian of the laid-up fleet division of the United States Maritime Commission, died yesterday in Georgetown University Hospital after a six-day illness.

A native of Person County, N. C., Mr. Malone was educated at Trinity College, now Duke University, at Durham, N. C. He served as director of the Norfolk district, and the Gulf division at New Orleans under the Shipping Board before coming here five years ago. He lived here at the Tudor Hall apartments.

Mr. Malone was a member of Ruth Lodge, Masonic Order, in Norfolk, and was a Shriner.

Surviving besides his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Malone, are a son, Gordon Malone, cadet at West Point; two daughters, Miss Eloise Malone, and Miss Helen Jane Malone, student at Brenau College, Gainesville, Ga.; two brothers, Lieut. Comdr. R. W. Malone, U. S. Navy Dental Corps, of Arlington, and Dr. S. E. Malone, of Goldsboro, N. C.; two sisters, Mrs. Amos Sherrard, of Goldsboro, and Mrs. C. B. Hall, of Hillsboro, N. C., and his mother, Mrs. Susan Malone. Funeral services will be held tomorrow in Goldsboro.

Funeral Services To Be Held Today For Calvin Davis

Funeral services for Calvin Crawford Davis, 66, examiner of accounts at the Federal Trade Commission, will be held at 2 p. m. today at his home, 1213 Euclid street northwest, with burial in Fort Lincoln Cemetery. Mr. Davis died Thursday of a heart attack.

A native of Pylesville, Md., Mr. Davis came to Washington in 1914 from Panama, where he had spent six years during the construction of the canal. He was attched to the paymaster section of the General Accounting Office. Previously he taught in the country schools of Maryland and worked at the Baltimore postoffice.

While in Washington Mr. Davis was employed at the Bureau of Corporation, now under the Federal Trade Commission but formerly in the Department of Commerce. He was a member of Adherence Lodge, No. 88, of Masons in Baltimore, and of the Modern Woodmen of the World.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Irene D. Davis, and six children, John D., Martha W., Calvin C., jr., Mary W., George A. and Margaret I. Davis, all of this city.

James T. Conner Funeral Will Be Held Today

Funeral services for James T. Conner, 81, who died Wednesday at his home, 511 Fourth street southeast, will be held today at 2 p. m. at First Methodist Church. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery. Mr. Conner retired from the Washington Terminal Co. in 1927 after 45 years' service. He was a member of the First Methodist Church, of Harmony Lodge of Masons, the Railroad Square Club and Mount Vernon Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Margaret J. Conner; seven daughters, Mrs. Laura E. Delano, Mrs. Emma L. Adams, Mrs. Margaret N. Moran, Mrs. Gertrude M. Castell, Mrs. Anna C. Howard, Mrs. Mary E. Deck and Mrs. Ruth M. Oliff; two sons, James M. and Wilver Conner, and 12 grandchildren.

Funeral Today For Mrs. Payne, 84

Funeral services for Mrs. Lucy Mae Payne, 84, who died Thursday at her Clifton, Va., home, will be conducted at 2:30 p. m. today in the Clifton Presbyterian Church. Services will be officiated by the Rev. Carl Maxwell, pastor of the Fairfax Methodist Church, assisted by the Rev. W. H. De Chant, of the Clifton Church. Burial will be in the Clifton Cemetery.

Mrs. Payne, who lived in Clifton more than 40 years, is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Edward Whaley, of Silver Spring, Md., and Miss Mollie Cross, of Clifton, and one brother, James Cross, of Tulsa, Okla.

Post Carriers Meet Their Football Hero at Party

Post Carriers Honor Guests At Banquet

Andy Farkas Hands Praise to All, to 32 Redskin Tickets

Upward of 600 young men who bring world events to Washington's doorsteps were guests of honor last night at a party given by The Post.

Massed in Gordon Junior High School auditorium, The Post's city carriers put in an evening watching singing and dancing acts and listening to a speech by one of the idols of young Washington, Redskin Andy Farkas. From the football star 32 of them received choice seats to the Redskin-Detroit Lions football game for winning circulation contests in their districts.

"Pleasure before business" was the collective sentiment of the evening as the 600 cheered to the echo the singing of pretty Irene Manvell, the soft shoe rhythm dance of equally comely Irene Baker, the jitterbug antics and roller skating acts of other performers from the Lotus Restaurant.

The entertainment over, Farkas handed the prize-winning tickets to the carriers who filed to the stage as the grid star called their names and announced their records.

"That's really carrying the old apple (in other words, The Post)," Farkas congratulated the students. And to the others who had not won tickets, he urged to keep trying. He told of warming the bench in a couple of all-star games by way of encouragement. "Stay in there and keep plugging" he exhorted them.

Capt. Brady Dies At Walter Reed

Capt. Lynn E. Brady, recently ordered transferred from Fort Leavenworth, Kans., to the Twelfth Infantry, Arlington Cantonment, died yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital.

Capt. Brady was graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1923. He was promoted to a captaincy in 1935. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Katherine S. Brady, and his mother, Mrs. Sarah G. Brady.

Noisy Fire Siren Draws Complaints Of Churchgoers

Special Dispatch to The Post

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 24.—The people of the West End of Hagerstown will decide whether they want the fire siren, dubbed "Ferdinand the Bull," on top of the Western Enterprise Fire Hall after "Big Six" goes back into service in the new city hall.

Following complaints from congregations of four churches within a radius of three blocks of the fire hall, protesting that church services have been interrupted, Mayor Richard H. Sweeney announced that a house to house canvass will be made to ascertain the sentiment for retaining the siren, which has been in service since the fire bell was dismantled in the old city hall.

Turkey Evades Ax But Not Shotgun

Emmitsburg, Md., Nov. 24 (AP).—A rebellious turkey gave a pilgrim touch to Charles F. Troxell's Thanksgiving.

He and his brother, Henry, both won turkeys from the Emmitsburg Fire Co.

Henry, occupying an apartment, gave his bird to Charles for safekeeping, but the turkey flew away at execution time.

Charles took down his shotgun and tramped after it to St. Joseph's College dam. One shot sufficed.

The Housing Authority of New Orleans will receive sealed bids for the construction and completion of Iberville Street Housing Project La. 1-5 comprising 75 Dwelling Buildings, containing 896 Dwelling Units consisting of 3,655 rooms, 1 Administration-Service Building, 2 Yard Stations, 4 Gas Meter-House and Local Authority Job Office (the work includes demolition of all existing buildings and clearing of the site, construction and completion of all structures, site development, lawns and planting work, heating, plumbing, electric work and everything required on Drawings, Specifications, and Contract Documents) until 2 p. m. C. S. T. ON THE TWENTY-NINTH DAY OF DECEMBER, 1939, at 226 Carondelet street, New Orleans, La., and immediately thereafter all bids will be publicly opened and read aloud, in the Commission Council Chamber of the City Hall, New Orleans, La.

The successful bidder will be required to furnish satisfactory performance bond.

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the minimum wage rates as set forth in the specifications must be paid on this project.

Proposed forms of contract documents, including drawings and specifications, are on file at the office of the Housing Authority of New Orleans for each set of documents so obtained. The amount of the deposit will be refunded to each person who returns the plans and documents in good condition within ten days after the opening of bids.

Plans and specifications, proposal forms or bid forms, will be issued only to "General Contractors" licensed by the Louisiana State Licensing Board for "General Contractors," or to an authorized representative of a licensed contractor, and in no event will proposal forms or bid forms be issued later than 48 hours prior to the hour and date set for receiving proposals or bids.

It will be necessary for the bidder to show evidence of license before a proposal form or bid form is issued, in accordance with Act 397 of the Regular Session of 1938 of the Legislature of Louisiana. The rules and regulations of the Louisiana State Licensing Board for "General Contractors" will apply.

The Housing Authority of New Orleans reserves the right to reject any one or more of all bids and to waive any informalities in bidding.

A certified check or bank draft payable to the Housing Authority of New Orleans, U. S. Government Bonds, or a satisfactory bid bond executed by the bidder and a surety company, in an amount equal to 2½ per cent of the bid shall be submitted with each bid.

No bid shall be withdrawn for a period of thirty (30) days subsequent to the opening of bids without the consent of the Housing Authority of New Orleans.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

E. M. D. S., jr., tells us that he saved his three no-trump contract by putting into practice a play he saw described in this column.

He says:

"I cannot help writing you this morning and expressing my gratitude to you for a hand you had in your column a short time ago. I cannot remember it in detail, but its purpose was to illustrate that it is sometimes wise in playing no-trump to lead your weak suit and thereby trick your opponents into thinking you have strength in that suit.

"A hand such as that arose last night in a rubber bridge game and if it hadn't been for your showing me that little trick, I should never have made the bid.

"I was sitting East. I admit my no-trump bids, vulnerable, were a little weak, but the cards and the luck had been running our way.

"I took the opening heart lead in my hand with the queen and cashed the ace and king of hearts and entered dummy with the king of diamonds and cashed the remaining two heart tricks.

"North discarded three clubs and a spade: I discarded a spade and a club and South discarded a diamond I cashed the ace of diamonds in the dummy and then remembering the trick play, I led the five of spades. North ducked and I played the nine forcing South to take with the queen. South was completely fooled and made the conservative exit with his remaining diamond which North took with his queen and returned a club, thereby allowing me to cash the ace of clubs and the lack of diamonds for three no-trump."

Fireplace Decoration

A coal grate makes a grand fireplace container for big white flowers. Set a water holder of glass or metal in it for the blossoms and it will do wonders to cool off the effect of a mantel in summer.

with Slocum

One of the brightest little nuggets in WJSV's schedule is a half-hour plunge into the mustache cup era which is made every Saturday at 7:30, when the "Gay Nineties Revue" is unreeled.

An old song writer named Joe Howard is the master of cremonies. Joe has written hundreds of songs, all more or less concerned with the fate of young ladies in gilded cages, or the resistance eradicating effect of "June" and "Moon." Joe brings the authentic beer garden note to the program by introducing the performers in a voice so strident it is almost unbelievable. Joe also sings, and there is no noticebale improvement in his voice but the orchestra helps.

Tonight the "Revue" is being headlined by a super-special production of that little gem "On the Old Fall River Line." That is the song which includes the classic lines "Where I fell for Susie's line of talk and Susie fell for mine." Beatrice Kay sings it, as well as Anna Held's old favorite, "It's Delightful to Be Married." Younger listeners will remember Luise Rainer and this number when she played the tear-sodden Anna Held in the movie "The Great Ziegfeld."

Howard's solo is "Honeymoon" and he'll lead the audience in "I'm a Yankee Doodle Dandy." Some of the other numbers on tap include "The Italian Street Song," "Love Me and the World Is Mine," "So Long, Mary," "Harriagan" and good old "Sweet Rosie O'Grady." So you can see it's no program for jitterbugs.

The football bugs will be able to follow today's big game, Southern California and Notre Dame, over WJSV with the talented Ted Husing calling the plays . . . it starts at 2:45 . . . Harry McTigue will be on hand at 6:15 with the scores of all the games from coast to coast . . . "Gang Busters" will tell the story of the capture of Eleanor Jarman, who was known roughly as "The Blonde Tigress" . . . 8:00 o'clock is the time for this.

Chapter 63

FOR A WHILE Clifford people talked on about the campaign, proud of editorials in the New York Times, The Washington Post and the Christian Science Monitor which were clipped and pinned up in the postoffice along with the printed notices posted there by the executors of estates to be settled. In the face of such praise, so few people spoke with anything but ostensible satisfaction of the result of the vote that it came to be a communal joke to say that there surely must ha' been a miscount election day, so many more were for Dr. Foote than the board of civil authority reported. The laughter over this, in which everyone joined, since no one really knew how anyone else had voted, carried off a good deal of the excitement, and a good deal of what was left found another outlet in the emotion over an astonishing, a horrifying rumor that the railroad was on the verge of bankruptcy and dissolution—the old railroad whose dirty, stuffy coaches they had all hated, whose ingeniously inconvenient schedule had outraged everyone who had to travel—but whose hoarse hoot, echoing hollowly in the concave valley, had been a time signal almost as taken for granted as the rising and setting of the sun:—"Why, for heck's sake, how'd we get along without the railroad?" "Well, maybe 'twunt fold up." "In Ashley they're sayin' that it's just one set of Wall Street fellers pushin' another set around." "All the same if it was to shut down—my gosh! the woolen mills'd have to shut down too."

People stopped talking about the recent election and turned their thoughts dubiously to the difficult future.

Timothy was left to do what he could with his victory, left not to dreamm inaction with the slim, honorably broken, poetic sword of defeat in his hand but with the heavy earth-stained spade of enforced effort. A formidably extensive stretch of ground was to be turned over. His back ached at the sight of it. All to be done in the bare mouth left before the academy opened, and all to be done together, kept in the air at one time like a juggler's balls.

THE MOST unfamiliar of these balls was the hasty organization of the new bus service for the more distant students. Yet Timothy had unexpected help on that. He had thought that Eli would do no more than to get the old busses in running shape, but he found that Eli's flame of interest in the project carried him far beyond greasing differentials. Timothy took him along on his first trips to the outlying hamlets and isolated farms, to the offices of the local town clerk, to the farms or workshops or houses of the selectmen and school directors where, notebook in hand, he jotted down the necessary information about young people recently out of the eighth grade. He had thought that after that preliminary survey he would also need somehow to find the time to look up these potential students one by one. But, to his relief, Eli snatched most of that work from him. Eli careered about all day long, day after day, in Timothy's Ford, a sandwich in one pocket and a doughnut in the other. Eli went to see the families of possible students, with plenty of time for the leisurely approach to the subject which is the Vermont folkway device for judging the value of a man's personality before he begins to expound his ideas.

He was a great success. He was authentically one of them, poor and plain. He used their own speech because he knew no other. Far from being under any suspicion of leaning down from a social height to help them, his father's drunkenness and his discouraged mother's slatternly housekeeping made him socially somewhat inferior to them, so that if any leaning was involved they had the agreeable sensation of being the ones to do it. He wore clothes that looked human to them. He was ablaze with a simple faith in "education" which ran straight with the grain of their traditions, with a gratitude for what Timothy and the academy had done for him, justified by their standards.

WHEN HE RAN into ignorant or reactionary select men who grudgingly hung back from "loading up the town with a whole lot of tuition fees to pay," he "spoke up" to them—passionately, naively eloquent about the academy as Timothy could never have been; he knew just what talking-points to use which they, as Vermonters, as Americans, brought up in the religion of education, would be ashamed openly to resist. In every one of these tall, rusty-haired, bashful, rustic boys and girls, only a little younger than he, he saw himself—poor, overlooked, forgotten, excluded from the civilization around him. He fought for their chance as he had for his own—and he also did not for one instant forget that he was fighting for his own immediate future which depended on success in this propaganda.

He was irresistible. By the opening day of the academy, his busses were full; one of them had to make two trips. There were 73 new freshmen at the academy, and a new Eli living in the gangling, narrow-shouldered body of the old one.

While Eli was doing this with daily conferences with the principal, Timothy, with the three trustees and what teachers he could call back, was clawing together a hastily arranged curriculum and budget, interviewing extra teachers, supervising the cleaning and whitewashing and furnishing of the long-empty third story of the academy building.

It was in these trustees' meetings that he began with Mr. Randall that earnest effort which he made with everyone who had been on the other side, to get himself, by humility and friendliness, forgiven for the offense of having been right and having been successful.

DURING THE CAMPAIGN, Timothy had often supplemented Mr. Dewey's defense of freedom by taking for his own another obvious aspect of the matter—the loss to everybody in a human group when anybody in it is excluded from the opportunity for normal growth. It was scarcely a new idea, he had thought, to him or to anyone else. Feeling it to be a basic principle, he had faithfully repeated it in one form and another, over and over. Yet, when Eli, who had so narrowly escaped exclusion from health and growth, came running, beside himself in selfless exultation, to cry out the news of victory, Timothy's heart—not his mind—swept as by a warm, life-giving, melting emotional conversion, had lifted the shout, "Why, it's true!" The instant after, laughing, boisterously exclaiming in the revulsion of feeling over Mr. Dewey's absurd firecrackers, he could not have told what the truth was that had struck him like a revelation.

But whether or not his mind could hold it steadily, the new belief was set deep in the center of his life. Like a puissant magnet it drew out from everything he did and saw new proofs of its validity. Eli, himself, was the most obvious proof. If there had not been the thin crack in the almost shut door of opportunity through which Eli had with such despairing effort forced himself, it was plain that he would have been just such another tobacco-chewing, valueless and disheartened drunkard as his father. Every time Timothy talked to the Eli rushing masterfully to push that door open for others he thought of the loss to the academy, to everyone, if Eli had found it bolted when he first threw his weight against it.

And Mr. Randall's case, less evident at first glance, was even more convincing, when he began to understand it. Timothy had been insisting all summer that the thwarted development of any individual is a loss to the whole community. He had said that repeatedly, abstractly, at arm's length. Now with his first decent gesture of civility toward the minority trustee, the literal good sense of that principle moved in to where he spent his daily life. For he discovered that Mr. Dewey (and he, following Mr. Dewey's lead) by persisting in a harsh mistake of judgment had for 15 years flung overboard much of the potential usefulness of the board of trustees. He, Timothy, had been looking wildly abroad for possible help for the academy and found it not. Yet it had been there, at each meeting of the trustees, shut away by difficulties imposed on one of their members, needless hindrances, in which he had acquiesced as witlessly as Mr. Wheaton had acquiesced in the Ku Klux Klan ideas he had found in the air around him.

THE WAY in which Mr. Dewey and he had prevented Mr. Randall from giving the service to the academy which they would have been overjoyed to have him render, was not even new to him. It was all too familiar. He recognized it as a mistake commonly made by Clifford People, by all people living in a static community, a mistake more stultifying than any other to those young people subjected to it—far more undermining than active unkindness. He had many times thought it so fatal that it undid all the other manifold advantages for youth of country life. Yet as stupidly as any Clifford old woman, he had fallen into the idiotic failure to perceive that human beings change and grow. For more than 30 years Mr. Dewey, against all evidence, had contemptuously dismissed Charles Randall's maturing character as being inherently the same at 25, at 30, at 40, at 50, as that of the timid sissified boy Mr. Dewey had disliked so heartily at 17, clinging to his widowed mother, one of the wilted and self-pitying women particularly repellent to Mr. Dewey. It had not occurred to him that the Rev. Mr. Randall, respected by the members of a large church in a city, must be different person from the feeble shrinking Charlie of his boyhood days. Mr. Dewey had not seen this obvious fact partly because it never occurred to him to look at it, but partly also because the Rev. Mr. Randall, although he had slowly acquired many admirable traits of character, had not developed either self-assertion or assurance, of which Mr. Dewey had a notable plenty. Hence, in the presence of the towering and to him formidable older man, Mr. Randall reverted helplessly to being timid and shrinking, just as Mr. Dewey expected him to be, just as he had been when he was a boy and Sherwin Dewey a powerful man in his prime. This baleful action and reaction of personalities had been before Timothy's eyes, painfully visible, all the years of his life in Clifford. Why had it taken a shock that had almost torn his Clifford life in two to make him see it here, so close to him?

Turning now open and attentive eyes on Mr. Randall, Timothy perceived that the mild clergyman, with his nervous mannerisms of hitching one shoulder deprecatingly toward his ear at the beginning of every sentence and repeating the word at the end, was, as a matter of fact, quite as full of good will toward the academy as Mr. Dewey. He had been knocked down, it was true, by the battering-ram of Mr. Wheaton's million. He would always be knocked down by any battering-ram. That was the basis of Mr. Dewey's scorn. But, Timothy reflected for the first time, there are many situations in life where a man's ability to resist battering-rams is rather beside the mark. In fact, the trustees had back of them 15 quiet years when Mr. Dewey's hamstringing contempt for a quality in Mr. Randall, not then in question, had shut the academy out from much that the clergyman would have been glad to do.

BEGINNING NOW in sincere remorse to try to make amends, Timothy found that Mr. Randall, with an unassuming magnanimity of which he and Mr. Dewey would have been incapable, was quite ready to forgive a defeat inflicted on him, and having no vanity to lime him first in resentment, responded almost pathetically to Timothy's overtures. Encouraged by Timothy's respect, he began to hold his ground when Mr. Dewey opposed him (as Mr. Dewey always did at first) and to insist on presenting his ideas, some of them excellent, again and again till he had cleared up the hasty misconception of them to which Mr. Dewey was prone.

"Say, do you know Charlie Randall's not the fool I took him for—not quite," commented Mr. Dewey charitably to Timothy one day.

"Ah?" commented Timothy.

With a disarming pleasure in this long-delayed recognition, Mr. Randall blossomed out into resourcefulness, which brought Timothy help he had not dreamed of having. Like Timothy, Dr. Foote and Mr. Dewey, he had no extra money of his own, but he had a resource which they had not—the lovable and successful clergyman's circle of faithful parishioners. One of them, an experienced elderly banker, took over the responsibility for the safe investment of the academy's small endowment, and at the beginning of the second term sent a grandson as student to the academy. A cross old lady of means, devoted to her gentle pastor, consulted him about her middle-aged spinster niece, who because of flagging health could no longer keep up the pace of a New York office. "Now, Mr. Randall, don't tell me that it's my duty to have her come to live with me. I won't listen to you if you do. I've always said I'd die before I had a 'companion,' and that's what she'd be."

"I told ther," reported Mr. Randall, as with a demure smile he passed the incident on to Timothy, "that the principal of an old academy in Vermont of which I am a trustee greatly needed—um-m-m—" he cleared his throat and hitched his shoulder deprecatingly—"a secretary but that the—ah—budget could not be stretched to pay one. Not even for the—um-m-m—small salary that would be quite enough for living in the pleasant old town — pleasant old town—where she would be accepted as a member of the community—of the community—so pleasantly occupied that she would—um-m-m—quite forget that she had any—um-m-m—relatives—ha, ha, ha—relatives!"

Like magic, Timothy found himself, dazzled by the speed and accuracy of a competent stenographer, dictating in an hour what would have taken him a day of hard work on the typewriter. The relief from drudgery was incalculable. "Why, Mr. Randall, I really can't tell you what a help it is to me!" he exclaimed in his sincerest gratitude, and was abashed to see the elderly clergyman flush in pleasure.

Dr. J. I. Vance, Presbyterian Leader, Dies

Former Moderator And Alexandria Pastor Was 78

By the Associated Press

Blowing Rock, N. C., Nov. 24.—Dr. James Isaac Vance, 78, former moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, died at his home here today.

Dr. Vance was moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States in 1917. He served as chairman of the church's foreign mission executive committee. At the close of the World War he became chairman of Protestant relief in Europe.

He resigned in 1936 the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church of Nashville, Tenn., after serving in that capacity for 32 years. In 1886, Dr. Vance was ordained a minister and accepted the pastorate of the Wytheville, (Va.), Presbyterian Church. The next year he went to Alexandria, Va., and then to Norfolk, Va., filling three-year pastorates at each place.

The year of his ordination, Dr. Vance married Miss Mamie Stiles Currell, of York, S. C. They were the parents of six children.

Exhaust Gas Kills Man, Dog In Garage

The victim, Raymond C. McGee, 47, of 4310 Tenth street northeast, was discovered slumped in the front seat of his automobile by Harry T. Burton, 114 Adams street northeast, a customer. The dog was found in a small anteroom.

Burton told police the car motor was still running and that the overhead, sliding doors were partly open. Both doors on the car and the hood were open and tools were found around the machine. Police said McGee apparently was installing a heater when stricken.

The police dog, Jerry, apparently had tried to get out of the anteroom. Cans and equipment were strewn over the floor and claw marks were visible on the door.

McGee was last seen at his home Thursday night, having spent Thanksgiving with his wife and their three children, Robert M., 16; Elizabeth, 15, and Mary, 12.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald certified that the death was accidental.

Two of America's finest mills and an outstanding maker contributed to this sale of better quality shirts. Before a single stitch was made we gave definite, rigid specifications for the workmanship and styling. We wanted a shirt that has everything . . . and these have! The 2x2 all pima yarn, gleaming white broadcloths are so fine in texture that they feel and look like silk. And an unusual selection of new stripings. Every shirt is Sanforized shrunk with not over 1% residual shrinkage. If any shirt ever shrinks below its indicated size, we'll replace it with a new shirt. Lay away some for Christmas Gifts.
